Concierge Lawyering

like concierge medicine, is a rapidly growing segment of the professional services industry. In short, concierge lawyering involves a relationship between a client and a lawyer in which the client pays an annual fee or monthly retainer to have a personal lawyer advise and consult the client on a variety of both legal and non-legal matters alike. In exchange for the retainer, a concierge lawyer provides enhanced representation and counseling to the client and stands “on-call” for the client to serve the client’s needs.

“A concierge lawyer is a trusted advisor who helps clients make informed business, personal, financial and legal decisions, without the client having to be concerned about being billed by the minute or hour,” says Roman M. Whittaker of the Palm Desert based law firm ANDERHOLTWHITTAKERLLP. “Clients often forego legal advice because they are making decisions on the fly and can’t wait for, or otherwise decide they don’t need or can’t afford a full-blown legal opinion.” The firm’s concierge approach to law emphasizes prompt, personal attention to its clients’ varying needs at various times, such that the “billable hour” is taken out of the equation.

ANDERHOLTWHITTAKERLLP offers concierge legal services for several levels of engagement to meet the needs and demands of their clients, from providing critical guidance on business and real estate transactions to estate and property management and estate and succession planning.

For a free consultation, please don’t hesitate to contact Roman M. Whittaker of Anderholt Whittaker LLP to better understand what it means to have your own personal concierge lawyer.

Publisher's Notes

By Timothy J. Pade • pade@desertgolfandtennis.com

We are pleased to feature local desert resident Mark Woodforde and his doubles partner, Todd Woodbridge, aka the "Woodies," on our cover. Both received the Philippe Chatrier Award, highest honor of the International Tennis Federation (ITF), presented at the 2014 ITF World Champions Dinner on June 3. The award, named for the former player and ITF president, was introduced in 1996 and is awarded each year for outstanding contributions to tennis. Woodforde and Woodbridge become the first doubles team to receive the award, joining fellow Australian recipients Rod Laver, Margaret Court and Neale Fraser. Past U.S. winners include Martina Navratilova, John McEnroe, Billie Jean King and Chris Evert.

The Woodies formed one of the greatest doubles combinations in the history of tennis. Together they won 11 Grand Slam titles and five straight Wimbledon trophies. They also won Olympic gold in Atlanta in 1996 and silver in Sydney in 2000. Woodforde retired in 2000 with 67 doubles titles, 61 with Woodbridge. The only one of his 12 doubles majors that he didn't win with Woodbridge was his first — the 1989 U.S. Open, which he won with John McEnroe.

Woodforde's left-handed baseline play with Woodbridge's quick reflexes at the net led them to their induction in the Australian Tennis Hall of Fame in 2010.

Accepting the Philippe Chatrier Award, Woodforde, who called it an unexpected honor, said, "I'm moved so deeply that Todd and I will be joining such grand champions and following in the footsteps of the other Aussies to receive this accolade."

Woodforde is a resident of Mission Hills Country Club in Rancho Mirage, California. He continues to coach and is also still involved in broadcasting. Learn more about this tennis great starting on pg. 12.

We would be remiss if we didn't mention the latest on golf in the desert in this issue, most notably the lack of interest by corporations in the sponsorship of the former Kraft Nabisco Championship. Word currently is that the LPGA and IMG Media will split the expense for the 2015 event if they are not able to secure a new title sponsor. Many thought that Kia Motors might step in; however, the company's sponsorship of the Kia Classic at Aviara Golf Club in Carlsbad, California, will stay in place. There is still hope that the LPGA will find a sponsor to keep this event at Mission Hills Country Club for a long time to come.

Additionally, many desert residents and golfers are upset by major changes to Tour events in the Coachella Valley. As tournaments opt out of celeb-am formats, there's a question as to whether Tour professionals are a big enough draw on their own. Lacking the glitz, glamor and entertainment value supplied by celebrities, for example, is the $30,000 price tag for participating in the Humana Challenge too high?

Only time will tell if these events are shooting themselves into oblivion. We all hope the celebs and the entertainment come back!

High Honor for a Living Legend

Since retiring, tennis doubles legend and Rancho Mirage resident Mark Woodforde has served the industry as a commentator, coach and tournament director. In honor of his continuous commitment to the sport, the International Tennis Federation recently presented him the Philippe Chatrier Award.

Todd Woodbridge and Mark Woodforde

Every now and then a special occasion arises in a person's life, leading him or her to pause momentarily, reflect on past achievements and reap the rewards of years of hard work.

For 17-time Grand Slam champion Mark Woodforde, one half of "The Woodies," arguably the greatest doubles partnership of all time, three occasions stand out in particular: the days in which he was inducted into the International Tennis Hall of Fame, the Sport Australia Hall of Fame and the Australian Tennis Hall of Fame.

But his most recent recognition — the Philippe Chatrier Award, renowned as the International Tennis Federation's highest honor — is held in the same regard as his Hall of Fame inductions.

"When I was notified about the honor, it blew me off my feet," says Woodforde. "To be recognized for my results on the tennis court, as well as my services to the game, led me to stop and think, 'You're kidding me, right?'"

The 48-year-old Woodforde, along with his longstanding doubles partner, Todd Woodbridge, received the award on Tuesday, June 3 at the ITF World Champions Dinner, held at Paris's Pavillon d'Armenonville, in the midst of the 2014 French Open.

"The Woodies" became the first doubles team in history to be acknowledged as Philippe Chatrier Award recipients. They also joined Rod Laver, Margaret Court and Neale Fraser as the only other Australians honored with the award, named after the former president of the International Tennis Federation and presented every year since 1996.

"I have been to a number of World Champions Dinners in the past and watched as the Philippe Chatrier Award was handed out to some of tennis's greatest players," Woodforde continues. "Not ever did I think we would be honored like that someday."

Although Woodforde and Woodbridge may have been surprised by the honor, no one else within the tennis world was. After all, the partners captured 11 Grand Slam men's doubles titles, 61 tournament victories and an Olympic gold medal in 1996, all while compiling a 508-137 career record. Winners of all four Grand Slam titles, "The Woodies" remain the only men's partnership in the Open era to win five consecutive Wimbledon championships.

But the Philippe Chatrier Award is not only presented to tennis professionals based on their career accolades alone; it also celebrates long-term, dedicated service to the sport on and off the tennis court.

Since retiring in 2000, Woodforde has worked for Australia's Channel 9, Fox Sports Australia, and BBC Radio 5 live as a commentator, sharing his knowledge and insight at each of the Grand Slam tournaments. He has also served as the co-tournament director of the South Australian Open and has established the World Tennis Challenge, a tennis exhibition held in Adelaide, Australia, which attracts former and current tennis professionals.

Woodbridge and Woodforde 1996 Japan Open

In addition, he has coached tennis professionals, from Novak Djokovic, ranked world No. 1 since winning at Wimbledon by the Association of Tennis Professionals, to Marinko Matosevic, Australia's second-highest ranked tennis player. His leadership skills have also been utilized in team settings, while serving as the coach of Australia's Fed Cup team and captain of Australia's Junior Davis Cup team.

"Each of these roles allows me to remain active in tennis, while also having enough free time to be at home with my wife and children," says Woodforde. "I love what I'm doing."

Woodforde with Wife Erin and Daughters Elyse and Madelein

Woodbridge and Woodforde_1998 Davis Cup

A 24-year resident of Rancho Mirage, California, and a member of Mission Hills Country Club, Woodforde was first introduced to the Palm Desert area after participating in the Indian Wells Masters tennis tournament in the late 1980s. He realized that he needed a home base in the United States and decided to purchase a condo at Mission Hills a few months after he captured the 1989 U.S. Open men's doubles championship with his former partner, John McEnroe.

"I was mesmerized by the weather, country clubs and location near Los Angeles," Woodforde says. "Not to mention, it was a hotbed for tennis players as Chris Evert, Martina Navratilova, and Pete Sampras were members. I was especially hooked when I learned Rod Laver lived nearby."

When he is not broadcasting or coaching, he can often be found at Mission Hills' water park playing with his children, or frequenting some of his favorite Rancho Mirage restaurants.

"The River provides plenty of dining and entertainment options, including movies, which my family and I enjoy," Woodforde says. "I'll try anything, really, thanks to traveling the world. No Da Te is my favorite Japanese restaurant—hands down—while Johannes Restaurant offers the best schnitzel outside of Austria and Germany."

Woodbridge and Woodforde 2000 Wimbledon

Although he treasures every moment he spends with his family in Rancho Mirage, he doesn't expect to retire from the tennis industry anytime soon. In fact, he intends to maintain his current schedule.

"I love travelling to commentate at all four Grand Slams, to coach Tour players and to mentor the Junior Davis Cup team," he says. "My passion for the game has led me to remain involved in the game today — as a commentator, tournament director and so forth. That passion will likely never subside."

Kraft-Nabisco Championship Ends

By Matt McKay

A story of world economics and an LPGA Major

No matter what happens from this point with the tournament that was the Kraft-Nabisco Championship, it is clear that the first, long, glorious chapter to that story has been written—and the page turned. Kraft Nabisco's run as sponsor of the LPGA Major ended with the final putt of the 2014 tournament.

From the days of the 1972 Colgate-Dinah Shore Winner's Circle offering an unheard of $110,000 first-place check, sales and marketing were actually calling the shots in terms of sponsorship. Then and for many years a major producer of home-based products had a huge stake in the tournament. In the early days, the Colgate-Palmolive sponsorship was not only about getting the company's message through to women across the country, but also about making those women feel like it was behind them. In this case, it was backing a major women's professional golf tournament in such a way that it would evolve into a major championship.

Dinah Shore was a big part of the process in the early years. A bona-fide Hollywood star whose marketing value had already been proven, Shore was close to being universally well known and well liked. While the golf bug didn't bite Shore until she was in her early 50s, her passion for the game of golf, her marketability and the desert scene laid the foundation for the successful marketing mix in the early 1970s.

The Women's liberation movement, which bloomed in the mid-60s, was well established. Women were generally on the move in society, claiming long-latent rights. They were asserting themselves professionally and were perceived as being more equal than ever in life partnerships.

They'd always called the shots at the grocery store, but now they seemingly had more input than ever in other family aspects. Women felt socially empowered enough to ramp up their participation in what had always been a man's sport. That movement, combined with Shore's star power, desert glamor, Colgate-Palmolive's financial backing and desire to reach this new, empowered generation of women, created the ideal environment for the tournament to flourish.

As the tournament evolved, so did its format and relationship to the sponsors. When Colgate-Palmolive moved off the sponsor's marquee after the 1981 tournament, Nabisco quickly stepped in with renewed enthusiasm, an increased purse and lavish vendor galas. It also perpetuated the relationship between the tournament and companies that provided products that reached the consumer through grocery stores.

For nearly 20 years, through name changes (including dropping Shore's name from the title in 2000), ownership changes and even hostile takeovers, Nabisco stuck with the tournament. In 2000, the last major change of the tournament's original form

came when Philip Morris bought Nabisco and combined it with its Kraft Foods division, paving the way for the long relationship with Nabisco and grocers to continue. From the tournament's beginning in 1972, its main marketing mission was to get sponsor products on grocery store shelves. And, back in the day, there were many, many grocery outlets to consider.

In addition to putting on a first-class major golf tournament, Kraft Nabisco's mission, and Nabisco's before that, and Colgate-Palmolive's before that was to get those grocers to Rancho Mirage every spring, while many of their stores were covered with snow, and properly wine and dine them in the swanky Southern California desert. Pro-Ams, unlimited access to product samples and hobnobbing with the competitors and Hollywood stars during nightly parties won over many an independent grocer, who left each year convinced that Kraft Nabisco products should get all the shelf space they needed.

Over the last three decades, however, the grocery industry, like many other sectors of the U.S. economy, has changed and consolidated dramatically. And the change has accelerated over the last decade. There are now basically five national grocery giants (Walmart, Kroger, Albertson's, Safeway and Costco), with a few substantial regional chains (Winn-Dixie, Food Lion, Piggly Wiggly). Under the current circumstances, Kraft Nabisco's parent company, Mondelez, only needs to connect to the large chains and large regionals, and it's the big boys' purchases that typically set the buying plans for the smaller regional stores and independents. In other words, if Kroger is giving certain products plenty of space, smaller chains and grocers take note and usually make similar proportional purchases.

Toss in the global financial disaster of late 2008 and the resulting period of corporate austerity, and Mondelez and Kraft Nabisco were soon approaching the break-even point related to their investment in the tournament and the benefit they were receiving for their sponsorship—particularly when compared to the grocery-party heyday of the pre-consolidation era.

So, as the chapter closes, the moral of the story so far is that the changing business climate has had its effect on the Kraft Nabisco, or what was the Kraft Nabisco, Championship. While the powers that be in the LPGA say they are committed to doing whatever it takes to keep the championship going, at this point many questions remain.

One thing, however, is certain: whatever the tournament is in the future, it will be determined in no small way by external business forces commanded by the invisible hand of the world economy.

The LPGA's
Lexi Thompson
The new era of golf

By Françoise Rhodes

Professional golfers know that when analysts expect to see their name on Sunday's leaderboard at a major, life is good. And when the analysts expect to see a 19-year-old's name on the leaderboard going into Sunday's round, life is great!

Alexis "Lexi" Thompson quietly works her way around a golf course with precision and stealth, portraying a calmness that even veterans envy. She is tan, slender and fashionable. Her smile has slyness to it, as if to say, "I might be only 19 years old but I'm here to win!"

And win she has, taking in over $2.5 million in career earnings to this point. Thompson's story is one of love for the game and considerable determination.

Growing up in a family of golfers, Thompson was home schooled and graduated in 2012. At age 12 she was the youngest golfer ever to qualify for the U.S. Women's Open. She turned professional in June 2010 at age 15. In 2011, Thompson set a new record as the youngest-ever winner of an LPGA tournament. Three months later, she became the second youngest winner on the Ladies European Tour. And that same year, she became a member of the LPGA. Then in 2014, she won the Kraft Nabisco Championship, making her the second youngest women's major winner to date. In total, Thompson has four wins and 19 top-10 finishes.

Recently Thompson tied for seventh at the 2014 U.S. Women's Open, raising the question: Is she where she thought she would be at this point?

"I always set my goals pretty high as a kid, so I wouldn't say I'm ahead of where I wanted to be, but I'm very satisfied with my success," she says. "In golf there's always room for improvement, and I look forward to accomplishing more of my future goals."

There are other things in life that Thompson wouldn't mind the media asking about. "Anything other than golf really—music, leisure activities, family, food, etc." Thompson's bucket list includes skydiving, playing a round at Pebble Beach and flying an F/A 18 fighter Jet.

The one question she wishes the media would stop asking her is, "Do you plan on playing on the PGA tour at any time?" Thompson rolls her eyes and leaves it at that.

But she lights up when asked about her family. "I rely on them the most for just being there for me after every round, whether it's good or bad. I know I can go to any of my family members and they will be there to get me through certain times in my life," she says. "At the Kraft Nabisco, that whole week was pretty special. To have both of my parents there supporting me every day and making home-cooked meals was amazing. Jumping into Poppies Pond with very special people in my life was a moment I'll always remember."

Recalling that day she adds, "Having the Marines be our standard bearers was very special to me also."

Born in Coral Springs, Florida, Thompson has yet to have any thoughts of leaving the state, but admits to thinking about moving to West Palm Beach or Jupiter. "Not out of Florida for sure!" she says. Her favorite team is the Florida Panthers.

While many people are star struck at meeting Thompson these days, she is enjoying a few star-struck moments of her own. One such moment was meeting Tiger Woods, and another occurred on a media tour after her first win on the LPGA in 2011, when she met actors Taylor Lautner and Jonah Hill. She doesn't mention whether the celebrities asked her for golf tips.

Because her days are filled with appointments, practice rounds and managers, Thompson is adamant about scheduling family time as well as time for herself. She clearly has a handle on what is truly important in life. But her lighter side comes into play when asked who would make up her ultimate foursome.

"Tiger Woods, Michael Jackson and Channing Tatum," she replies, flashing that winning smile.

Say Hello to Kyle Burton

By Françoise Rhodes

One article doesn't even begin to cover the life story of this Coachella Valley resident

Photos by Timothy J. Pade

There are the famous and the not so famous. Then there's the person everyone seems to know, causing everyone else in the room to ask, "Who is that guy, is he famous?" Meet Kyle Burton. At 89 years young, he's a regular at the gym, a regular around the golf course and every Monday through Friday since 1979 he's a regular at Keedy's Fountain Grill in Palm Desert, California.

Sitting with his same group of guys every morning with coffee in hand, Burton banters with his friends about world issues, family, what everyone is doing that day and the game of golf.

If there is one thing Burton knows a lot about, it's golf.

Born in Antioch, Tennessee, Burton and his family soon moved to Nashville. Times were hard. Burton's father was a security guard making just $17 a week. At the age of 10, Burton got a job as a caddy earning 40 cents for 18 holes plus a dime tip if his player didn't lose a Vintage Invitational, played golf with presidents and swapped golf stories with Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus.

Burton is not one to boast about playing golf with President Eisenhower, or the honor he received this year at the Vintage Club from Tom Fazio and the community. What he does mention is that his Vintage membership status is the same as former President George H.W. Bush and that he enjoys driving around Vintage in a golf cart and keeping up with things.

His son has worked at Vintage for 33 years. "He got out of the Marines, I gave him a job and they just kept him on," Burton says.

The stories Burton tells are fascinating. He uses the phrase "off the record" often. "I knew probably the best player in the world that no really knew about," he says suddenly. "He came out of Europe and his name was Flory Van Dynck. He won more tournaments that you can shake a stick at but wasn't well known because there was another ball. Finding clubs here and there, the young caddy had his own set by age 12 and started teaching himself how to play.

It would be fascinating to document Burton's life year by year, including caddy fights, his time as a boxer, life in the service, playing on the European Tour for nine years, marriage and family. However, we barely have enough space to talk about his friendship with Sam Snead and how it all started over a breakfast Snead bought him. Or the famous players he's quietly helped with a friendly chat and a few requested suggestions. There's also his job at Spalding and his professional tenure at the Olympic Club in San Francisco.

And then there was the career in his late 40s at the famous Vintage Club in Indian Wells, California. Enjoying retirement, Burton was convinced by developer Mick Humphreys to move to the desert to work with Tom Fazio and, ultimately, to become the first director of golf at the Vintage Club. From 1979 to 1996, Burton helped create this awarding winning facility, was instrumental in the

When asked about today's golf industry, Burton thinks for a moment. "It's gotten so big, it's harder for the older person like myself to understand it," he says. "It used to have more tradition than there is now, and I really think that back then the players were more respectful. But the game itself, there can't be much change to it. You still have to go out and hit the ball; they just hit them a lot farther today than we did back then."

With a glance at his watch, the retiree realizes he has things to attend to, but not before answering one last question: Who would make up his ultimate foursome?

"As long as I'm in it," he says with a laugh, "I'd take Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and Flory Van Dynck."

A Course for Presidents

Desert Golf & Tennis design expert takes us on a private tour of a very exclusive golf course

By Clive Clark

Here's the question: You live in California and you're contemplating: Which would be the most difficult course to access for a round of golf? You're probably thinking Cypress Point, Los Angeles Country Club, The Tradition or The Madison Club in the Coachella Valley. Good choices, but you'd be wrong. All of those clubs have members who can invite you as their guest.

The answer is actually Sunnylands. "What?" you say. "Where's that?" Sunnylands was the home of Ambassador Walter Annenberg and his wife, Leonore. It is a 200-acre estate in Rancho Mirage, California, where the media baron and his wife lived for many years. The estate's course has seen a few guests since it opened in the early 1960s. Among those who played this nine-hole beauty are nine presidents of the United States including presidents Nixon, Reagan, Obama and both of the Bushes. Bob Hope and Frank Sinatra were also regular guests. On one occasion, the Queen of England, who stayed with the Annenbergs, took a tour of the golf course.

Cart ride tours

You may think that a round at Sunnylands is out of the question and that would be fairly accurate. However, there are regular tours of the estate for the public, which include a cart ride around the course. I was fortunate enough to be invited along to view the golf course recently.

Sunnylands Golf Course was renovated some three or four years ago and it is certainly a very good course (by the way, it is possible to play 27 holes by playing off several different tees).

Although it unlikely to land on the list of Top 100 courses in the world, it is no slouch. Large, gaping bunkers protect the greens. Sweeping fairways and large established trees, with the occasional lake, set up the 'eye candy.' And, no surprise, there is not a divot to be seen!

Delos Bench made of white marble

What is to be seen, however, is a collection of unusual artifacts and sculptures, which are carefully spaced throughout the course. Close to the first tee, for example, is the magnificent Delos Bench. It was hewn from exquisite white marble. It is massive and it is heavy—so heavy, in fact, that it had to be transported to the grounds by helicopter.

During my tour, our guide pointed out the Eisenhower palm trees, the only two palm trees that exist on the golf course. In 1966, Walter Annenberg was playing with President Eisenhower. The president noticed that there were no palm trees on the course and commented that he found that to be very unusual for a golf course located in Palm Springs. The following week, two substantial palm trees were planted, bordering one of the fairways, which actually added a little more strategy to the hole.

A couple of holes later one comes upon the Chinese Pavilion. It's a good place to take a little shade, and I imagine that a butler once provided afternoon tea with finely sliced cucumber sandwiches in this cool setting.

On the following hole a striking 30-foot totem pole rises out of the semi-rough, just short of the green. Apparently it was the work of Henry Hunt, Canada's first native artist. Moving farther down the course, we thought, "Hello, what's this? Are we at St Andrews?" The original architect, Richard (Dick) Wilson, had designed a massive double green.

The Eisenhower palm trees

Magnolia tree, a gift from President Nixon

As we approached the end of our tour, I asked our guide if there were any other unusual features he could point out. He didn't hesitate.

"Yes, sir. Do you see that magnolia tree over on the left of that fairway? That was a gift from President Nixon." It actually came from a cutting of the magnolia tree on the lawn of the White House. The original cutting came from President Andrew Jackson's estate, just minutes away from downtown Nashville. That's one well-traveled tree!

So, there it is—a whirlwind tour of one of the most exclusive golf courses in the world. Next time you're in the Palm Springs area, it is worth taking the time to book one of the tours (just seven people at a time can be accommodated on each cart). These tours are very popular so make sure you do your homework and book well in advance.

Can Watson Win Another Ryder Cup?

He did it as captain in 1993 at The Belfry in England, and the U.S. team would dearly like a repeat

Is 2014 the U.S. team's year to win back the Ryder Cup? It's a feat that has not been accomplished since 2008 at Valhalla Golf Club in Kentucky, and since 1993 in Europe. Revered Gleneagles Golf Club hosts the 2014 Matches, but not on its fabled James Braid courses. Instead, this year's Cup will be contested on Jack Nicklaus' signature parkland layout for big hitters, the PGA Centenary Course, originally named the Monarch's Course.

Many Europeans are dismayed that the Matches aren't on one of Scotland's famed links.

Initial Matches were played at Gleneagles in 1921, with Britain/Ireland winning 9-3. Seed merchant Samuel Ryder, an ardent spectator and golfer, launched the Ryder Cup at tea in 1926. In 1979, with U.S. teams dominating the Matches, Jack Nicklaus suggested changing the format and team selection to include Europe. Since then, Europe has won nine Matches, America four, and there has been one tie.

European Captain,
Ireland's Paul McGinley

Gleneagles Golf Club

On paper, the United States was predicted glory on Arnold Palmer's spectacular design at Ireland's K Club in 2006, and again in 2010 at rain-drenched Celtic Manor in Wales. In 2012, the European team prevailed yet again, this time at Medinah Country Club in Illinois with a sensational Sunday singles win that has come to be known as the "Miracle of Medinah."

Needing a turnaround from these losses, the U.S. revised its strategy and named Tom Watson 2014 captain. Loved by the Scots as a native son, Watson brings a depth of unrivaled experience and a focus from a "winning" generation, and he has no fear of doing things his way to win, as he did in 1993 as captain—the U.S. team's last victory on European soil. Watson has chosen Andy North and Raymond Floyd as vice captains.

Ireland's Paul McGinley, Europe's captain, isn't a household name, but he has been a perennial vice captain in the Ryder Cup Matches and a victorious captain for many Seve Trophy teams. McGinley also made the winning putt against Jim Furyk at The Belfry in the 2002 Matches. He has chosen Scotland's victorious 2002 Ryder Cup captain, Sam Torrance, and Ireland's Des Smyth as his initial vice captains.

Both captains have three picks, which will be critical considering the multitude of new, young talent available for the 12-man teams. Some Ryder Cup veteran players could be lacking points.

Graeme McDowell, whose triumph over Hunter Mahan in 2010 secured the Cup, believes competition will be fierce. "There are going to be two or three guys who miss, quality players," he says. "McGinley's wild cards will be very hotly contested. [It will be] a tough team to get on, and for America, too."

Zach Johnson agrees. "All are grinding. They want to make the team."

Is Tiger a lock? Not like before. Potential newbies for the U.S. team are Jimmy Walker, Jordan Spieth, Patrick Reed and Harris English.

Europe's Victor Dubuisson, Henrik Stenson, Jamie Donaldson and Thomas Bjorn appear in. It's hoped that Scot Stephen Gallacher will qualify so McGinley doesn't need to use a pick.

Retouched by Nicklaus for the Matches, the par-72 PGA Centenary Course now stretches 7243 yards. The 18th hole received the most changes in preparation for the Matches. "It's not a very difficult hole. It's exciting. I'm very proud of it," Nicklaus says.

Host Europe controls course set-up, which is always critical, but will be even more so if it's a "wet" Gleneagles. The European Tour's Johnny Walker Championships have also been contested here annually, thus advantage Europe. But, it's a big-hitters course, and that gives the U.S. team more advantage.

"Gleneagles is a very unique course, creating a challenge in itself," Arnold Palmer notes. "I think America's success will depend on how seriously they approach the Matches, if their mental toughness equals or betters [that of] the Europeans."

NBC/Golf Channel Ryder Cup commentator, England's Tom Abbott, says, "The stretch from the par-4 14th on is testing and will be tough. The par-5 16th is risk/reward and bombers can go for it in two. The 18th is a good finish but isn't that tough."

As for Captain Watson, he's old school. He only wants guys on his team "with heart and guts."

Game on at Gleneagles, Sept. 23-28.

Thunderbird Ranch & Country Club

Thunderbird Ranch & Country Club is a 36-hole golf course located in the heart of the Thunderbird Ranch & Country Club. The course is designed by the famous architect, A. W. Tillinghast, and is one of the most beautiful and challenging courses in the world. The clubhouse is a masterpiece of modern architecture, and the grounds are meticulously maintained. Thunderbird Ranch & Country Club is a true gem of the golfing world.

The 11th Ryder Cup Matches are a piece of Thunderbird's history

Thunderbird Country Club doesn't host a big bi-annual golf shindig or intra-club competition to mark its Ryder Cup history. But the Matches are never far from the minds of the members or the staff regardless of the year or the day.

"We all know when it's time," says head golf professional, Nick DeKock. "The Ryder Cup is always something special for our membership."

While there are commemorative photos and other paraphernalia related to the 1955 Matches played at Thunderbird,

However, the club did make a dramatic addition to the grounds earlier this year in honor of its Ryder Cup past. A new four-sided clock commemorating the U.S. team's 8-4 win over the Great Britain/Ireland team was unveiled in the courtyard just outside the pro shop, on the footpath from the putting green to the first tee.

Thunderbird benefitted from the exposure and buzz the event generated, as did the surrounding valley. The relatively lunar location was a striking change of pace for golfers from both teams, and some historians credit the novelty of playing in desert came together to make Thunderbird one of Southern California's hottest properties in the 1950s.

Further testimony to the success of the 1955 Matches came in 1959; the very next time the competition was played in the United States, it was contested just down Highway 111 at Eldorado Country Club in Indian Wells.

The club and competition owe a debt of thanks to Robert Hudson, the Portland grocery magnate and Thunderbird member who financed the British team's trip to the States for the 1947 competition at Portland Golf Club, where Hudson was also a member. In part because of World War II, the Matches had not been held since 1937, and when the Portland Open was cancelled for financial considerations in 1947, Hudson moved to have the Ryder Cup at Portland Golf Club. He arranged for the British team's passage to the United States on the Queen Mary, accompanied them on their cross-country train ride to Oregon and paid all their expenses.

When the Brits traveled to Pinehurst for the Matches in 1951, the British PGA picked up their tab. But Hudson was already working behind the scenes to bring the event to Thunderbird in 1955, an effort that eventually succeeded.

"The course had just opened in 1951, so it was pretty amazing to have a major that's just one of many historic events that have taken place at the club, the first 18-hole facility to be constructed in the Coachella Valley.

There's only so much wall and display-case space at the club, and many walls and cases are filled with photos of Thunderbird's development, when there was very little else around and Highway 111 was a two-lane blacktop. There's photo after photo of famous members: Don Hutson, Ralph Kiner, Hoagy Carmichael, Phil Harris, Johnny Dawson, Bing Crosby, Desi Arnaz and Lucille Ball...the list of Southern California's mid-century stars who called the club home is extensive and impressive. So much so that its attachment to Hollywood's elite may have eclipsed the 1955 Ryder Cup as a drawing card for the club.

"We were fortunate enough to play a piece [of video] for our members during our Phil Harris Member-Guest earlier this year, and it was neat for the members to be able to see what life was like here back in the 50s and 60s," DeKock says. "If the walls could talk..."

the desert as one of the factors that helped sustain the event when the United States was winning regularly and handily. The combination of international exposure, the prestige of hosting the game's top international competition and the fact that Hollywood was in the process of falling in love with the serenity and seclusion of the international event just four years later," DeKock says. "To maintain and preserve the history of that event is vital to the club."

Bighorn We Salute You

By Françoise Rhodes

For this club it's not about looking back at accomplishment but about giving back

Randel Dee Hubbard

For golfers, raising money for charity has never been easier. At Bighorn Golf Club, charity and golfing go hand-in-hand thanks to Randall Dee Hubbard (R.D. to his friends), an exceptional chairman and managing director who set the bar high on day one.

Opened in 2006 to rave reviews for its spectacular homes and two championship golf courses, Bighorn Golf Club in Palm Desert, California, set out to grab the golf world's attention with such events as the Already boasting staggering numbers for funds raised and gifted, the charity's giving continues to grow as it expands its community program to include a new, grassroots component: giving up to $500,000 annually to qualified nonprofits in the Coachella Valley. Bighorn Golf Club Charities developed this program to fund specific projects of local nonprofit organizations that demonstrate a need and are making a real difference in the quality of life for the people they serve. The focus of encouraging youth to pursue their dreams through higher education.

In April 2014, Hubbard was inducted as a member of this prestigious association, joining eleven other outstanding business and civic leaders from across North America in receiving this honor. Since 1947, this annual award has recognized exceptional leaders—all with a commitment to philanthropy and higher education—who have overcome significant personal challenges to achieve success.

Skins Games, U.S. Senior Match Play Challenge, Battles at BIGHORN and the LPGA's Samsung World Championships.

With great success branding the club, and having rendered unforgettable moments for its members and the world to see, Bighorn quickly established itself as a viable player in the world of high-end, golf-course living.

Perhaps more impressive is what goes on behind the scenes, particularly related to fundraising. Bighorn Golf Club Charities, with the full support of Hubbard, has surpassed all expectations within the community, and the nonprofits on the receiving end could not be more grateful.

Since its inception in 2006, Bighorn Golf Club Charities has gifted over $5 million in funding in the Coachella Valley. This includes Bighorn BAM (Behind a Miracle), which helps fund breast-cancer programs, as well as other funding supporting education, the arts and the building of the Bighorn Golf Club Charities Veterans Resource Center at College of the Desert for the 400 warriors attending the institution.

the program will be nonprofits that aid valley children and shelters, and that provide assistance for those who require a helping hand in order to seek a better life and a brighter future for themselves, their families and their communities.

Anyway you look at the tremendous success of this charitable organization, all cart paths lead back to Hubbard, the man with a mind for success and a heart for giving.

This is the same man who formed the R.D. and Joan Dale Hubbard Foundation, which is dedicated to providing and improving educational opportunities for students of all ages, and the Shoemaker Foundation, named for legendary jockey Willie Shoemaker, to help raise funds for horsemen suffering from catastrophic accidents or illnesses.

While Hubbard himself is very low key about his charitable accomplishments, they did not go unnoticed by the Horatio Alger Association of Distinguished Americans, Inc., a nonprofit educational organization honoring the achievements of outstanding individuals and

Regarding the award, Hubbard commented, "It is a wonderful honor to be inducted into the Horatio Alger Association and to be recognized for not only my professional accomplishments but also the humble beginnings that shaped my character. I believe in the power of hard work, determination and having passion for what you do in your career. I am proud to become a member of an organization that not only believes in those same principles but helps to instill them in young Americans."

With heartfelt emotions from many in the Coachella Valley who have greatly benefitted from the generosity of the Bighorn Golf Club Charities and Mr. R. D. Hubbard, we salute Bighorn's ingenuity, congratulate Hubbard on the much deserved induction and thank everyone involved for showing the Coachella Valley that it's possible to make a difference and have a heck-of-a-great time doing it.

Choosing The Right Chip Shot

It takes knowledge and practice to determine which club and setup to use

This issue's golf instruction article comes from the 17th hole on Desert Willow's Firecliff Golf Course, where I spent some time with Head Professional Ryan Szydlowski. Golfers frequently get in situations where they don't know what type of chip to play onto the green. This tricky little chip to the side of the 17th hole on Firecliff is a good example.

Ryan will first run you through the chip-and-run option, and I'll cover the lob shot.

Chip and Run

I determine where I need to land my ball before choosing a club. If I have a ridge to carry or a short-sided pin, I'll use a higher-loft club to produce more carry and less release. If I have a lot of green to work with and minimal undulation, I'll use a short iron to get the ball rolling like a putt as soon as possible. I selected a 56-degree wedge for this shot because I need to carry the shot over a subtle ridge, halfway to the hole. My ball position for this shot is on my back foot and I set up with a slightly open clubface. This allows me to hit the ball first consistently, and the added bounce I create by opening the clubface helps the club get through long rough without restriction.

I focus on keeping very soft grip pressure and use my shoulders to execute the chip. During every practice swing, I exaggerate a short backswing to emphasize accelerating through impact. I practice a consistent swing tempo and use different length swings to control distance.

Setting up with the ball on my back foot helps me hit down on the ball through impact. I focus on finishing low through impact with my clubface pointed at the sky. If my hands take over, I risk hitting low shots that are off target. In practice, you can draw a line on your golf ball and point it down your target line. Most golfers don't realize they line up off target. This drill will help you get comfortable with a proper setup and square clubface, and it will also help you learn how your ball reacts to an open clubface.

The Lob Shot

The first thing I like to do is to break a chip down into sections or a grid (1/3, 1/2, 2/3). This grid helps me establish the landing areas of the clubs I might choose. The lob shot will land at the beginning of the 1/3 section as soft as possible.

In order to get the ball to land as soft as possible, I will go with my 60-degree lob wedge. I will grip the club with what most consider a very weak grip, with my left thumb positioned slightly left of the grooves. With this weak grip, I want to open my stance so my bodyline is angled left of the target. This setup is very similar to a greenside bunker shot.

My backswing will be through a big shoulder turn, and then I hinge my wrist to "set the club." This hinging in the wrist will actually create a 90-degree angle between the left arm and the shaft.

As I turn slowly back through the ball, I will maintain the hinge in my wrist, which will help me get the golf club under the ball, maintaining an open clubface. This open clubface through impact will help the ball pop out of the greenside rough very high and soft. You can see as I hold my finish how the clubface is angled straight up into the sky and my body has turned through to the target. Using my body as the primary power source will help my arms and hands control the club.

The key is to practice these shots around the greens to get a feel for how hard to swing through the ball to control your distances.

Harness the Power of the Sun

By Jenell Fontes

And put some green back into your wallet at the same time

Taking advantage of the power of the sun can reduce your monthly electric bills, increase the value of your home and make a difference in our ecological footprint. Due to advances in solar technology and mass production of solar panels, solar it is now less expensive and cumbersome to add to any home or business. So what do you need to know when calculating if going solar is the right decision for you and your home? It is important to calculate your yearly savings, the cost to lease or purchase the panels and the overall value and curb appeal of your home. Once you have asked the right questions and have the data, you may find that going green is a solid financial decision as well as a positive lifestyle decision.

"There is no doubt that solar adds greatly to the value of a home, as well to the quality of life for those who live there," says Vincent Battaglia, CEO and president of Renova Solar in Palm Desert, California, which provides solar panels for residences and businesses. "[Homeowners] not only enjoy the considerable savings on their utility bill each month, they also have the satisfaction from using a clean, renewable form of energy generation."

CALCULATE THE SAVINGS, LOCATE THE DISCOUNTS

To help calculate the cost of solar for your home relative to the monthly savings on your electric bill and the ultimate payoff, you will need to weigh the initial costs and maintenance costs of a solar system against yearly savings and home valuation. This will help you to decide if the investment in solar is worth the payoff or if leasing equipment is a more viable option.

An online tool operated by the California Energy Commission can help you with the appropriate calculations. It's available at <http://www.gosolarcalifornia.org/tools/save.php>.

You should also check with your city, state, county and local power companies for incentives or financing programs. The real discount is the 30-percent federal tax credit that expires at the end of 2016. It's a credit against federal tax liability, so whether a person has the tax appetite or not is a major factor in whether it's better to buy or lease.

Good news for homeowners is that lease and finance options are expanding according to David Herrlinger of Hot Purple Energy, a solar-energy solutions company in Palm Springs, California. "It's clear solar still saves you money even with an interest component, so the options will continue to grow," he says.

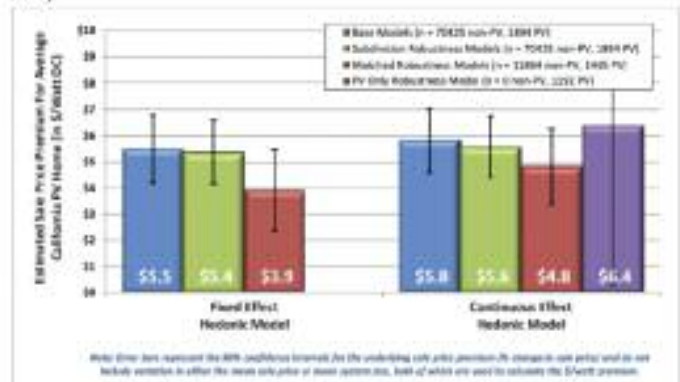

In the Coachella Valley, owners can take advantage of a Property Assesses Clean Energy loan program to fund home and business energy improvements, including solar. The money is loaned to the property, not the owner, and is paid as a part of the property tax bill.

SOLAR and YOUR HOME VALUE

Part of your decision may come down to determining how adding solar will increase your home value. Some appraisers are still learning how to value solar, but a common formula is 20 times the annual savings. As researchers continue to study data, the results are becoming as clear as the sun on a cloudless day. Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory (LBNL) analyzed data on homes with photovoltaic (PV) systems from 2000-2009 in the study, "Exploring California PV Home Premiums," and the results show that solar boots a home's resale value. The LBNL report estimated that each 1-kilowatt (kW) increase in rooftop solar system size adds $5,911 to a home's resale value.

"Our analysis offers clear support that a premium exists in the marketplace, thus PV systems have value and their contribution to home values must be assessed," states the report. You can read more at <http://emp.lbl.gov/publications/exploring-california-pv-home-premiums>.

DO RESEARCH, GET MULTIPLE BIDS

Once you decide that solar energy is cost effective and you want it, the biggest decision to make is whether to purchase, in essence becoming your own power plant, or have a company install solar panels on your roof and retain ownership while you make a fixed payment each month that will be lower than what you were paying for traditional energy. There are plusses to both options. The option requires no money out-of-pocket because installation is free, while purchasing generates substantially more savings over the lifetime of the system.

Whichever system you choose, using the best equipment backed by the best manufacturer is a good way to ensure that this asset produces the desired energy—and thus savings—for decades to come. All solar panels and solar leases are not created equal, so it's important to shop around. SunPower, for example, a U.S. manufacturer, makes solar panels that deliver 44 percent more power than conventional panels of the same size. That means fewer panels on your roof, a more attractive array and room to expand in the future should you get an electric car.

Saving With Solar—Real-Life Examples

This three-bedroom, two-bath home in Palm Desert, California, features 3,196 square feet of living space as well as a pool and spa. Yearly savings are estimated to be $7,967, with monthly electric payments dropping from an average of $766 to just $102. This purchased system will pay for itself in a little over five years. Using a formula based on the savings, it can add up to $159,000 to the home valuation, bringing the estimated value of this home from $733,000 to $892,000.

In Rancho Mirage, California, this horse property, with stables, has eight bedrooms, seven baths and 9,554 square feet of living space on nearly seven acres. Monthly electricity payments were about $2,000. It's believed they'll drop to about $60 because there was room for enough solar to offset 97 percent of the electric usage. Yearly energy savings are estimated to be over $24,000, with a payback period of just under six years. This solar purchase could increase the value of the home by $480,000, to a current estimated value of $2.5 million.

Still, you have to do some research and ask questions to determine which product and which company is right for your home.

Asking some key questions upfront, for example, will help ensure that the company you choose will do a quality job. First, ask for qualifications, licenses and client references. You can check with the California State License Board, The Desert Contractors Association and with the North American Board of Certified Energy Practitioners (NABCEP), which certifies solar installers. As with any home improvement, work only with licensed, bonded and insured contractors.

It's also important to receive multiple bids. Established local contractors are your best bet as they have relevant and accessible references as well as equipment that is tailored to desert heat. Take your time choosing; proper and careful installation is critical as cutting into the roof of your home can have major consequences if not done correctly. It would be a shame for all of your savings to go down the drain because of a leaky roof. Of course, reputable solar installers utilize techniques such as double flashing as needed and bring in qualified roofing companies that will offer their own warranty for their work.

Solar Energy has proven itself to be reliable and less expensive than grid energy, but there is no one-size-fits-all approach to sizing a solar system or determining if it's better to buy or lease. And even if you have run the numbers in the past, check them again. Pricing on equipment and installation has dropped dramatically in recent months while electric rates continue to rise.

Putting the sun to work for you could just put some green back in your pockets, so why not do a little research to find out? You might be pleasantly surprised at what you discover.

Golf in The Kingdom

By Timothy J. Pade

Thailand is Asia's sweet spot for unforgettable golf vacations

Chiangmai Highlands Golf & Spa Resort

The extraordinary reputation of the people of Thailand is not exaggerated. From the simplest farming communities to cities such as Bangkok and Chiang Mai, Thai people are genuinely kind and sincere. And they are always smiling. That warmly welcoming attitude is contagious.

Still considered by some a bit Third World, Thailand actually enjoys a strong

Interestingly, caddies at all golf courses in Thailand are female. The caddy who holds your umbrella to protect you from the sun or fetches your favorite club will also gladly massage your back and find a cold towel for your neck. And she'll do that while also providing accurate yardage and reading your putts. The cost for this level of service is a mere 400 baht—approximately $13!

shower and change into clean clothes in the clubhouse. Most facilities are expansive, providing more than 30 private showers and large, beautifully appointed locker rooms.

And then there are the courses themselves. Siam Country Club in Pattaya has three championship golf courses. The qualifying course for the International BMW Championships is one of the newer layouts and, as one would expect, it offers exceptional golf. Siam Country Club is the first privately owned golf course in Thailand and the first facility in the country to host an LPGA event. Its stunning contemporary clubhouse has everything.

economy. The value of products and a high-quality lifestyle remain inexpensive there by comparison with much of the rest of the world. Accommodations at even the best hotels are affordable, and most come with the luxuries any world traveler wants and expects. The mantra we found in Thailand was “live our lifestyle.”

Aside from rich cultural offerings, Thailand is one of the few places in the world that you can visit and enjoy a lifestyle that would come at a much higher price almost anywhere else today. Food, accommodations and, yes, golf are still inexpensive in Thailand, as are a multitude of luxury services including famed Thai massages. For many tourists, a primary benefit of visiting this incredible place is the lifestyle that can be enjoyed at a relatively modest price.

For golfers, the benefits are even greater. This gorgeous, exotic country is home to some of the most beautiful golf courses in the world. According to the Thai Golf Association, there are more than 200 golf courses just from Phuket to Pattaya and on to Bangkok.

Most golf courses also offer a high level of amenities. In Thailand, for example, after finishing a round of golf, it's normal to proud of his club and of the lifestyle that his country offers. “Here it's all about how we live,” he says. “Where else can you live the lifestyle we enjoy? Manicures, pedicures and massages are just a few of the luxuries easily afforded here. Thailand offers a lifestyle found nowhere else."

Another first-class facility is Lotus Valley Golf Resort. This Gary Player design is about an hour's drive from Bangkok. Opened in 1998, Lotus Valley is a 7,015-yard championship layout with a modern clubhouse complete with Japanese baths. Greens fees vary from about $50 to $120 per round, depending on the time of day, season, etc.

The Kingdom of Thailand offers championship golf with water features, fruit trees and much of what you would find anywhere in the world. One golf course, however, also includes monkeys. Seriously, monkeys everywhere. Bangpra Golf Club north of Pattaya was built in 1958 and updated in 1988. This mature facility is one of the prettiest courses in the area, and it can be played for approximately $35-$90, depending on time and day of play.

In Chiang Mai, in northwestern Thailand, Chiang Mai Highlands Golf and Spa Resort offers every conceivable amenity. This family facility provides for spectacular mountain golf at approximately $100 a round for visitors. Opened in 2005, the Lee Schmidt and Brian Curley design plays to a par 72 at 7,003 yards.

Another excellent hotel in the area is Siripanna Villa Resort & Spa, with just 74 spacious, luxurious rooms and villas. Gorgeous teak furniture throughout and an abundance of luxury touches make this a property not to be missed.

Chiang Mai is famous for the Maesa Elephant Camp, a conservation center with some 70 elephants on property that have been trained to entertain thousands of visitors from around the world. Most impressive are the Guinness World Record and Ripley's Believe it or Not noted painting elephants. These highly-trained pachyderms-turned-highly-paid-artists commanded $50,000 for a painting titled "Lanna," purchased by a Thai-born U.S. businessman. Daily painted canvasses sell for as much as $100. The Elephant Camp is a must see when visiting Chiang Mai.

Also there is Wat Phra That Doi Suthep, a Theravada Buddhist temple and the holiest shrine in northern Thailand. Built in 1386, the temple is on a mountaintop at 3,542 ft. and accessible by 300 steps or via a lift. The gold-plated temple is home to many shrines, bells, golden umbrellas and Buddha statues. Thailand has many temples in every village and city as well as in homes and businesses. The Thai people are extremely religious and these temples are fascinating places to visit.

The names Doubletree, Hilton and Best Western in the United States are typically associated with nice, modern accommodations. In Thailand, however, these brands are high-end luxury properties. The new Hilton Pattaya is spectacular, as is the Hilton Sukhumvit Bangkok, where gorgeous marble baths complement expansive guest rooms. Restaurants at these hotels are on par with top restaurants in New York or Las Vegas.

Thailand simply has too many incredible places to list in one article, but one thing is certain: there is no more amazing place to vacation, whether the focus is golf, tennis or exotic culture, and the value for dollars spent is phenomenal.

For those interested in a Thai golf vacation, or golf getaway anywhere in Asia, the go-to resource is GolfAsian. GolfAsian is a leading tour operator and can provide discounted bookings for tee times, accommodations and transportation. Simply log onto golfasian.com.

Dining in the Desert

The Desert Golf & Tennis guide to eating out in the Coachella Valley

Balisage Bistro

The Coachella Valley currently has some 500,000 year-round residents, and even though summer temperatures can hover in the low 100s, the restaurant scene is bustling. Maybe it's because the AC is free and residents don't want to turn on their own stoves to create more heat. But most likely it's because the Coachella Valley has rising stars on its impressive culinary scene and a slew of fabulous restaurants to match.

Balisage Bistro (145 N. Gene Autry Trail, Palm Springs; 760.406.4565) is around the corner from Palm Springs International Airport, next to Atlantic Aviation, a private and charter-plane airport. It cleverly derives its name from the French term for runway lighting, since the airport's runways are a stone's throw from the restaurant. Chef/owner Daniel Villanueva is a recent transplant from Hollywood, where he catered to movie sets and movie stars, and he has already won the hearts and stomachs of locals and jetsetters.

Balisage offers breakfast, lunch and dinner, its menu showcasing the familiar and familiar-with-a-twist. Fresh-baked breads and pastries and locally sourced ingredients turn into exceptional meals. Fresh buttermilk pancakes with berry compote butter and organic blue agave syrup, and poached eggs on brioche with lobster Hollandaise are two of the tasty breakfast items. Lunch dishes include a lobster on brioche sandwich with preserved lemon aioli, baby arugula and heirloom tomato, and grilled flatbread pizza with sun-dried tomato goat cheese, baby greens, apricots, Spanish chorizo and Manchego cheese. For dinner, options run the delicious gamut from paella with sautéed shrimp, whitefish, mussels, preserved lemon and saffron Arborio rice to citrus-steamed baby-back ribs in banana leaves with orange harissa. Take-out, in-home, in-flight and event catering are available. Open daily 9 a.m. - 9 p.m.

Appetito (1700 Camino Real, Palm Springs; 760.327.1929) identifies itself as a “Cal-Italian Deli,” meaning its cuisine showcases a mix of fresh California produce and imported Italian ingredients and traditions. Managing Partner Patrick Service, General Manager John Shea and Culinary Institute of America Chef Chad Shaner have created an atmosphere and menu that even Mario Batali would appreciate.

The fresh pastas are handmade daily, and the Mozzarella and Stracciatella are made fresh regularly. This is a great spot for nibbling and sipping. A snack menu includes a cheese board with walnut bread, local honey and strawberry preserves; crispy calamari with spicy romesco sauce; pea and prosciutto arancini; and marinated octopus with lima beans.

Several pasta combinations, including mushroom ravioli with asparagus and classic linguini and clams, are offered in two portion sizes. Various panini, flatbreads, pizzas, salads, sliders and desserts round out the menu.

A “slushy machine” turns out incredibly refreshing frozen cocktails to assuage the summer heat. There’s also a Negroni bar. Named after Florentine Count Camillo Negroni, this cocktail is made of one part gin, one part vermouth rosso (red, semi-sweet) and one part Campari, garnished with orange peel. Also on hand is house-made limoncello. If you’re yearning for an authentic Italian dining experience, you can get your fix here without the expense (and aggravation) of flying halfway around the world. Open 11 a.m.-10 p.m. Sunday-Thursday, 11 a.m.-11 p.m. Friday-Saturday

Morgan's in the Desert

Morgan's in the Desert (49-499 Eisenhower Dr., La Quinta; 760.564.7600) is a remarkable place. Named after Walter H. Morgan, who built the La Quinta Hotel in the 1920s to entertain his Hollywood pals, Morgan's is within the 21st century La Quinta Resort and Spa, which has grown into one of the top resort and spa properties on the planet. Morgan's is a reincarnation of the ambiance of those early days with the added culinary magic of three-time James Beard Award winning chef Jimmy Schmidt and his team. The menus change every couple of weeks, and in the summer there are also special "festival" menus celebrating ingredients at their peak. From July 29-August 11 is the sweet corn and Maine lobster event, for example. Each has an optional wine pairing. Menus range from $45 to $55 per person, excluding tax and gratuity. The Bar Bites menu offers exceptional cheeses as well as flatbreads laden with delicious meats, oils and veggies, and there's live music most nights. Dinner nightly 5:00-10:00 p.m.

Valley. The most elegant and upscale restaurant at the resort, this destination has a menu and wine list that keep the place filled with food and wine connoisseurs. Appetizers include wild-caught Mexican white shrimp cocktail, Korean barbecued beef short ribs (Kalbi) and Maryland-style crab cakes. Of course, the centerpiece here is the hand-selected USDA Prime corn-fed beef that's aged for 21 days and seasoned with a proprietary award-winning dry rub. Filet mignon, rib eye and New York steaks can be enhanced with such possibilities as Shaft bleu cheese crust or lobster, or served Oscar style with king crab, asparagus and Béarnaise. If you're not a beefeater, there are other superlative choices, including Duroc dry-aged pork chops, charbroiled lamb chops from Superior Farms and seafood pasta. The long list of sides ranges from twice-baked potatoes, steakhouse fries and caramelized onions & wild mushrooms to white truffle mac & cheese with pancetta. Jaguar F-Type Roadster

Jaguar is back in the business of sports cars

Jaguar is mixing things up. In the new F-Type Roadster, they've combined speed with design to give any sports car on the market a run. The roofline swoops. The rear end is curves. The front end dips. The roadster is different than your typical Jaguar sedan. You'll find hints of the Jaguar DNA coming through in the interior and grill, but there's not much else to suggest the family tree.

The F-Type front end is sleek but hints at the muscle under the hood. Small vertically oriented headlamps peer ahead like a beast. Two air vents near the top of the hood add dimension and much-needed oxygen for the power plant below.

This is the most powerful production model to roll off the line in the distinguished history of Jaguar. The 5-liter V8 is born with 550 horsepower. Sadly, it'll never see its full potential because Jaguar engineers chose to limit the top speed to 186 mph to keep from having to put tougher tires on the car. At speeds above 70 mph, a spoiler deploys to reduce lift by an estimated 265 pounds.

The look of the F-Type is classic sporty roadster. This is such a departure from Jaguar's typical design that some inside the company are calling it a game changer. Whether the game is changed or not is left to interpretation, but the look is decidedly different. If the Porsche 911 is the gold standard, the F-Type is closer to matching it than any Jag in this decade.

The performance should win awards. A zero-to-60 time of 3.5 seconds puts the F-Type in an elite category. This is muscle with a refined finish. The V8 unleashes 502 pound-feet of torque at its maximum RPM. This is glue-you-to-the-seat, butterfly-in-your-stomach stuff. The cornering is electronically controlled with sensors to keep tires from slipping or drifting, making it not only quick but safe.

The hydroformed aluminum frame is as rigid as a private school's honor policy—the frame just does not give in the hard turns. Beams run over the roof and through the mid section, essentially replacing the B pillars. This rigidity helps shrug the ultra-luxe label and add some street cred in the performance department. The roof, incidentally, can be aluminum or full glass for stargazing.

Take a look at the backend of this beast and you'll feel your heart race. It's an unspoken rule that you've made a true sports car when you can make hearts pound with an exhaust note and a taillight. The rear shoulders of the of the F-Type look strong and sleek, the taillights are thin and lean.

Inside the F-Type Coupe the softer side of Jaguar is still in full force. Supple leather juxtaposes against the recessed dash instruments. The passenger gets a grab handle, which leaves no doubt to the true intent. Bucket racing seats aren't the kind in which you'll want to take a cross-country road trip, but your daily commute will have no ill effects.

The fun of driving the F-Type is engaging the dynamic driving system, which brakes the inside disc brakes on turns and locks up the differential to get you through corners quicker. You can, of course, disable the system if you want to do it alone, but there's no doubt that the F-Type technology can drive the car better than you can. The dynamic braking works behind the scenes to keep you from drifting in corners, and the smart system pushes and pulls each wheel for maximum traction in the corners.

There's nothing ordinary about the F-Type Roadster. You'll find the real deal here when you compare it with any sports car on the market. From performance to head-turn factor, this is a car your friends will envy and you'll not tire of driving.

Set aside about $100,000 for all the options to make this ride exactly what you want. Get your name in with your local dealer fast before these are gone. The Jaguar F-Type Roadster will prove to you that Jaguar is back in the business of sports cars.

The game has changed, there's a Jaguar loose and the competition should beware.

Golf Shoes

With a Focus on Fit and Fashion

By Diane Marlin-Dirkx

A new designer from the UK changes the game in golf-shoe design

Iconic American sage, scathing social commentator and smarty-pants 19th-century author Mark Twain, aka Samuel Clemens, once famously opined, "Golf is a good walk spoiled."

From across the pond comes a rebuttal from award-winning UK golf-shoe designer Alex Bartholomew. "It is said you should invest in two things: a good bed and good shoes, because if you aren't in one, you are in the other."

Bartholomew's Royal Albartross Golf Shoe collection may not have a royal pedigree, but it does have superior breeding in new technology for "those who like the finer things in life," says

Bartholomew, listing the fine detail of "Shindo lace tips hand-rolled in Japan."

Wow. We had many questions for this young entrepreneur, whose innovative line is just beginning to roll out across the globe exclusively to the most discriminating stores. Like Cinderella's glass slipper, whether snazzy or signature style, these golf shoes are a perfect fit for pros and amateurs. Desert Golf & Tennis sat down with Bartholomew to get the scoop on exactly what makes these shoes so fabulous.

DGT Why the intriguing label Royal Albartross for a line of golf shoes?

AB It was named for the golfing term albatross (a double eagle). But that was trademarked so I added a few letters and the word Royal. My name AlBar is in there and my now husband Ross. Not planned. Meant to be!

DGT Why golf shoes? Why not polo shirts and plaid pants with matching visors?

AB Always a follower of fashion and shoes, it struck me that this beautiful game played by gentlemen and women in such surroundings was severely lacking on the shoe front. While at Brighton University, I came upon the industry by chance, working for a shoemaker. My final textiles/footwear catwalk collection showcased a men's brogue that everyone loved and thought looked rather golf-like. Having taken up golf, I found the choices for women were copies of clumsy men's styles in smaller sizes. It literally went from there.

DGT What gives Royal Albartross golf shoes the edge on the competition?

AB The sport remained pretty unaffected by trends and technical developments in fashion apparel for a very long time while players obsessed over the newest driver technology. And as a niche market, that left the door open to us. We walked right in. I was still new to the business and success doesn't come easy. We have modified our "last" (model) shapes and focused on comfort, never losing sight of our brand message. We don't compete with mainstream brands; we offer a luxurious design-led golf shoe combined with superior componentry and materials, down to the finest details.

DGT Workmanship is critical to your brand but isn't shoemaking a dying art?

AB Our factory is in Montegranaro, Italy, the heart of the Italian shoemaking region. The area in particular encompasses years of the real art of manufacturing shoes and handwork. There are master craftsmen who know everything about materials, fit and comfort with so many years of experience. It takes eight weeks and 70 hours to finish each pair.

DGT What are the detailing differences you mentioned?

AB The signature toe shapes, polished eyelets, silver lace tips. The leather stretches in a certain direction; the seams are thinned to avoid abrasion. All trims are designed for heavy foot-traffic wear with a moisture barrier and anti-microbial treatment protection. Each pair is a finely tuned and very practical work of art that arrives in an RA shoebox, whether it's a new riff on a classic saddle shoe or a sassy style in glossy patent leather or exotic snakeskin.

DGT Where does comfort come in?

AB People expect to have to wear in their shoes before venturing on the course and I really enjoy seeing their faces when they try on a pair of Royal Albartross for the first time. These shoes are remarkably comfortable; the linings are super soft and the insoles very cushioned. We put this down to our factory's secret material and construction combinations—the shoes really do mold to your feet very quickly. We enjoy a technical partnership with Champ Q-lok cleats and receptacles for traction and support. I'd challenge any serious golfer to find a better choice in golf shoes.

DGT What's in the future for Royal Albartross Golf Shoes? Does her majesty wear them? What about celebs? Any bragging rights for awards?

AB The future is looking bright! Our soft-sole collection has been so well received, and we have opened a number of key retail accounts in the UK and the USA this year. We are also extending the collection to include further golf accessories. I don't believe we have many golf-playing Royals in the UK, but if they did, I am sure we would be regarded! And here are a few of our Celeb-fans: Jodie Kidd, George Lopez, Anthony Anderson, Dougray Scott, Michael Collins, Dan Walker, Anton du Beke, Clay Buchholz, Eric Gagne. We received the 2014 MyGolfSpy winner of best golf shoes in both spikeless and spiked categories. Thank you for asking!

High-End Jewelry Trends for Fall

By Alison Elsner

The watchwords for jewelry this season are simple: elegance with an edge

Roberto Coin

The strongest trends are often those that incorporate classic elements while introducing an attention-grabbing twist, especially in the world of fashion and fine jewels.

According to Harper's Bazaar and FashionAllure.com, one of the hottest jewelry trends for fall-winter 2014-15 is the figurative cuff, crafted in different shapes and worn on one or both wrists. A cuff has the power to transform a traditional look into a bold, stylish power statement.

CUFFS

David Yurman has the trend covered in two pieces that confidently complement fall fashion choices. His Diamond and Silver Starburst Bypass Cuff Bracelet showcases white diamonds (0.56 tcw) with sterling silver, measuring 1.5 inches wide and 2.5 inches in diameter, selling for $1,950.

His Labyrinth Double-Loop Cuff with Diamonds and Gold from the Labyrinth Collection is designed with a sparkling mix of sterling silver, 18-karat yellow gold and pavé diamonds (2.21 tcw). It retails for $7800.

Both pieces exhibit the artistry of Yurman's talent as a sculptor, the creative impetus that was the brand's genesis.

Bulgari also weighs in with some iconic trend statements for fall, starting with the Serpenti Tubogas bracelet in pink gold with semi-pavé diamonds, featuring the trademark serpent that gracefully wraps around a woman's wrist, for $34,100.

For a more modestly priced option, yet just as cosmopolitan, there's the Bulgari Bulgari gold bangle bracelet with diamonds, available in pink or white gold. Both bangles are versatile enough to be flaunted by a man or woman, and each retails for $7770.

CHAINS & CHUNKY DESIGNS

Gold chains and chunky pieces galore also stood out at Fashion Week catwalks this past Spring in Paris, Milan and New York, establishing dominance as seasonal must-haves for fall and winter. Fashionistas are encouraged to layer their chains and bulk them up to accentuate the trend even more.

John Hardy has created a pair of matching pieces to fit the trend, which announce one's entrance but won't overwhelm the visual or the cultural senses. The Naga Collection Ruby, Gold and Sterling Silver Medium Dragon Braided Chain Bracelet displays a striking synergy of braided chains in woven sterling, clamped with the sharp bite of a Balinese dragon gleaming in 18-karat yellow gold and glowing with cabochon ruby eyes. This seven-inch work of wrist art is available for $2,600.

To accompany the bracelet, the Naga Collection Black Sapphire, Ruby, Gold and Sterling Silver Dragon Ring is a statement piece featuring a black-and-white-sapphire-encrusted sterling silver dragon design accented with radiant 18-karat gold and ruby eyes. The ring is 1.4 inches wide and is priced at $1,695.

Italian jewelry designer Marco Bicego provides a variation on the gold-chain theme with his 18-karat Yellow Gold Necklace from the Lunaria Collection. Measuring 18 inches in length and retailing for $7,410, the organically shaped 18-karat gold stones compose a radiant and timeless design.

Bicego has artfully combined the gold trend with another fall trend, dangling and large earrings, to create a look that's effortlessly chic. Pendant and drop earrings that cascade close to the shoulders suggest a sense of self-controlled elegance and dignity.

Marco Bicego's Lunaria Diamond and Yellow Gold Drop Earrings, $2,450, feature a disc of 18-karat yellow gold engraved with rich, radiant striations. Its striking detail is showcased within a frame of diamond pavé (0.21 tcw) and displayed on a wire of white gold, a drop of 1.15 inches, and width of 0.75 inch.

RINGS

Fashion editors agree that bold rings remain a trend, especially when they exhibit precious stones.

Temple St. Clair features its Diamond and Yellow Gold Vine Ring for $5,500, from the Classic Gold Collection. A gorgeous 18-karat yellow gold vine is edged at either side with glittering diamonds (0.8 tcw).

David Yurman's Starburst Medium Ring with Diamonds blends sterling silver and pavé diamonds (0.50 tcw). High style and stunning in its simplicity, it retails for $1,650.

Bulgari's day-into-night Intarsio ring showcases a mosaic of shapes, combining round and squared insertions of pavé diamonds and onyx elegantly outlined by white gold, for $8,150. The Intarsio collection reflects Mediterranean architecture, deeply influenced by the arabesque movement.

And, just to ensure men can get in on the trend, Marco Bicego's 'Cairo' Cigar Band Ring has a minimalist logo-etched setting which adds sleek balance to an artistically textured band, hand cast from bright 18-karat gold and priced at $3,370.

To really rock the styles for fall, keep accessories simple to make a trendy piece pop. The bolder a specific piece, the better it is to downplay complementary pieces.
