SUMMER2016

Publisher's Notes

By Timothy J. Pade • pade@dgnt.com

This summer we are pleased to feature GoDaddy founder Bob Parsons on our cover. An entrepreneur with multiple interests and talents, Parsons has embraced golf in a big way since stepping down as CEO of GoDaddy. In addition to purchasing Scottsdale Golf Club, newly named Scottsdale National, he began manufacturing high-end golf clubs under the Parsons Extreme Golf brand (PXG). His golf clubs are already among the hottest "must have" clubs on the market, with fans including touring pros and top amateurs. Driven to succeed, Parsons is intent on turning Scottsdale National into one of the premier golf facilities in the nation, and we have no doubt he will do exactly that. You can read more about him starting on pg. 12.

Although summer has traditionally been considered the "off season" in the desert, the fact is that these days it's every bit the busy season, with much going on to know, see and do. To start, the BNP Paribas Open has named a new tournament director, Tommy Haas. Haas is an accomplished tennis star who will make a huge and positive impact on the future of this major desert event. Read all about it starting on pg. 16.

Next, after a multiyear search, the CareerBuilder Challenge has also named its new leader, Nick Raffaele. Raffaele will have his hands full helping to revive this once popular Tour event, which lost much of its luster with the Tour's decision to eliminate celebrities from the field. A change in title sponsors every few years has confused patrons and gallery numbers have dropped. No longer do people schedule their parties and visits to the Coachella Valley to be entertained by the likes of Joe Pesci, Alice Cooper, Bill Murray and Justin Timberlake, to name a few of the past celebrities that drew thousands of people to the event. Raffaele is determined to once again make this tournament the standout event in the desert we all know it can and should be, and we look forward to working with him and supporting that effort.

Although the Clinton Foundation will no longer be a sponsor, it will continue its important work here in the Coachella Valley along with the Clinton Health Matters Initiative. In addition to naming Raffaele, the tournament announced that none other than Phil Mickelson would begin serving as official ambassador of the event starting in 2017. Read more about Raffaele and the tournament in our two articles, one starting on pg. 24 and the other on pg. 26.

With the rest of the country "booming" economically, we hope the golf business in the southwest will see the same upswing soon. Member numbers at many clubs continue to be less than what's necessary to meet critical expenses. Several facilities are in jeopardy of closing again this year unless they can get the membership support they need. The California drought also continues to be a problem for all communities but especially golf-course communities throughout the west and southwest. Water shortages have changed the landscape of our once lush and beautiful courses as well as the thriving desert we have loved for so long. We all need to help with water rationing and hopefully the weather gods will help too!

As always, we thank you for your continued support of Desert Golf & Tennis. Our goal is to continue to produce the very finest publication possible.

Bob Parsons

Is Here For a Good Time

By Françoise Rhodes

Along the way, he's given us GoDaddy and PXG golf clubs

“What’s in a name?” some may ask. For Bob Parsons, a lot! In May 2016, Parsons was ranked 906th on the world ranking of billionaires. As a lifelong entrepreneur, it was the success of the GoDaddy group of a web-hosting companies he founded in 1997 that stratosphered his wealth.

Ask Parsons how he decided on the name GoDaddy and there’s a moment of silence before he replies, “What’s that got to do with PXG?”

Obviously eager to talk about his obsession with golf and his luxury line of PXG (Parsons Xtreme Golf) golf clubs, Parsons eventually answers. “GoDaddy is a name we just pulled out of the sky because we wanted something catchy. There was Fat Daddy, Sugar Daddy, Big Daddy, but we settled on GoDaddy.”

Parsons was born in inner city Baltimore, Maryland, in 1950. After almost flunking out of high school, he joined the United States Marine Corps during the Vietnam War. In recognition of his service, he received the Purple Heart Medal, the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry and a Combat Action Ribbon. Upon returning home, he attended the University of Baltimore on the G.I. Bill and graduated magna cum laude with a degree in accounting. The university awarded him an honorary doctorate in 2008 and later named him a Distinguished Entrepreneur.

Parsons, who arrived for his interview at the exact appointed time, is passionate about all aspects of his life but is hesitant to discuss his success, his family or his generosity as a philanthropist. In 2012, he and his wife founded the Bob & Renee Parsons Foundation, which has since donated more than $72 million to a variety of causes.

What he’s eager to converse about, however, are golf and motorcycles, exuding a vibe that this interview is not about him but about his PXGs.

Quick-witted with a sense of humor, Parsons, who’s based in Scottsdale, Arizona, spins a tale about his introduction to golf. “My father introduced me to the game," he says. "I was minus three months old in my mother's womb. He used to talk about the game while I was there."

With a chuckle he says, "I'm teasing you about the 'when my mother was carrying me' business. It was probably when I was about 10 or so that my dad introduced me to the game. He was a scratch golfer. He would always say that you meet a better class of people in the fairway and that if you want to find your ball, hit it in the middle. I still remember him saying those things way back when."

Parsons, who is self-taught, says he carries a "nine and some change" handicap. He plays three to four times a week and has made two holes-in-one. The work on his game happens on the driving range, not the golf course, "I like to get it all sorted out on the range, even though the minute I leave the range to go to the golf course I seem to have a different swing," he notes with amusement. "I guess that's the nuance of the game that I have yet to understand. I hope to figure it out by the time I'm 70."

With a timeline of five years before that day, Parsons might accomplish his quest thanks to a golf course as his backyard. In 2013, he purchased The Golf Club of Scottsdale, a 292-acre members-only course. Since then, he has renamed it Scottsdale National and given the entire property a multimillion dollar makeover, which includes a second 18-hole course due to open in November.

Or perhaps his luxury line of PXGs is the answer. Hitting the market in 2015, these high-end clubs are already garnering praise from Tour players and a growing number of amateurs. A set is priced at about $5,000. "In some ways the PXGs are better than what I hoped for, and in some ways they are exactly what I had hoped for," Parsons says.

"When I started the company, I wanted golf clubs—and I'm talking about the whole range—that were noticeably better in terms of performance than any other clubs out there. As soon as people hit them they know they are better clubs. They hit longer, higher, are more accurate, softer, sexier looking and are more forgiving than any other maker's clubs," he continues. "The clubs have improved my game, making me enjoy the game a lot more. When you enjoy something, you're a lot better at it! I'm very proud of the clubs and I tell everyone about them."

Parsons says one of his most exciting times on the golf course was when he shot 71 with his son on the bag in an amateur event in Cedar Rapids. "My friends still don't believe I did it," he notes.

But he's not the only golfer in the family. "My wife Renee beats me all of the time," he says. "No, really, she does."

Sitting with Parsons, time seems irrelevant because you never know what story he'll tell next, a quality that draws a listener in. But in talking about golf, he offers insights that are more than just stories. Golf, he says, is about "The camaraderie and the complexity of the game because it's one you certainly can't master. With that said," he muses, "you can still occasionally play as well as anyone who as every played the game, and that's pretty special."

Parsons also loves the thrill of the ride—the motorcycle ride. He owns eight Harleys and 20 motorcycles overall, as well as Harley-Davidson dealerships in Arizona, Mississippi and Tennessee. His life has been one of working hard and playing hard.

"I've earned everything I've ever received," he says. "Very little was given to me. I've been working as long as I can remember. Whether it was delivering or selling newspapers, pumping gas, working in construction or in a factory, I've always been making my own money."

When asked to describe his life in one sentence, he ponders then replies with a grin, "I'm here for a good time." Perhaps that explains his choice of players in his ultimate foursome: "My father, my son and Jesus to get us out of trouble in case we happen to get into any."

SHOULD YOU HIRE

A REAL ESTATE AGENT OR LAWYER

TO BUY A HOUSE?

If you're selling a house in California, then it's critical that you have a licensed real estate agent list your property on the Multiple Listing Service (MLS) so that the seller obtains the best marketing exposure; but, if you're buying a house, you might be surprised to learn that using a lawyer is often a better alternative to the normal agency relationship.

Uncomplicating the Complicated in All Aspects of Business and Real Estate Law and Estate Planning

HERE'S WHY:

■ LAWYERS OWE THEIR CLIENTS HIGHER DUTIES THAN AGENTS

Real estate agents owe their clients typical fiduciary duties of good faith, fair dealing and full disclosure, but these duties are fairly limited. For example, agents in California can (and often do) represent both the buyer and seller of a home, or may even have a personal interest in the transaction, as long as the proper disclosures are made. Lawyers, on the other hand, are ethically bound to avoid conflicts of interest by representing only the interests of one party, and a lawyer may not have a personal interest in the transaction. Lawyers owe their clients the highest duties of loyalty and fidelity.

■ AGENTS CANNOT GIVE LEGAL ADVICE

Real estate agents are not authorized to practice law. This means that they can help negotiate and fill-in blanks on a form selected by the parties or act as a scrivener in recording the parties' agreement, but that's about it. Lawyers, on the other hand, are specifically trained and authorized to practice law without limitation. Moreover, lawyers owe their clients a duty of competency, including a duty of diligence that far exceeds the duties of a real estate agent. This means that lawyers are supposed to think about and anticipate potential problems in the transaction that agents often overlook (often resulting in expensive litigation), and lawyers must advise their clients accordingly.

■ AGENTS ARE PAID ONLY IF THE SALE IS COMPLETED

This may sound like a benefit to a homebuyer, but the fact that a real estate agent only earns a commission if the deal closes creates inherent conflict and bias in the agency relationship. The agent is obviously incentivized to make sure the transaction is completed so they can get paid, even if the closing may not be in the buyer's best interests. This conflict is even more pronounced when the agent represents both the buyer and seller in the transaction, since a buyer's interests are in direct conflict with the seller's interests—the buyer wants the lowest possible price while the seller wants the highest possible price. Recognizing this inherent conflict, some states actually prohibit such dual agency. Lawyers, on the other hand, typically charge an hourly or flat fee, such that they are unaffected by the transaction itself.

■ ANDERHOLT WHITTAKER LLP OFFERS THE BEST SOLUTION

The real estate lawyers at Anderholt Whittaker LLP are extremely knowledgeable about the local real estate market and have access to the same tools as real estate agents, but our focus is strictly put on you, as the buyer. We have a licensed real estate broker who is also an experienced and knowledgeable real estate lawyer in our ranks. We also offer flat-fee and hybrid contingency fee arrangements so that our homebuyers can realize the benefit of the commission based fee structure without suffering the detriment and inherent conflict that taints the typical agency relationship. Please don't hesitate to call us for a free consultation if you are looking for real estate in the Coachella Valley.

The BNP Paribas Open

Prepares to Accommodate a Growing Audience

Tommy Haas

During a career that spanned 20 years on the ATP Tour, Tommy Haas rose to the highest level of men's professional tennis. As a former World No. 2, he captured 15 ATP singles titles between 1999 and 2013. He also won a silver medal at the 2000 Summer Olympics, and he advanced to the quarterfinal stage of every Grand Slam at least once.

But on June 3, 2016, Steve Birdwell, COO of the BNP Paribas Open—the largest WTA and ATP World Tour combined two-week event in the world—announced that Haas would begin a new chapter of his career by serving as the Open's tournament director.

"As the tournament continues to grow and evolve in today's tennis landscape, we see a clear need for a tournament director who will engage with players, sponsors and fans in a deep and meaningful way, and we believe that Tommy is well-positioned to achieve these goals," Birdwell says. "He will be a great addition to the BNP Paribas Open team."

The announcement occurred less than three months after the conclusion of the 2016 BNP Paribas Open, which was highlighted by World No. 1 Novak Djokovic's fifth tournament victory, as well as Victoria Azarenka's defeat of Serena Williams. Attendance for the 2016 event reached 438,058, just two years after Indian Wells Tennis Garden opened its new 8,000-seat Stadium 2.

Stadium 1: Advancements for the Future

As a result of the public's response to Stadium 2, which includes enhanced technology, three fine-dining restaurants (one of which is the renowned Nobu) and 29 world-class courts, Indian Wells Tennis Garden is currently making significant improvements to Stadium 1 in preparation for the 2017 BNP Paribas Open.

Similar to Stadium 2, four premium walk-in concessions will be added to the main concourse and exterior of Stadium 1, so that new food concepts, along with a greater menu variety, will be available to tournament attendees. Concessions will also be created for Stadium 1's suite level, as well as the Loge level of the upper bowl.

"In addition, the existing open patios at the perimeter of the suite level will become shaded venues, offering tables and chairs with great views of the Tennis Garden grounds below and the mountains in the distance," Birdwell states.

In the meantime, each of the suites throughout Stadium 1 will be completely renovated. And the current open-air portion of the stadium's concourse level will be covered so that suites on the second level can be significantly expanded to include a larger food service and hospitality space, as well as private restrooms.

Each of the concourse and exterior restrooms will be replaced. Not only will the quantity of the facilities increase, they will also integrate some of the design aspects of the Stadium 2 restrooms, which were completed in 2014. In the past, Stadium 1's upper bowl did not even have restrooms, but that will change with the renovation.

Adjacent to the concourse, a new private club venue—available only for Indian Wells Tennis Garden members—will also be added in the South Landing of the stadium. It will include a shaded outdoor deck so that members can watch professionals play on the practice courts throughout the BNP Paribas Open. Additionally, an expanded workout area will be added for year-round members as well as for BNP Paribas Open participants.

To accommodate media members, the stadium's media room and broadcast booths will also be updated—no surprise given that outside of the four Grand Slam events, the BNP Paribas

Open is one of the world's most popular professional tennis tournaments.

All of these renovations will ensure that the state-of-the-art stadium, which includes more than 16,000 seats and 44 luxurious suites, will remain not only one of the world's largest stadiums (as it has been since it was built in 2000), but also one of the most renowned.

Building Upon the Tournament's Foundation

As Tommy Haas prepares for the next chapter of his career, he is looking forward to the future of the tournament that annually welcomes more than 300 of the sport's top players.

"There is a reason that the BNP Paribas Open has been voted tournament of the year by both tours for consecutive years, as the tournament and venue continue to provide a world-class experience for players, fans and sponsors," Haas says. "I look forward to joining the experienced tournament staff, building upon the foundation they have created and working to take the event to even greater heights."

Steve Birdwell agrees with Haas's outlook, adding that the tournament staff remains focused on ensuring that the BNP Paribas Open continues to provide a positive experience for everyone involved.

"Our goal always will be to enhance the overall experience for fans and players at the BNP Paribas Open and Indian Wells Tennis Garden, [so] each year we evaluate the needs for the following year," he notes. "We want to be sure to have the proper infrastructure to accommodate a growing audience and [that] all improvements benefit the event and the experience of our sponsors, players, fans and media."

Qualifying for the LPGA Tour Isn't for Sissies

"Challenging" is an understatement when it comes to the LPGA's qualifying process

By Matt McKay - Photos by Nikko Milkovic

Michelle Wie

Charley Hull

So you think you've got what it takes to make it on the LPGA Tour? The way the LPGA has set up its qualifying, would-be touring pros can learn a lot right away—starting with the first phase of qualifying, which takes place at Mission Hills Country Club in Rancho Mirage, California.

That's right. The home of the ANA Inspiration, the year's first LPGA major and one of the most prestigious tournaments in women's professional golf, is also the home of 2016 LPGA Tour Stage I Qualifying. The qualifying tournament features rounds at the club's Arnold Palmer Course, as well as the classic Dinah Shore Course, home course for the ANA Inspiration since its inception in 1972.

Consequently, it shouldn't take long for contestants to learn whether or not they have the skills and the mettle to pursue full-time Tour status. If they can make it at Mission Hills, chances are, they can make it anywhere.

In all, there are three stages of LPGA Tour qualifying. The 2016 schedule looks like this: Qualifying Tournament Stage I takes place Aug. 22-28 at Mission Hills Country Club; Qualifying Tournament Stage II takes place Oct. 17-23 at Plantation Golf and Country Club in Venice, Florida; and Qualifying Tournament Stage III occurs Nov. 28—Dec. 4 at LPGA International in Daytona Beach, Florida.

Applications for qualifying tournaments will be released approximately six to eight weeks in advance of each tournament. Players who require more information or have questions are encouraged to contact the LPGA office at 386.274.6200.

Last year's event at Mission Hills attracted 277 players from around the world, and just over 60 advanced to the second stage. At that point, the Stage I qualifiers run up against a new batch of players who, through prior accomplishment, are exempt through to Stage II. At the final stage, approximately 25 players will receive full LPGA status.

The other top finishers receive partial status, Symetra Tour status or Symetra Tour exemptions. The Symetra Tour is the LPGA's official developmental tour, and the top 10 finishers on Symetra's money list gain full-time LPGA Tour status (Category Nine on the LPGA priority list) for the following year. Former USC golfer Annie Park topped last year's Symetra money list.

The current system began in 2011, replacing a split-qualifying system that allowed for a much easier road to full status. Currently, the first stage is populated by players ranked outside the top 300 in the world, and by Symetra Tour players not among that tour's top 150 money winners. The minimum 60 qualifiers move on to the second stage, where Symetra Tour players inside the top 120 money winners, the top five on the Canadian Women's Tour Order of Merit, and Class A LPGA Tour players who have not competed in the last three years, among others, await.

If you're one of the top 80 (plus ties) at that stage, the reward of guaranteed tour status—whatever Tour that may be—awaits in the final stage, as it does for the Class A LPGA Tour players looking to enhance their status and the top Symetra Tour players who have not otherwise secured their LPGA Tour card.

If you're not, you'll receive some sort of Symetra Tour status along with those who made the cut in the first stage.

If after assimilating all these facts, you still believe you're ready to run it up the LPGA flagpole, there's more. Be aware that the temperatures in the Coachella Valley are typically over 110 degrees Fahrenheit in August. You have to be more than capable talent-wise. You have to be tough, strong, prepared, determined and on your game—just to get through the first stage.

The Enduring Legacy of the Classic Club

The course has a pedigree and history that make golfers of all calibers want to play it

Standing on the 18th tee at the Classic Club contemplating the fairway and unnerving Arnold Palmer-style bunker complexes left and right of the landing zone, it's easy to imagine what it was like when crowds lined the fairway on those crisp January Sunday afternoons, anticipating the drive of the incoming champion.

One can almost see the grandstands behind the 18th, the television towers offering a line to the green as the potential champion and his caddie determined which wedge would be best to nick a sticky chip off the downhill lie close enough for a tap-in birdie that would allow them to lift the championship trophy.

There is plenty of room for huge galleries right, left and behind. There's more room on the 10th tee for big grandstands, and on the ninth green, where crowds could pack in around the green for a beautiful afternoon of professional golf in the desert winter.

While those visions may never be reality again, the tournament patrons and Tour pros' loss is your gain. Nowadays, any player with the means and time can play the former Tour stop, though the only gallery members are roving geese and grounds crew staff.

Opened in 2006 for the express purpose of becoming the home of the Coachella Valley's one PGA Tour stop, the Bob Hope Chrysler Classic, Classic Club is now available to any player with enough dough to cover the greens fee. Amenities including the spectacular Tuscan-style clubhouse, critically-acclaimed Bellatrix restaurant and management provided by Scottsdale-based Troon Golf have helped make the 7,322-yard championship course a must-play for visitors and a summer favorite of discriminating locals.

The facility begins hinting at its PGA Tour roots even before the first tee. The practice facility is top-notch, with all the necessary prep and training areas. A large, four-sided clock allows players to keep track of their practice regimen and tee times, not just like a Tour player but like a major competitor.

Like all golf courses with a story to tell, Classic Club begins to unfold on the first hole, revealing its personality and hints of what's to come. Eventually, players will be asked to conquer par 3s varying in length and direction, par 5s that are as tough as any set in the valley and par 4s that go right, left and sometimes straight ahead. But on the 408-yard (from the back tee) No. 1, a par 4 nicknamed San Jacinto, players take on their first dogleg left, hopefully avoiding the beautiful but dangerous creek and rocky water feature skirting the entirety of the hole's left side.

Such is the nature of the course for the remainder of play. Twelve holes have water considerations, 10 of them fully in-play for the duration of the hole as fairways either parallel or wrap around the hazards—a design thread common among Arnold Palmer-Ed Seay designs. All the while, players get 360-degree mountain views and, during the season, some of the best landscaping and playing conditions available on earth.

One can only wonder what story might have been written for the course had the weather, specifically the wind, been kinder to the facility when its Tour window was open.

General Manager Greg Rubino

Wind-based complaints from pros already concerned about the course's distance from the other La Quinta courses in the Hope rotation finally wore down PGA Tour officials, who acquiesced and concocted a new course rotation in 2009 that excluded the Classic Club. On a local radio program in 2009, Arnold Palmer said he believed he "may not be around to see the Classic Club play like it's supposed to," clearly alluding to the course's need for strategic trees to grow and provide protection from the wind, and for the course to become comfortable on the ground upon which it sits.

Head professional Dawson Hess says the facility doesn't use its former Hope status as a marketing tool. However, based on the booked-up tee sheets from January to April and popularity among locals during the off-season, it's evident that the public still clamors to play the course with the Tour pedigree. It's listed by Golfweek as one of the Top Courses You Can Play in Southern California, and by Desert Golf & Tennis as one of the Top 10 Best Desert Golf Courses.

"The course itself, being designed for the PGA Tour, provides a championship golf experience from five sets of tees, so it can be enjoyed by golfers of all levels of experience," Hess says. "We always keep it in the same conditions we did for the tournament, and our players know and expect that."

The Tour's pros and gallery members certainly would have enjoyed a meal at Bellatrix. The restaurant offers laid-back elegance with prices to please customers regardless of their bank balance. The lunch menu features salads, sandwiches and rock shrimp tacos, and dinner entrees include Naval Orange Salmon, Mustard BBQ Short Ribs and rack of lamb. The menu is complimented by a wine list hand-picked by General Manager Gregory Rubino.

"The restaurant is great in that it provides a high-end dining experience but at lower pricing than you might expect," Hess says. "Happy hour is one of the most popular in the valley, and the wine list and pricing along with the wine probably not can't be matched by anyone in the area. Greg's a wine connoisseur and has made all the decisions on our wine menu, and everyone seems quite happy with his choices."

Whether in the restaurant, the grill at the turn, the practice facility, or the 18th tee, you'll experience professional treatment at Classic Club on and off the course. Add galleries and sponsor tents as your imagination permits.

Nick Raffaele Has Big Plans for the CareerBuilder Challenge

The new executive director is all about making the tournament great again

Nick Raffaele, new executive director of the CareerBuilder Challenge and new CEO of Desert Classic Charities, has a vision for the PGA Tour tournament: embrace its past legacy while returning it to national prominence.

What devolved into “just a golf tournament” is now, under Raffaele’s watchful eye, slated to be a complete experience for fans, charity, the community, players and sponsors. “I want the tournament to be more than a winner walking away with a check,” Raffaele says. “It’s going to include food, wine, music, celebrity and, of course, golf. We’re lucky to have the tools and support we need, and with that I’m confident that we will make it great again.”

The CareerBuilder Challenge is the Coachella Valley’s longest-running charitable event. Organized and operated by Desert Classic Charities, it has raised more than $57 million for Eisenhower Medical Center and other local groups since its inception as the Palm Springs Golf Classic in 1960. Best known as the Bob Hope Chrysler Classic starting in 1965 and the Bob Hope Classic through 2011, the tournament became the Humana Challenge in 2012 and the CareerBuilder Challenge in 2016. It has seen a fair amount of change in recent years.

In its early days, the tournament was famous for a well-attended celebrity pro-am and five daily rounds of 18-hole competition vs. the Tour standard of four rounds, making it unique among Tour events. When Humana signed on as title sponsor in 2012, the format was changed to a traditional four-round tournament but played over three different courses.

Raffaele is no stranger to the tournament or the industry, having worked for equipment manufacturing giant Callaway Golf, where he was vice president of global sports marketing. He managed relationships with professional players on the PGA, Champions and LPGA tours for the Carlsbad, California, company, and he helped grow Callaway’s brand through event management and charitable endeavors. Prior to his time with Callaway, Raffaele managed PGA Tour development for Spalding Sports.

He is originally from Ft. Worth, Texas and attended Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene, Texas, where he played as a U.S. Amateur.

While Raffaele is new to the executive director position, he has attended and been involved with the tournament since 2000. Now, after 13 years of splitting his time between San Diego and Texas, he will be relocating permanently to the Coachella Valley.

Raffaele is not the only new name associated with the tournament. It was recently announced that World Golf Hall of Famer Phil Mickelson will serve as official ambassador of the tournament starting in 2017, replacing President Bill Clinton.

The 2017 CareerBuilder Challenge is scheduled for January 16-22 at the TPC Stadium and Jack Nicklaus Tournament courses at PGA West, and at La Quinta Country Club. Jason Dufner is the defending champion. Dufner won his fourth PGA Tour title—his first since claiming the 2013 PGA Championship—at the 2016 event.

Title sponsor CareerBuilder is well recognized as a global employment leader. CareerBuilder specializes in cutting-edge, human-resources software and helps companies with every step of the recruitment process from acquire to hire, and helps individuals with the search and placement process.

Desert Classic Charities, the charitable entity that organizes the CareerBuilder Challenge, supports structured mentoring programs for children, social services, food and safe shelter for the less fortunate.

Raffaele is excited to work with the community to bring a “new vibe, greater energy, a strong field and exceptionally high value to fans and sponsors so that the CareerBuilder Challenge becomes an enhanced encounter for everyone.”

CareerBuilder Challenge

Says Farewell to the Clinton Foundation

Change comes yet again to the venerable tournament

If you're a Coachella Valley-based fan of the PGA Tour, forget keeping up with the Joneses. You've got your hands full staying on top of what's happening with the CareerBuilder Challenge.

Golf fans that may have been living under a rock since 2009 would be astonished at the differences between the 2016 event and their last encounter with what was a withering PGA Tour stop. After 50 years without significant change, the event has since been made over, and made over again, since the end of the last decade, and it will roll out yet another new look and structure in 2016, the third such shuffle in the last seven years.

Saying goodbye is the Clinton Foundation, which came aboard in conjunction with health-care corporation Humana in 2012, relieving the PGA Tour of sponsorship responsibilities. The Tour had taken over the tournament after longtime sponsor Chrysler pulled out during the financial crisis of 2008-2009. The foundation held healthcare symposiums and helped promote healthy lifestyle initiatives during the tournament in partnership with Humana.

Despite the departure from its tournament sponsorship role, the foundation and the Clinton Health Matters Initiative will continue working in the Coachella Valley with the goal of improving the health and wellness of valley residents. The Health Matters Annual Activation Summit will continue next year in a location to be determined.

"I have treasured the opportunity over the last five years for the Clinton Foundation to be part of this storied tournament that honors Bob Hope's legacy of service in the Coachella Valley," says Bill Clinton, 42nd President of the United States and president of his namesake foundation.

"I'm honored that we could build on that legacy by working with dedicated partners to bring great golf to the desert and improve the health and wellness of nearly 400,000 local residents. I look forward to continuing the foundation's work in the Coachella Valley, and to seeing the exciting new chapter of the tournament's history that will be written with Phil Mickelson joining on as a partner with the PGA Tour, Desert Classic Charities and CareerBuilder."

Stepping in for the Clinton Foundation will be longtime Tour professional and Southern California resident Phil Mickelson, who will serve as tournament ambassador beginning in 2017. The full intent and responsibilities of that role are still being ironed out. Almost certainly they will include Mickelson's participation in the tournament and pre-tournament festivities and functions, as well as his perceived ability to lure other top pros to the desert in January.

"I'm very excited to undertake the role of tournament ambassador and look forward to doing what I can to help with the continued growth of the CareerBuilder Challenge," Mickelson says. "Our family loves the area and we have a home in the Coachella Valley, so this is a natural fit for me."

Also in is Nick Raffaele, who assumes the roles of tournament executive director and CEO of Desert Classic Charities, the beneficiary of the tournament's charitable fundraising. Most recently, Raffaele served as vice president of global sports marketing for Callaway Golf, where he was the link between the company and PGA Tour players. Prior to his time at Callaway, Raffaele served as PGA Tour development manager for Spalding Sports.

"I appreciate the trust that John Foster (president of Desert Classic Charities) and the rest of the DCC board have placed in me to carry the CareerBuilder Challenge and Desert Classic Charities into the future," Raffaele says. "Desert Classic Charities is a tremendous organization with a long history of positively impacting this area. I look forward to moving my family to the Coachella Valley and helping the event become even better."

Bob Hope, the tournament's namesake sponsor for nearly 50 of the tournament's initial years, passed away in July 2003, and with him went much of the tournament's historical context as well as its aging celebrity base. Since the early 1960s, Hope had served as the tournament's driving force, stacking the celebrity field that in turn lured the game's top professionals. After struggling to find its footing through the early years of the new century, the tournament hit on a much-needed corporate validation with the Humana contract. Although Humana left prior to its contract term expiring, its faith in the tournament right when it was most needed will not be forgotten by anyone who values the Tour's participation in the valley.

Hope probably wouldn't recognize the place now. But if someone were to inform him of the tournament's pre-Humana struggles, he'd likely come around to the notion that the way things are being done now are just what the tournament needs in this time.

Can America keep the Claret Jug?

By Susanne Kemper

Last year's Open Champion, Zach Johnson, certainly hopes so.

Ayrshire's famed Royal Troon Golf Club welcomes the 145th Open Championship, July 10-17. The Open, golf's most international major championship, has qualifying events on all continents.

Founded in 1878, Royal Troon is one of the toughest tests in The Open rota after Carnoustie and Royal Birkdale. The course is set along Troon's coastline, offering spectacular views across the firth to Ailsa Craig and the Isle of Arran. The club has 36 holes of championship links golf, plus a nine-hole short course. An all-male membership bastion, Royal Troon first hosted The Open in 1923, and will host its ninth this July. It replaced nearby Prestwick where The Open was first held.

Troon's Old Course is a classic out-and-back layout over spectacular Ayrshire links terrain with deep rough, lovely broom and gorse. It stretches over 7,000 yards and wind is a critical element. The front nine is better scoring as wind against the players on the return makes Troon as tough a finish as any that exists.

The course's famed "Postage Stamp," the 123-yard, par-3 8th hole, starts from an elevated tee and plays over a gully to a long, narrow green tucked into a sandhill with two bunkers defending the left, a monster crater bunker blocking the approach and two deep bunkers on the right. The tee shot must be on the green or it's certain grief as many golfing greats have discovered here at the shortest hole in Open Championship golf. In 1973, Gene Sarazen, then 71, made a hole-in-one here, making up for his 50-year disappointment of missing Open qualifying at Royal Troon due to ferocious winds.

Royal Troon also has the longest hole in Championship golf, "Turnberry," the 601-yard 6th, a par 5 with views of Turnberry lighthouse. A straight drive off the tee is essential, then a fairway wood slightly left opens up a straightforward approach to the long, narrow green.

In 1962, Arnold Palmer's brilliant and aggressive Open title defense at Royal Troon was epic. He scored a record 276 on the fast, sunbaked fairways and cemented the British Open's global reputation and visibility thanks to the monumental galleries he attracted. Palmer's debut at the 1960 Open Championship at St. Andrews, where he was runner up to Kel Nagle, also helped propelled his own worldwide popularity with fans. Having already won the 1960 Masters and U.S. Open, he was going for the mythic Grand Slam. But it wasn't until 1961 at Royal Birkdale where Palmer's attacking, flash-buckling style in wild weather would triumph at The Open and win the Claret Jug.

And Americans have won every Open Championship played at Royal Troon since Palmer—Tom Weiskopf, Tom Watson, Mark Calcavecchia, Justin Leonard and Todd Hamilton all prevailed at Royal Troon. That bodes well for Zach Johnson, who will attempt to defend his title won last year at St. Andrews. Johnson, who called it "the most fun tournament I play," won in dramatic style in a four-hole play-off over Louis Oosthuizen and Marc Leishman. Jordan Spieth, who just missed the playoff, came up short in his quest to win the third leg of the Grand Slam.

Spieth is hungry after losing the last three Majors. Other U.S. players that could be in the mix this year are Rickie Fowler, Bubba Watson, Dustin Johnson, 2013 Open Champion Phil Mickelson, and Brooks Koepka. Or Tiger? Rumors are flying that he'll be playing.

Australian golfers who will no doubt go for the 2016 Claret Jug will be current World No. 1 Jason Day and World No. 7 Adam Scott. South African players likely to be in the mix are Ernie Els, who has won multiple Claret Jugs, and 2010 Open Champion Oosthuizen. And of course there's 2014 Open Champion Rory McIlroy, from Northern Ireland. Danny Willett, winner of the 2016 Masters Tournament, will lead the English stars—World No. 10 Justin Rose and Lee Westwood.

No one knows who will lift the Claret Jug at Royal Troon this year, but the gallery will undoubtedly roar with excitement as the royal battle commences between today's stars, just as it did in the glory days of "Arnie's charges."

New Amateur Event at the 2016 Open Championship

The nine-hole tournament will kick off this year's British Open at Royal Troon

The RGA, which together with the USGA governs the sport of golf worldwide, has created a nine-hole Open Amateur Championship Tournament. The inaugural event will be played Saturday July 9 at Royal Troon Golf Club. Players will compete over nine holes at the historic Ayrshire links on the eve of The 145th British Open. In 2017, the event will be expanded to include golf clubs in Great Britain and Ireland, with players being given the opportunity to qualify at nine-hole events held by the RGA's affiliated national associations in the U.K.

Padraig Harrington, double Open Champion, enthused, "For amateur golfers to be able to play The Open venue in championship condition before the best players in the world is a fantastic initiative. I'm sure this new competitive format will encourage more people to get out on the golf course and play nine-hole golf."

RGA's research showed that 60 percent of golfers would play more and enjoy it more if it took less time. Younger players want playing time reduced. Thanks for listening, RGA!

The above statement probably surprises you. It doesn't sound logical. So here is the truth: While many forms of exercise—including several varieties of yoga—are individual in nature, an integral part of the Bikram Yoga class is the group energy it generates. It is not a go-at-your-own-pace type of class. It is very structured and relies on all the individual students to make up the whole. Students are lead through the series in a specific way to keep the class moving together and forward. They understand that they are sharing their energy with their fellow students while at the same time absorbing energy from others. They are all down in the trenches together, so to speak.

As discussed in previous issues, Bikram Yoga is beneficial for golfers and tennis players in part because of its mind-body connection, which aids in improving focus and concentration. While golf and tennis are primarily individual sports, these athletes benefit from Bikram Yoga—an individual practice with a team effort.

If I had a nickel for every time I heard students say they were about to go down (sit a posture out) until they felt the energy of the people around them forging ahead, I'd be rich. It's this energy, this camaraderie that makes Bikram Yoga a team sport and invaluable for individual as well as team accomplishments.

Within a team there must be individual drive and commitment. Each team member must be at the top of his or her game for the team to be successful. Bikram Yoga forces one to look in the mirror and concentrate; it creates an environment that utilizes group energy and empathy to drive each member of the group to the next level.

Football and basketball coaches have brought their teams to Bikram Yoga classes to work on individual strength and flexibility, but also to unify the group in working together to give and receive energy. Additionally, team members sharpen their cognitive skills, and that in turn enhances the team's cohesive ability. While only one player crosses into the end zone for a touchdown, it takes the collective teamwork and group energy of the others to make it happen.

Teams, however, are not just on a court or field. Real life also involves teamwork, such as at the workplace where focus and concentration are as valuable as they are in sports. And the benefits go both ways. As golfers master focus on the golf ball with a swing to coordinate proper contact, this skill translates off the course, too, enhancing focus and awareness at work and in other parts of life.

Additionally, there's the overall health aspect with its many benefits. Prevention, for example, helps support good overall health, which helps to increase optimal productivity. A smart CEO will offer corporate memberships at health and wellness facilities to keep employees fit physically, emotionally and psychologically. Bikram Yoga offers the complete package. As Bikram Choudhury, founder of this form of yoga touts, the Bikram method is a complete mind-body fitness program, "inside out, bones to skin, fingertips to toes."

Vincent Battaglia, CEO of Renova Solar, one of the fastest growing privately held companies in the nation, agrees. He has had a corporate membership with Bikram Yoga El Paseo for over two years. As a strong advocate for the Bikram method for his personal health and wellbeing over the past 10 years, he wanted to share this fitness regime with his employees.

"I remember taking my first class in 2006 when I started Renova, as an avenue to relieve my stress as I couldn't afford massage and such," he says. "It became a very big part of keeping me aligned physically and mentally while building my company."

Renova Solar now pays for an unlimited membership for all employees. Sometimes they come in solo to take a class and sometimes in groups with their fellow employees, sweating it out right alongside their CEO.

"My boss is right there with us, down in the trenches sweating it out and paying for our fitness," says longtime Bikram student and Renova Solar consultant Jesse Kruszynski. "How cool is that?"

It's not surprising that a company that cares about its employees' health and wellbeing is successfully soaring to the top. And how proud we are at Bikram Yoga El Paseo that Renova, the first company in the country to be accredited by the leading national solar nonprofit NABCEP, has joined our yoga family and set such a great example for the community as a whole to take better care of themselves, their loved ones and their employees!

As healthcare costs rise we will likely see more of this approach, and hopefully more companies will add health club memberships to their employee benefits packages.

To learn more about the benefits of Bikram Yoga or about corporate memberships at Bikram Yoga El Paseo, call 760.776.1440 or visit bikramyogapalmdesert.com

Facing Challenging Tee Shots with the Driver

There are two theories behind executing challenging tee shots with your driver.

- 1) Aim toward the trouble and then spin your ball away from that trouble.
- 2) Aim toward lesser trouble and then spin your ball toward the fairway while not over spinning it into trouble.

The Tee shot on the 18th hole at PGA West Stadium Course is a great example to test these two theories, with water looming along the entire left side of the fairway and bunkers up the right.

Theory 1: Aim at prominent trouble and spin the ball away from it.

This is a technique that I enjoy playing and challenging myself with in my own game, a technique I practiced when I was learning from Hall of Fame golfer Johnny Miller. He would have me go out on the golf course and literally aim at the trouble and make myself spin the ball away from it.

In the case of No. 18 at PGA West, I like to aim at the water going up the left side of the fairway and swing as if I'm actually trying to hit the ball into the edge of that water. As I'm swinging through, however, I intentionally leave the toe of the clubface open through impact, which promotes a cut spin on the ball. Since my swing path is moving in the direction of the water, my ball launches straight as if it's going to go into the water. But because I leave the toe open, my ball spins away from the water and lands safely in the middle of the fairway.

You can see at the top of my backswing that I have my left wrist flat with a slightly open clubface. As I make my way into the finish of my swing, my left wrist is still flat, which means I have "held off" that clubface from turning over. The holding off of the clubface helps me produce a slight cut spin on the ball.

Theory 2: Aim at lesser trouble and spin the ball to the fairway

The tricky thing about playing the tee shot on No. 18 at PGA West Stadium Course is that the tee aims you to the right where a group of bunkers wait for your golf ball. The fairway angles back to the left. This hole is calling out to players to hit a hard draw, which is right up my alley.

In my setup, I like to aim at a group of small bunkers in the distance, which is a little right of the fairway. These bunkers are my intended launch line on my ball's flight. At the top of the backswing, you can see that my left wrist is flat. But near the finish of my follow-through, I have "released" my left wrist so it is no longer flat and I have rotated the clubface to promote a draw spin.

My goal is to make sure that I don't "over spin" the ball across the fairway into the water, so I need to have a good feel for how much to release the angle of the clubface to promote the appropriate amount of spin. Ball spin is controlled by how much the wrist releases the clubface. In this case, I released my wrist just enough so the clubface would be at a slightly closed angle to promote a slight draw spin on the ball, just enough to have the ball spin into the fairway.

Buyer's Market

Hits the Coachella Valley

By Jennie Robinson

There are good deals so buy while the market and weather are hot

After a dismal selling season with excessive inventory and a lack of buyers willing to commit, the real estate market has now shifted to a buyer's market. Sellers have become realistic in dropping their prices. The average home in this area, which typically sells for 93 percent of the asking price, is now selling for 10 to 15 percent less than its price at the beginning of the listing.

That means there are opportunities for buyers to grab some great deals. Be aware, however, that local buyers have new competition for these deals. Thanks to hot real estate markets in southern California coastal areas and Northern California, the Coachella Valley is seeing a big influx of buyers from these regions. The Pacific Northwest is also experiencing a hot market and many buyers are coming down from there as well.

Traditionally high season has been considered to be November through April. The real estate season is now shifting to April through October, and as prices lower, properties that have been sitting for months are now receiving multiple offers.

Tech-savvy buyers who watch the market have commented on how many properties have gone pending.

Golf is still the biggest draw in the Coachella Valley, which offers more than 150 golf courses. But other activities, including hiking, biking, fine dining and music festivals are now attracting a new type of buyer to the desert lifestyle, while other buyers are coming for the area's celebrated mid-century architecture.

The luxury market from Palm Springs to La Quinta has experienced a boom in the past 120 days, with 45 homes closing at over $2 million and three at the Madison Club in La Quinta going for more than $7 million. And several famous celebrity estates have sold with multiple offers, including the Kirk and Ann Douglas estate in Palm Springs that closed for $3.5 million.

At the lower end of the market, more than 1,500 homes have sold for under $500,000 in the last 90 days.

Whether you are looking for a small condo or a large estate, there is a motivated seller out there with a home that can meet your needs. If you are willing to bear the heat for a short time, you can make a great buy now and be ready to enjoy the valley's so-called high season when it rolls back around.

The key to finding the best deals out there is a realtor who is knowledgeable about what has been happening in the market over the long haul. Sometimes, for example, homes are taken off of the market during the summer even if the owner still wants to sell. A good realtor will have the inside information about these and other homes.

What are you waiting for? Bring your water and your checkbook and let me "swing a deal for you!" For more information on any Coachella Valley real estate, call 760.413.5209, email Swingadeal4you@aol.com or log onto jennierobinson.com

Summer visitors and locals also enjoy happy hours, small bites, and exuberant cocktails, to say nothing of miraculous views, at an assortment of restaurants across the valley.

Asian-oriented restaurant, Mikado Japanese Steakhouse and Sushi Bar at JW

Marriott Desert Springs Resort & Spa (74-855 Country Club Drive, Palm Desert, 760-341-2211), caters to early birds trying to beat the desert heat with special prices on sea scallops, shrimp, chicken, steak and halibut, available Sunday through Thursday for 5 and 5:30 p.m. reservations. These dinners include entrees plus shrimp flambé, vegetables, steamed rice and ice cream with green tea on request. For later diners, the Mikado Special is all the rave: think shrimp, lobster and filet mignon served with miso soup or salad and more. The "Love me long time" sushi roll is also a hit. This shrimp tempura roll with spicy tuna, tempura flakes, eel sauce and spicy mayo is a crowd pleaser and shareable. Chef Scott Guo specializes in Teppanyaki with a particularly good arm for aiming shrimp right into the mouths of guests. To accentuate the food, order a Dragon's Breath cocktail made of Absolut citron vodka, strawberry nigori, fresh citrus and strawberries. marriott.com/hotels/travel/ctdca-jw-marriott-desert-springs-resort-and-spa/

At Sirocco Pizza Company (SPC) (44400 Indian Wells Lane, Indian Wells, 760.773.4444) in the Renaissance Indian Wells Resort & Spa, Chef Ryan Coffey serves up eclectic Italian cuisine along with lakeside views of the Santa Rosa Mountains. For summer this includes lighter fare, such as organic roasted beet salad and primavera Neapolitan-style pizza. During Social Hour, 5-7 p.m. daily, grab some garlic pizza knots with an Old Ironside made of Sailor Jerry spiced rum, pineapple juice and soda water over ice. marriott.com/hotels/travel/pspsr-renaissance-indian-wells-resort-and-spa/

How to Stay Cool in the Desert This Summer

By Christine Loomis

Temps can reach triple digits, but cool fun abounds across desert communities

La Quinta Resort offers chilled pools

Hiking on Mount San Jacinto

Two Bunch Palms Resort & Spa

Not long ago, summer in the desert was a time when most residents fled to cooler climates and many businesses shut down until high season rolled around again. Not so today. Summer in the desert is an amazing time to enjoy all that's available—and with fewer people around and often the most fun and the best deals of the year to be had.

Coachella Valley

Mount San Jacinto, 10,834 feet high, can cool down valley dwellers in a matter of minutes, thanks to the Palm Springs Aerial Tramway. Temperatures at the top are 30 to 40 degrees cooler than the valley floor, making summer hiking, picnicking and camping an utterly pleasant experience, even if valley temps reach triple digits. The tram covers the 2.5-mile trip in about 10 minutes, slowly rotating as it goes for stellar photo ops. Mt. San Jacinto State Park has 54 miles of hiking trails within its 14,000 acres, many accessible from the mountain station. If hiking isn't for you, head up to the cool for a picnic with sweeping views across the valley. pstramway.com

Do you like your summer liquids perfectly chilled? We suggest a get-away stay and a plunge into the pools at La Quinta Resort & Club, a Waldorf Astoria resort in the Coachella Valley. While the hotel's 41 pools are heated in winter, they are delightfully chilled in the summer months, offering an excellent way to stay cool during the summer sizzle. laquintaresort.com

At legendary spa Two Bunch Palms, channel your inner artist and emerging oenophile with programs that combine guided art instruction and wine tasting—a fabulously cool combo. Victoria Nelson offers the Vino & Van Gogh program while Suzanne Barber engages Two Bunch guests with Wine, Watercolor & Wonder. twobunchpalms.com

Paradise Found

Las Ventanas al Paraiso in Cabo San Lucas isn't just a window to paradise it is paradise

Las Ventanas al Paraiso translates as windows to paradise, and the aptly named resort in Cabo San Lucas, Mexico, is just that—a luxury property set in paradise and one of the finest resort hotels in Mexico, if not the world. In fact, Condé Nast Traveler named it the Best International Resort in 2016.

Gone are all signs of damage from hurricane Odile, which swept across the Baja peninsula in September 2014. Odile left more than $1.22 billion dollars in damage in its wake, much of it to the resorts and golf courses that dot this renowned vacation destination.

Las Ventanas is open for business and continues to provide unparalleled service, thanks in large part to dedicated staff members who epitomize the spirit and aura of this special place. The love, dedication and enthusiasm of the staff are obvious to vacationers and translate to service that is second to none.

Owner Ty Warner, billionaire toy manufacturer and founder of the world famous Beanie Babies, made sure his staff would not suffer as a result of the hurricane. He paid them full wages, including tips, for the entire time the property was closed. This is a place where staff truly is family, according to resort manager Hector Serrato, and when disaster struck, the family pulled together. “This family did whatever was necessary to help rebuild this property,” Serrato says.

The Forbes Five Star, AAA Five Diamond resort is managed by Dallas-based Rosewood Hotels & Resorts, which ensures that each of the 71 individually decorated rooms are appointed with the finest of everything, from pillows and bedding to bath salts, along with our favorite tequila, Clase Azul, which comes as a welcoming toast at the start of a stay.

The restaurants and Tequila Bar provide ample fare for any palate, from fresh seafood and ceviche to steaks and lamb. Exquisite cuisine is served against a dramatic backdrop of the Pacific panorama. Both restaurants are oceanfront with mesmerizing sunset views and trees lit up with Mexican ornaments and lights.

There are a variety of rooms, junior suites and villas to choose from, with prices ranging from $693 to as much as $35,000 per green and a 10-person glass Jacuzzi overlooking the property, with views up and down the coastline.

The mansion swimming pool area offers an expansive palapa for relaxing and dining, and the pool itself is almost as large as the resort's pool. It includes a lounging area built into the center with multicolored pillows and a couch.

For all that it offers in luxury and amenities, the true magic of this property lies in the staff and service. It's the service that makes Las Ventanas al Paraíso unquestionably the finest property in Cabo San Lucas. From the complimentary neck and head massage that are offered upon arrival, everything is uphill from there. Should you need reservations to anywhere or for anything during your stay, the staff will take care of it, and when it comes time to leave, a Las Ventanas "family member" will greet you at the airport and assist with everything from ticketing through to security to ensure a stress-free airport experience.

In short, this is not just a resort; it is an experience. Every moment and every detail has been thought of, and it is first-class in every way. Like all guests who have night. A separate adults-only area provides the ultimate in serenity, and there are villas with personal Jacuzzis and upper level outdoor sun decks. The signature oceanfront villas offer a full kitchen, outdoor shower and a private pool with Jacuzzi.

To say that this resort has it all is not an overstatement.

As a luxury addition to the property, Warner recently built a 28,000-square-foot mansion on the beach, a two-bedroom crown jewel to this world-class property with every detail hand selected by managing director, Frederic Vidal. Vidal has overseen all facets of the construction and design of this spectacular home, from the Indian silks and rugs to the technology. Included is a media room replete with a gaming area with pinball machines, as well as a projection set and 95-inch plasma TV.

To enter the mansion you walk through an immense 360-degree vegetation wall with a fern grotto and cooling water. The front door opens up to a decorative infinity pool and a ceiling that opens with the push of a button.

The library ceiling is a Moroccan-style, sterling silver-overlay carved into an art form. Gas windows in the master bathroom can be translucent one minute and privacy glass the next, depending on what the guest wants. Look up and the glass ceiling provides views to the lap pool on the roof. For full-on entertaining, guests can take the wood-carved elevator to the rooftop, which features a bar with pool table and a dining area, a huge putting been privileged to stay here, I hope to revisit the windows to paradise again very soon.

Mercedes-Benz F 015

Luxury in Motion

The future is (almost) here

Mercedes-Benz isn't waiting for the future to arrive—it's designing it now. The company's new concept car, the F 015 Luxury in Motion, is leaving convention on the curb and ushering in new standards for vehicles. At last year's Consumer Electronics Show, the F 015 showed what tomorrow's drivers would want before they even knew it was possible.

The F 015 expects autonomous driving to become ubiquitous and is unashamed of its embrace with the yet unattained. The entire concept of the cabin relies on technology to catch up with society.

"Anyone who focuses solely on the technology has not yet grasped how autonomous driving will change our society. The car is growing beyond its role as a mere means of transport and will ultimately become a mobile living space," says Dr. Dieter Zetsche, chairman of the board of management of Daimler AG and head of the Mercedes-Benz Cars Division.

The exterior of the F 015 is proportioned more like a living room than a car. In fact, Mercedes is calling the F 015 Luxury in Motion a "personal retreat" in its early press releases. Four sleek, rotating lounge chairs allow for face-to-face configuration or swivel to resemble the car you drive today. A stretched front end and low roof teeter on the sporty but precariously. The F 015 isn't a Maybach or AMG. This is something all together new.

The front-end lighting is straight out of Knight Rider of the 1980s. LED light modules glow crystal blue when in autonomous mode or white when controlled manually. The windshield is flat rather than curved and slanted at about 45 degrees. The wheelbase is roughly 142 inches—longer than a G-Class SUV.

You could consider your commute a gift if the F 015 makes it to production. The lounge-like area inside will cater to passengers who want productivity in lieu of windshield time. Time behind the wheel not your cup of tea? Have a cup of tea with your carpool mates while you check the stock market on one of six built-in touch screens.

Of course, the luxury aspect won't get dismissed in the future. An open-pore walnut wood floor contrasts with the white nappa leather interior. More glass and metal is incorporated than Mercedes is accustomed to using, giving you a transport into a futuristic ambience.

Saloon doors highlight the fact that the cockpit is no longer the centerpiece of tomorrow's automobile. The pivoting lounge seats also swing outward 30 degrees when the doors open, allowing for more room. The steering wheel retracts into the dash when not in use by the driver and extends outward when in manual mode.

Touch screens throughout the vehicle gather data about the surroundings and the occupants continuously. Sensors recognize passengers' hands and offer them user interfaces within convenient reach that present appropriate operating options for each particular situation. The movement to anticipating every need has launched on this F015 platform.

New materials and structures were used to develop the highly efficient Smart Body Structure (SBS) of the F 015. Mercedes engineers found an alchemist's touch with carbon-fiber-reinforced plastic (CFRP), aluminum and high-strength steels to make the body 40 percent lighter. The doors open 90 degrees and B-pillars were eliminated in conjunction with introducing a safety system that includes airbag-like features in the doors that make side impact collisions less harmful than ever.

Think self-driving cars aren't possible? Mercedes has already completed an autonomous Mannheim to Pforzheim expedition (about 65 miles). The current technology in the Mercedes driver assistance detects road conditions, traffic and obstacles. Steering assist and emergency stopping are just the start of tomorrow's fully autonomous vehicle.

While this all sounds more like a movie than reality, Mercedes is betting a huge amount on the eventuality of autonomous driving.

"Autonomous driving is one of the greatest innovations since the invention of the motorcar," notes Dr. Thomas Weber, member of the board of management of Daimler AG. "Drivers are relieved of work and stress in situations in which driving is not enjoyable, and the time gained while in their car takes on a whole new quality."

The F 015 Luxury in Motion isn't on showroom floors yet but it's waiting in the wings. When the day arrives that autonomous driving and a luxury experience usher in the future of driving, the F 015 will take center stage. Start saving your pennies now. The list price on the F 015 hasn't been established but you can be assured that a "retreat" on wheels will set you back north of six figures.

Change Course, Golfers!

Put fresh focus on the body for the long, hot summer

Summertime in the desert is not for sissies. If you find yourself muttering as you leave the house with your golf clubs and determination, knowing you'll be cloaked in sweat by the second hole, there are solutions, er, remedies.

Remedy No. 1: Water Sports anyone? Go on the hunt for a new swimsuit. Get in the swim with a new routine and fitness regimen—indoors. Head for the coast where the beaches sift sand and surf between your toes. There's nothing like an Australian crawl wing-nut workout or perhaps a beach volley ball game.

Then again, what's a little triple-temp heat in golf between friends and true partners o' wearing the green, a badge of honor from a just-watered slippery fairway on white pants?

Give up golf for the summer? Real men and women would rather chew on a divot!

Which brings us to Remedy No. 2: Keep cool with the right outfit.

Brad Coonradt, Dick's Sporting Goods community marketing manager, says the company "offers a wide variety of golf products, including everything you need to stay cool on the golf course this summer."

He notes that among the most popular items this summer are the Walter Hagen Perfect 11 Shorts, which feature Hydro-Dri moisture-wicking technology and four-way stretch fabrication to keep golfers dry and cool while swinging with real muscle on the course throughout the scorching summer months. "Our Walter Hagen Essentials Yarn Dye Golf Polo is another great product that offers the Hydro-Dri technology," he adds, "and it also protects from UV up to +25 UPE."

He advises desert golfers to "put your focus on the game, not your outfit," a breeze, of course, with the right outfit. Coonradt name drops Nike, Puma, Adidas, Oakley and Under Armour, and suggests golfers "choose golf apparel that is lightweight and breathable when the temperatures are stifling. Freedom of movement," he adds, "is essential for every golfer, and stretchable fabrics allow for easy movement as you round the back nine."

Let him linger on the course while we have a reprise of Remedy No. 1. Just in time for summer, InStyle reports on the most luscious, lovely swimwear to be found around the world. Be careful—you can be as covered or un- as you like in one, two, three or more pieces. The math steps to your personal beat but adds up to choosing the right sum for you and your body type, mixed with your individual personality.

Luli fama is the label for Khongboon Swimwear created by designer Supaporn Khongboon. Just off the presses for spring/summer 2016, global traveler and fashion designer Khongboon presents his newest luxury collection showcasing updated sophisticated prints, streamlined silhouettes and "buttery" fabrics inspired by the idea of a picturesque paradise, namely Thailand. Khongboon explains that he has "fused together weft fabrics with awe-inspiring prints synonymous with 12 new styles and 10 new patterns, assuring that the newest collection is colorful and right on-trend for summer in the swim." The lovely results are wearable works of art. For more eye-candy samples, visit the Luli Fama Look Book at khongboonswimwear.com.

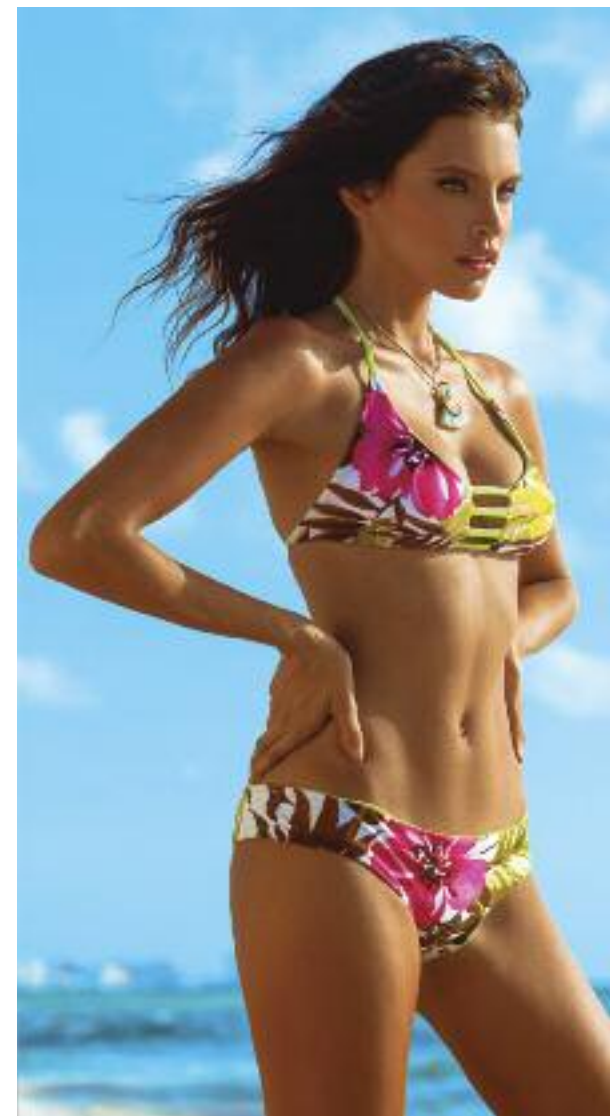

In the "different strokes for different folks" category, don't throw in the towel until you consider your own body's assets and flaws. There is a suit for every body. Go to your favorite sales associate and tell her about your swimsuit needs and where you would like to enhance, conceal, de-emphasize or divert attention. Tell her what you want to elongate, curve, flatten or embellish. Tell her if you need a boost or a bounce-proof top. Tell her you want a bottom cut high on the thigh to send your short legs soaring into the stratosphere. Ask her to show you suits with boy-shorts, a skirt, full-sided brief or a tankini if your tummy and/or posterior are pleasingly curvy. Select the colors to hide or highlight your most positive features. Use bold, colorful prints on body parts that are assets. Use solid hues to send the eye elsewhere. Take feedback from friends, family, those you love and trust, the sales associate and an honest dressing-room mirror.

Practice positive psychobabble and you'll note an attitude adjustment can shore up insecurity and take you far from building sand castles to dipping in cooling waters. Just dive in!

Whether you're heading out in the desert or another summer hot spot, pack your patience and your sunscreen. Before you know it, fall will be blowing into town. But right now, cool it. Get your body out there on the course or the water and make waves in golf apparel or swimwear designed to keep you cool, comfortable and attractive, no matter how high the temperature climbs!

LJ Cross

Kwiat and LJ Cross: Diamonds and Deep-Rooted Tradition

Designers give contemporary elegance to ancient symbols and vintage style

By Alison Elsner

Kwiat

Deeply held traditions shape our day-to-day activities as well as major life choices and personal expressions of style and identity, especially evident in our jewelry selections. These two jewelers offer lines that meld intriguing aspects of culture and history with compelling design, all of it adding up to singular style.

KWIAT

Kwiat diamonds embody both history and family. Launched in 1907 in New York City by Sam Kwiat, this house of diamond jewelry design is still family owned and operated, with Sam's grandsons Sheldon and Lowell as co-presidents. Celebrities including Halle Berry, Natalie Portman and Sharon Stone consider Kwiat jewels among their favorites.

Kwiat's Vintage Earrings capture the impression of life as it was over a century ago, when Sam

Kwiat started out as a diamond trader on Canal Street in Manhattan. This delicate pair of diamond earrings (.39 tcw) in 18K white gold features a flower design comprised of five petals surrounding a round center diamond. The pair is available for $2,550.

The coordinating Kwiat Vintage Pendant shares the same design. One sparkling diamond flower (.36 tcw) has five petals, each containing three diamonds and extending outward from a round diamond center. Set in 18K gold, the entire composition is secured to an 18K white gold link chain by a matching round diamond and measures 17 inches long. The pendant retails for $2,600.

Staying in vintage mode, the Kwiat Bowed Diamond Ring, also called the Vintage "Bow-Tie" Ring, displays a series of round cut diamonds set in 18K white gold that create a playful balance against the curves of the ring. Minute embossing traces the fluid openwork of the diamonds (.51 tcw). This stunning statement piece sells for $3,850 and represents the signature Kwiat style: open and airy with diamonds that appear to float weightlessly, creating an effect of greater light flow into the diamond to enhance its brilliance.

The Kwiat Vintage Round Pendant radiates elegance and reinforces the image of the early 20th Century social set. The necklace is made of 18K white gold and boasts an openwork pendant set with diamonds. The 18.5-inch chain itself is also studded with diamonds, bringing the total weight to 2.50 tcw. This detailed and ornate piece may be purchased for $12,800.

Veering slightly away from the vintage theme but still evoking tradition and dignity, the Kwiat

Moonlight Bracelet is a spectacularly large bangle featuring row upon row of pavé diamonds—15 rows to be exact. Set in 18K white gold and weighing 54.44 tcw, the seven-inch bracelet would be a fun splurge at $215,500.

Kwiat diamonds take on even more beauty considering that Kwiat complies with the Kimberley Process, the United Nations-sponsored program created to ensure that rebel forces do not use diamonds to finance wars against legitimate governments. Kwiat diamonds are mined in many regions of the world, including Russia, South Africa, Botswana, Namibia and Canada.

LJ CROSS

Southampton, New York, jewelry designer Lisa Jackson has managed to turn trend to tradition in fairly short order. Launched in the spring of 2014, the LJ Cross fashionable line of gemstone crosses and fine jewelry began as a tribute to Jackson's late brother, Steven, who consistently wore several crosses at a time.

The designer's preferred icon, the cross, embodies a wide range of cultural symbols dating from European petroglyphs in the Upper Paleolithic age to the present day. The multifaceted cross evokes astronomical, celestial, linguistic, mythological, heraldic and, of course, religious motifs.

The LJ Cross Champagne Diamond and Gold Cross Drop Earrings feature a blushing cross design of pure 14K rose gold lined with petite champagne diamonds (1.81 tcw), inlaid by hand. The three-inch long, .75-inch wide pieces are each affixed to a modified fish hook ear wire and are available for $4,200.

The LJ Cross Cobblestone Champagne Diamond and Gold Cross Pendant represents Jackson's signature design—the "chubby" cross. A .75 inch thick blushing 14K rose gold cross pendant is accented with approximately 35 shimmering champagne diamonds of varying sizes and predominantly round shape (1.25 tcw). The chain length measures 15.5 inches. The pendant retails for $2,800.

Also reflecting the designer's dramatic sense of scale, the LJ Cross Cobblestone Champagne Diamond and Gold Crescent Pendant Necklace is from the Rose Gold Cobblestone Collection, a white gold grouping with distinctive burnished white diamonds. Champagne diamonds (1.54 tcw) are crafted into a crescent pendant of 14K rose gold measuring 1.75 inches and strung along a slender 22-inch chain. This assertive yet feminine piece is priced at $3,800.

Also from the collection, the LJ Cross Cobblestone Champagne Diamond and Gold Hoop Earrings showcase gently curved 14K blush rose gold hoops traced with champagne diamonds (2.26 tcw). Measuring 1.75 inches in diameter, this pair sells for $5,400.

The LJ Cross signature with a petite cross graphic is embedded on the back surface of all of Jackson's designs. This design phenom is a multitasking interior designer, jewelry entrepreneur, wife, mother, and a student in the Harvard Executive Program who previously worked as an in-demand interior designer for clients Vera Wang, Tory Burch, Renee Zellweger, Michael J. Fox and the Blackstone Group.

Jackson's ability to blend minimalist style with one of humanity's most sacred symbols of culture and religion speaks to her power in respecting while redefining tradition in beautiful ways.
