We are pleased to showcase Lee Trevino on the cover of this edition of Desert Golf & Tennis. Trevino, fondly referred to as The Merry Mex, was widely known in the Coachella Valley for his infamous hole-in-one during the 1987 SKINS Game at PGA West TPC Stadium's famous 17th hole. A longtime Tour legend and then Senior Tour legend, Trevino at 78 is still active throughout the golf world, playing in corporate outings and charity tournaments. A resident member of Bighorn in Palm Desert, California, Trevino visits the valley frequently. Please find our cover feature on pg. 12.

Also in this issue, we are pleased to announce our expansion into coverage of California's world-class beach communities, from Long Beach to Tijuana! We are excited to bring the desert communities to coastal residents and the coastal lifestyle to our desert community. This new endeavor is Desert Golf & Tennis, Sand to Sea.

Our initial intent is to print an ongoing feature in this publication and grow it into a stand-alone magazine that will be distributed throughout the coastal areas such as Laguna Beach, Newport Beach/Coast, Corona del Mar, Dana Point, Solana Beach, Del Mar and La Jolla, among others. There is a tremendous amount of crossover between our desert and Sand to Sea communities, as well as numerous golf tournaments and tennis events for us to cover in Southern California's coastal region. Please find more information on pg. 34.

This issue also includes our feature highlighting several of the exclusive clubs in the valley. This will also be an ongoing feature in Desert Golf & Tennis. Country clubs that typically do not publicize themselves are of interest to our readers. There are numerous choices in the Coachella Valley for potential members to consider. We at Desert Golf & Tennis pride ourselves on bringing to you, the reader, what's happening in the "best clubs" of the desert. This feature starts on page 16.

We continue to update our maps and club directories, which include the information necessary to help you find the right club and course for your game and lifestyle, including the cost to join a club as well as other pertinent information. Should any of our information differ from what you find, please contact us to advise us. We strive to be as accurate as possible.

This edition begins our 19th season of producing Desert Golf & Tennis. We continue to focus on the lifestyle of the desert dweller, and we work very hard to showcase all that the desert has to offer. This is our community, and we hope you enjoy this issue as much as we enjoyed putting it together.

Lee Trevino

Still living the life of a legend

By Matt McKay - Photos by Paul Lester

Even now that he's 77, one can still look at Lee Trevino and say, without reservation, "Well played, Mr. Trevino. Well played." The six-time Major winner, PGA Tour icon, and legendary talker still doesn't allow golf shots to interrupt his conversations. But these days, instead of wearing out Jack Nicklaus with relentless discussion and rubber snakes, Trevino splits his time between The Greenbrier in White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, and Bighorn Golf Club in Palm Desert, California, properties that are now the primary beneficiaries of his personal draw and entertainment value.

Trevino recently took up an ambassador position at The Greenbrier at the urging of owner Jim Justice, current governor of West Virginia. Trevino is the man when it comes to promoting the property and meeting and greeting on the golf course. He says it keeps him busy through the summer months and is the perfect job for him.

One of his immediate tasks was to help the course and property overcome the massive floods that resulted in cancellation of the Greenbrier's 2016 PGA Tour event. "As you well know, we were devastated by a 1,000-year flood [at The Greenbrier], so we put it all back together and we got the tournament off this year. The players just absolutely raved about the conditions and what we did to the golf course," Trevino says.

"I just kind of meet and greet and play a little golf and give a few lessons here and there. It gives me something to do. Besides that, I get out of that [desert] heat. [At the Greenbrier], we're in the mountains, about 1,700 feet above sea level, and it's a little bit cooler. Our average temperature around here is high 70s, low 80s. We've got the best of it right now, the best of it."

Good move, sir.

Come fall and winter, Trevino and his wife, Claudia, transition to the Coachella Valley where he's a prominent member at Bighorn. It's a lifestyle anyone would love to live, yet it somehow seems tailor-made for the Merry Mex.

At Bighorn, Trevino can often be found playing with friends in the morning and Claudia in the afternoon. This year, he's particularly excited to return to his desert home to take advantage of Bighorn's new clubhouse, which is shaping up to be among the most spectacular core facilities of any club in the valley, perhaps the entirety of Southern California.

The opening of the clubhouse and the Trevinos timely return to the desert almost seems an end to the Trevino means. The desert has a special place in his heart, and he seemed to know from the start that his future was inevitably linked to it. Everything he's done—all the accomplishments, all the failures, all the personal highs and lows—have led to this point where idyllic summers are spent hobnobbing with well-heeled fun-seekers in West Virginia, and gentle winters are passed at one of the Coachella Valley's great golf cathedrals.

"My first Hope tournament was back in 1968. I think that was the first one that I played in," he says. "I used to own a place at Indian Wells, a little three-bedroom condo. We sold that and moved to Florida. But we've always come back to the desert. I've got a lot of friends there, and if you love to play golf, who doesn't want to come to Palm Springs, Palm Desert, La Quinta? I mean, we got 120 golf courses, man."

It is, he points out, a paradise. "The climate is just absolutely fabulous, you know? We enjoy it. The golf course is always in immaculate condition. And you know, everyone plays in the morning, and in the afternoon if you want to go play, it's wide open. So that's another plus in my opinion. We sometimes play 36 holes a day."

Yet again, well played, sir.

Matt McKay is a staff writer with Desert Golf & Tennis

"I hang my hat at Bighorn, as you well know," he says. "Two years ago, we tore the clubhouse down, and [Bighorn co-founder] R.D. Hubbard said the new one would be open the 7th of November 2017 so I will be back out there probably about the 5th of November. We'll have a big, big party on the 7th, and we have our program a lot of the senior players come in and we'll have about 24 foursomes. We play a two-day pro-am and we have a lot of fun. And then the season starts for us there at Bighorn. There's another great place to hang your hat, baby, I'll tell you that. It doesn't get any better than Bighorn."

Trevino points to the many reasons why. "We have 36 holes, we're just fixing to open the new $55 million clubhouse, we've got two driving ranges, another small clubhouse down in the canyons we have a lot of buddies that we play with every morning, maybe a couple of dozen guys, and they play a little gin in the afternoon. Then I golf with my wife in the afternoon. So, man, it doesn't get any better than that."

He was at the club in the spring for a look at progress on the clubhouse. "It looked like they were already working on the inside. So, it looked pretty good," he says. "It will be finished. Believe me, it will be finished."

Cue the superlatives. These highly sought-after private clubs reign supreme in the SoCal desert

The Quarry Country Club

Competition is fierce among 100 luxury country clubs in California's Coachella Valley. But 10 singular venues have earned a reputation as being the very best, consistently exceeding even private-club expectations.

The Vintage Country Club

The Quarry Country Club

A beautiful and serene golfer's haven, this rock-solid club was actually built in an old sand quarry. Coachella Valley's only Golf Digest Top 100-ranked course has remained so for the past 10 listings, continually a Top 5 best-conditioned course as well. "The members have a passion for golf, and maintaining the world-class conditions is of the utmost importance to the entire staff," says GM Mark Scheibach. Quarry's Short Course is a 10-hole Tom Fazio design that players say rivals any Par 3 course in the world, "including Augusta National and Pine Valley," notes Scheibach. "We continue to enhance the courses and overall facilities on an annual basis, as we intend to maintain our position as the premiere private-golf experience in the Coachella Valley." (La Quinta, 760.777.1100, thequarrycountryclub.com)

The Vintage Country Club

Prestigious without being pretentious, Vintage Club's CEO Steve Cenicola says his golf community is the epitome of luxury, world-class service, amenities and privacy—home to some of the most influential business people and leaders in the world. He calls it a "real modern oasis in the desert" with magnificent views and a combination of timeless architecture and lush, green areas in the desert. Amid state-of-the-art security, members enjoy two impeccably manicured golf courses, an 85,000-square-foot, award-winning clubhouse, fine dining, plus a market, wellness center and spa. The club offers 11 tennis courts, plus Pickleball and bocce ball, too. In 2016, it was named California's No. 1 club, No. 5 in America and also listed among "America's healthiest venues." (Indian Wells, 760.340.0500, thevintageclub.com)

The Reserve Club

A championship golf course and homes that blend subtly into surrounding mountains make The Reserve a natural wonder. It has garnered numerous landscaping awards while also incorporating water conservation and desert preservation into the mix. Mandy Polione, membership and marketing director, says she was stunned into silence by the club's amazing native-desert landscape on her first visit. A one-mile stone entrance bridge transports members and guests into a virtual decompression zone centered around the Tuscan-style clubhouse, with activities such as Pilates and 26 miles of walking trails. The 21-hole Tom Weiskopf and Jay Morrish course features three trophy holes designed for a pre-round warm-up or practice for golf novices. "What sets us apart is our members," Polione says. "They're the nicest, warmest, most down-to-earth members you could possibly wish for. There are no cliques and new members immediately feel welcomed." The staff are part of the family, too—most have 10 to 15 years of experience in their roles at the club. (Indian Wells, 760.674.2274, theserveclub.com)

Tradition Golf Club

A "Platinum Club of America" honoree for 2017-18, Tradition is first and foremost a golf club, says GM/COO Al Castro. "It's as if Arnold Palmer saw this raw piece of desert and mountains and envisioned what fairways, greens and rough would look like as they became one with the mountain." White Augusta sand in 95 bunkers, replaced every year, complements 150,000 flowers planted each fall. "As beautiful as the golf course and the setting are," Castro says, "the culture of the club's membership is even better: a closely knit group who cherish Tradition's 'small community' feel." Tradition's understated elegance and tasteful individuality are reflected in every custom home exterior, making it an idyllic community. The original Ranch House and additional club cottages became a getaway destination for Greta Garbo, Joan Crawford, Katherine Hepburn and Clark Gable, as well as U.S. Presidents John F. Kennedy and Dwight D. Eisenhower. (La Quinta, 760.564.8723, traditiongc.com)

Mission Hills Country Club

"We are a complete package of amenities," says John Conroy, director of membership and marketing, citing the club's "world-class" three championship golf courses (Arnold Palmer, Pete Dye and beloved Dinah Shore Tournament layouts), 34 tennis courts and one of the biggest and best croquet facilities anywhere. He says the club also features diversity in its membership, along with the added benefits associated with ClubCorp's network of venues. "Best value in the desert and elsewhere, hands down," writes one member on Facebook. Mission Hills' recent clubhouse renovation has refreshed its ambiance and inspired members' praise. There's no off-season here, with activities available year-round. (Rancho Mirage, 760.324.9400, clubcorp.com/Clubs/Mission-Hills-Country-Club)

Bighorn Golf Club

Why remodel when you can rebuild? This season, Bighorn's new clubhouse, described as a 75,000-square-foot living room for its members, shows off its sleek, functional design and four luxury penthouses. The club's distinctive Arthur Hills and Tom Fazio championship courses have hosted legendary PGA battles, drawing the brightest PGA and LPGA stars. Bighorn's renowned parking garage/museum for classic cars, The Vault, is a coveted ultra-exclusive club-within-the-club. Amid all the sparkle, philanthropy remains a guiding force for Bighorn's leadership and members. (Palm Desert, 760.341.4653, bighorngolf.com)

Eldorado Country Club

Member-owned, invitation-only Eldorado celebrates 60 storied years in 2017. Tom Fazio carefully crafted the 18-hole golf course after demolishing the original layout that hosted the 1959 Ryder Cup, and it continues to be maintained in tip-top condition. The club lists U.S. presidents and other luminaries among its members, but celebrates every single individual on its roster. Despite the fact that exclusive and private are club keywords, members rave about a friendly, accommodating staff and the gorgeous cove setting at the base of the Santa Rosa Mountains. (Indian Wells, 760.346.8081, eldoradocc.org)

The Madison Club

Known for its PGA-popular Tom Fazio golf course, Madison also features what has been called the "five-pound round." Those who indulge freely in treats at abundant comfort stations could adult beverages and jellybeans. The club's sophisticated setting features a stylish Mediterranean-style clubhouse and stunning sunset views. With a regional airport nearby, lucky members who own one of the five luxury clubhouse suites experience maximum convenience and style entertaining guests. (La Quinta, 760.777.9320, madisonclubca.com)

Andalusia at Coral Mountain

Inspired by the spirit and architecture of southern Spain's Andalusia region, this private club has been uniquely created to elevate the pure enjoyment of desert living. A Rees Jones-designed spectacularly scenic 18-hole golf course is the centerpiece. "For beginners, it offers generous greens and arguably the widest fairways in the desert, and for elite players the course will challenge even the best from 7,521 yards," says head pro Lindsey Winch. Meticulous attention to the tennis courts, fitness center, swimming pool and gourmet dining are enhanced by gracious personal service. "Andalusia offers a style of living that's as refined as it is fun and friendly. While we're one of the valley's premier private clubs, we have an uncommon level of cohesiveness and camaraderie. Our members are not pretentious or cliquish. We are all one big family, and we are always looking to come up with new amenities and enhancements for the club." Andalusia has hosted USGA and PGA events, and its home plans have won Golden Nugget Awards. (La Quinta, 760.777.1000, andalusiaatcoralmountain.com)

conceivably pack on weight after 18 holes with kid delights and adult temptations such as Kobe beef sliders, beef jerky, decadent

The Hideaway Club

The Hideaway Club

Elegant, with impeccably maintained grounds, Hideaway Club seems to inspire comments that begin with "gorgeous" and end with anecdotes about accommodating staff. The food gets raves, too, whether at the restaurant or one of the tempting "comfort stations." Clive Clark's 18 holes factor in the club's custom homes and local terrain with a nod to St. Andrews and a fair amount of water features. Pete Dye's expansive links-style course stays true to his risk-reward mindset. (La Quinta, 760.777.7400, hideawaygolfclub.com)

Serena Williams'

Record-breaking Performance

A look back at the 2017 Australian Open

By winning her 23rd major singles title at the 2017 Australian Open, Serena Williams proved once again that age is just a number.

Back in 1998, when Venus and Serena Williams competed in their very first Australian Open, no one—aside from perhaps themselves and their parents—could have predicted the type of influence they would ultimately have on the world of tennis.

With 30 singles and 28 doubles major championships between them since then, the Williams sisters have, to say the least, changed the game forever. Of the duo, Serena has had the most success on the court, winning all four Grand Slam titles consecutively between 2002 and 2003, and retaining the No. 1 world ranking for 186 straight weeks, tying Steffi Graf for the all-time record.

Over the years, the sisters, who have partnered to win every Grand Slam doubles championship as well as three Olympics gold medals, have participated in one of the sport's most celebrated and exhilarating rivalries. This past January, the rivalry continued at the Australian Open, as the sisters competed against each other in a singles major championship final for the ninth time.

The final, as expected, was a nail-biter from the beginning, as four successive breaks of serve occurred. Serena eventually won the first match 6-4. Two more service breaks occurred before Serena won the second match 6-4 as well, thereby ending an already historic final—the oldest Grand Slam women's final in the Open era, as the sisters' ages combined for nearly 72 years—and culminating in Serena's 23rd major singles title, only one behind Margaret Court's pre-Open era record.

Serena has now won 72 career singles titles, in addition to her 23 doubles titles (14 of which are majors) and two mixed doubles titles, each of which are majors. And she clinched the No. 1 world ranking once again, for the first time since September 12, 2016.

"I couldn't have written a better story," Serena said, after defeating her sister. "There's no way I would be at 23 without [Venus]—there's no way I would be at No. 1 without her. She's my inspiration. She's the only reason I'm standing here today."

At an age in which most tennis professionals have already retired, the 35-year-old is showing no signs of slowing down. In fact, she is now the oldest female tennis player to win a Grand Slam singles title in the Open era, and the oldest to attain the world No. 1 ranking.

Not to mention, she has also won 10 major singles titles since turning 30—another record, as no other woman has won more than three singles titles after reaching that age. And, with her record seventh Australian Open singles title, she remains the only tennis player—male or female—to claim 10 or more Grand Slam singles titles in two different decades.

"Congratulations, Serena, on No. 23," Venus Williams stated, as she and Serena participated in the awards ceremony. "Your win has always been my win. I'm enormously proud of you."

Although Venus's longevity and tenacity should not be understated, as she has participated in major singles finals for 20 years (and returned to a finals match for the first time since the 2009 Wimbledon, as well as the first all-American women's semi-finals at the U.S. Open since 1981), Serena's long-term success will remain her legacy for years to come. Not only has she won 70 or more matches at three of the four Grand Slam championships, she has also now captured 316 Grand Slam singles match victories in all—another record for either gender.

As if 2017 weren't memorable enough, Serena, who is the highest earning female in all of sports with regard to prize money (grossing over $84 million so far), also gave birth to her first child, a baby girl, on Sept. 1. As she celebrates yet another milestone with her fiancé, Alexis Ohanian, Serena is now looking forward to joining her sister on the courts in 2018, in preparation for yet another season in the professional ranks.

"Long story short, I don't think people actually understand the significance of what they see—these two players who, literally for generations, have been able to transcend what they do," Isha Price, Serena and Venus's half-sister, explained. "To keep your body in optimal shape to perform at this level consistently [for] 20 years is an incredible feat."

Golf and POTUS: The Attraction Continues

Like many of his predecessors, the 45th U.S. president plays golf

Trump Golf Properties - TrumpGolf.com

ABERDEEN, SCOTLAND

This 18-hole championship course designed by Dr. Martin Hawtree encompasses 7,400 yards and impressive views of the jagged coast and expansive valleys.

DOONBEG, IRELAND

Spanning 1.5 miles of crescent shaped beach and century-old sand dunes, the Greg Norman-designed course at Trump International Golf Links offers extraordinary views of the Atlantic Ocean.

MIAMI, FLORIDA

Trump National Doral plays host to professional golfers and events across its four different courses. It also boasts some of the toughest holes and most spectacular views in Florida.

FERRY POINT, NEW YORK

The 18-hole, Jack Nicklaus signature design, links-style course is designed to take advantage of the spectacular views of the Manhattan skyline, East River and Whitestone and Throgs Neck bridges. It measures 7,407 yards.

President Donald Trump started playing golf at the age of 12. He is the 16th of the past 19 American presidents to have a passion for the game of golf. Like past leaders, Trump is a staunch advocate for the game; unlike most, however, he has also made millions on the business side of the fairways and greens via the 17 golf courses in the current Trump Golf portfolio.

With a number of past presidents also having great affection for the Coachella Valley, it stands to reason that the Trump Corporation might start eyeing the California desert for a new Trump National golf facility. Only time will tell. Yet there are already many presidential golf stories in the Coachella Valley.

It's hard to beat Dwight Eisenhower getting his first hole-in-one at Seven Lakes Country Club in Palm Springs at the age of 77. John F. Kennedy was known to frequent Indian Palms in Indio, the site of the Cochran-Oldham Ranch and its golf course. Richard Nixon, George H.W. Bush, Ronald Reagan, George W. Bush and Bill Clinton spent many a desert day on the area's courses, often at Sunnyslands as the guests of Walter and Leonore Annenberg. Gerald Ford lived at Thunderbird Country Club in Rancho Mirage and was seen daily trying to hone his game. Barak Obama, like Ford, recently purchased a desert home that's set up against the mountains at Thunderbird Heights in Rancho Mirage.

So what is it about golf that attracts our country's leaders? We know the game provides a challenge, and can even cause anguish and stress. We also know there is a peace and tranquility in golf and it's easy to get lost in the game and forget the troubles of the world. Perhaps that is golf's most powerful allure for leaders who face no end of world troubles.

The first president to play was William Howard Taft (1909-1913). Taft was a 20 handicap and was said to always play out every hole.

Woodrow Wilson (1913-21) played as often as possible, logging more than 1,000 rounds while in office.

Warren G. Harding (1921-23) played twice a week, often scoring in triple digits. His legacy to the game: The outstanding TPC Harding Park golf course in San Francisco.

Calvin Coolidge (1923-29) played out of obligation, shooting double-digits on each hole. The story is told that when successor Herbert Hoover moved into the White House, the only thing left behind was Coolidge's bag of clubs.

Before he contracted polio at age 39, Franklin D. Roosevelt (1933-45) was an avid and accomplished golfer. His greatest legacy to the game was the funding of public-works projects, which included dozens of municipal golf courses.

Dwight D. Eisenhower (1953-1961) was often criticized for his obsession with the sport. His friendship with icon Arnold Palmer helped lift golf to new levels of popularity. During his tenure, the number of golfers in America more than doubled. He also installed a putting green on the White House lawn.

John F. Kennedy (1961-63) had a famously bad back as well as Addison's disease, which prevented the 35th president from reaching his enormous potential as a golfer. Though he played often at Burning Tree, it was said he skipped around the course, hardly ever playing a full round of 18 or even nine holes.

Lyndon B. Johnson (1963-69) played with an ulterior motive after realizing golf was the perfect activity for political negotiations. The votes Johnson needed to pass the Civil Right Act of 1964 were secured on the golf course.

While serving as vice president under Eisenhower, Richard Nixon (1969-74) dutifully took up the game and became a solid player, once breaking 80 and playing to a 12 handicap.

A few errant drives in pro-ams contributed to the 38th president's reputation as a klutz. But Gerald Ford (1974-77), a former Michigan offensive lineman, often broke 90. He became the first president to join the USGA, doing so in a ceremony at the White House and was honorary chairman of the first Presidents Cup (1994).

Ronald Reagan (1981-89) did not play much, but he had a powerful swing.

George H.W. Bush (1989-93) was born into a family with a rich golf tradition. His maternal grandfather, George Herbert Walker, was president of the USGA and founded the Walker Cup. His father, Prescott Bush, also was a USGA president. It was for his dedication to the game, not his playing ability as an 11-handicap, that President Bush was inducted into the World Golf Hall of Fame.

Bill Clinton (1993-2001) had an undeniably positive impact on the game of golf, perhaps most notably through his involvement with the charity tournament now known as the CareerBuilder Challenge. Clinton also re-installed the White House putting green that Richard Nixon removed.

George W. Bush (2001-2009) played to a 15-handicap before giving up golf at the outbreak of the Second Iraq War. After leaving office, he returned to the sport, establishing the Warrior Open honoring U.S. servicemen.

Barack Obama (2009-2017) is the eighth left-hander in the White House but the first to play golf.

Golfing presidents are by far the majority. Only three presidents since Taft—Herbert Hoover, Harry Truman, and Jimmy Carter—did not play the game.

As for Trump, he lists his handicap as 2.8 on the USGA's Golf Handicap and Information Network, making him an extraordinary golfer at any age, but truly phenomenal for someone who is 70.

Perhaps just as extraordinary is his income from Trump Golf holdings. In 2016, Trump released his Personal Financial Disclosure (PFD) forms revealing over $300 million in income from his golf courses and resorts.

Having had a tumultuous relationship the past year with PGA of America, Trump has been seen playing golf with the new PGA president and Toscana Country Club resident, Paul Levy. Will this help future relations? The game should hope so. Currently the PGA is scheduled to hold the 2017 Senior PGA Championship at Trump National in Virginia, and the 2022 PGA Championship at Trump National in New Jersey.

From Scotland to Palm Beach, Los Angeles to Dubai, Trump Golf offers some of the most iconic golf properties and courses in the world, representing world-class luxury and excellence, synonymous with the Trump brand.

Whether you like Trump or not, his presidency will shine a different light on the game that seems to be recovering at least slightly from a major slump. As a golf course owner, designer and player, maybe President Trump will help make golf as a business “great again.”

Hell Bunker Hole No.17

By Clive Clark

It's on every golfer's wish list to play the Old Course at St Andrews. Visiting St Andrews and playing The Old, which is incredibly special and steeped in history, is unforgettable. Where else can you play over a bunker called Hell; drive over a corner of a substantial five-star hotel; be in bounds and play from a road that looks as if it were made for a horse and a cart; play down a main street where, if you knock the ball out of bounds, you can buy a cashmere sweater in a store while retrieving your ball; and drive over a pathway called Granny Clark's Wynd—or as I unfortunately called it my first time commentating for BBC, Granny Clark's WIND? And where else can you play the first and eighteenth holes without any trace of a bunker?

Add to all of this numerous semi-blind second shots, massive double greens whose hole numbers always add up to 18 (e.g. 4/14

6/12), and the fact that if you wound the clock back 70 years or so you could enjoy a steam locomotive charging along within a few yards of the 16th fairway. Those trains always contained a number imprinted on the boiler (the front engine) and, as the ubiquitous Henry Longhurst once said during a live BBC TV commentary, "Ah, there goes the 2.15 from Levin heading toward Luchars. I do believe I can read its number—242433—which is a darn sight better than Mr. Palmer's score over the last six holes!"

You might well ask who would design a golf course like this. As it evolved some 600 years ago and many of the bunkers were born through sheep burrowing into the sand dunes for shelter, it's hard to establish who was, in fact, the architect of this masterpiece. Further, in centuries gone by, the course used to be played backward to how it is played today.

The question is: Would a modern-day architect design a golf course like this? I doubt it, but I tell you what, it sure is fun to play!

The experience of addressing the ball on the first tee, with the large bay window of the 'Big Room,' part of the Royal & Ancient clubhouse, looming down on you, plus the golfing gods bearing down on you from above, is enough to give anybody wobbly knees and the wish for a quick tot of Scotch whisky to settle the frayed nerves! The fact that the first fairway is 110 yards wide doesn't help as it suddenly looks like one of the narrowest tee shots you've ever seen.

Mentioning the golfing gods bearing down, I had the pleasure of playing with Jack Nicklaus in the 3rd round in The Open Championship at St Andrews in 1970. As we approached the 1st tee, there standing before us was the then Prime Minister of Great Britain, Edward (Ted) Heath.

Jack opened the conversation, "Mr. Prime Minister, it's wonderful that you have taken time out from No.10 Downing Street to travel up to Scotland and greet the players on the 1st tee." Heath's swift retort was, "I'm probably doing a great deal more good here than I would be at No.10!" And so the game was on!

Jack and I were lying 3rd and 4th in The Open at that stage and we both made par at the first hole. As we walked to the 2nd tee, Jack said, "I have now played 37 holes without a bogey." It would seem that the golfing gods have exceptional hearing. Jack immediately three-putted the hole for a bogey!

Kingsbarns Golf Club

now in his 80s and from time to time I play golf with him. One hates to bring the subject up, but I once dared to ask him how often he thinks about that missed putt. In his usual colorful manner and with a wry smile, he replied, "Really not that often—only three times a day."

Apart from the wonderful golfing to be had on The Old Course, Kingsbarns is definitely also worth a visit as it is less than 15 minutes by car from the center of St Andrews and exudes many of the qualities of the great links golf courses. Farther up the east coast of Scotland is Castle Stuart. The developer, Mark Parsinen, did an exceptional job by building a very playable links course that has a multitude of interesting features together with amazing views of the Moray Firth. The course turned out so well that it has now hosted several Scottish Opens, which is contested just prior to The Open Championship. A few other courses also come to mind on the east coast of Scotland, including Muirfield, Carnoustie and Royal Dornoch. And there are a host of others that may not be household names but that represent a good day's golf in Scotland and likely will be accompanied

He did go on to win The Open that year in a play-off with Doug Sanders. Many of you will remember the short putt that Doug missed on the 18th green that would have given him the outright win of The 1970 Open Championship. Doug is by a stiff sea breeze, later to be followed by a stiff Scotch.

Improve Your Putting by Observing Great Putters

Photos by Nikko Milkovic

Team USA's win in the 2017 Solheim Cup was a display of great shot making and especially great putting—LPGA pro Lexi Thompson shot a 7 under par 29 on the back nine of her singles match on Sunday's final round. Putting is all about confidence and feeling comfortable over the ball. I have earned a lot by watching great putters such as Lexi Thompson, improving my putting stroke and ultimately making more putts. You can, too

Pre-shot Routine

The key to being a great putter is to get a good feel for the slope of the green. In her pre-shot routine, Lexi likes to walk around the putt to establish the slope. The slope of the putt helps her feel if the putt is a downhill or uphill putt, which in turn influences the speed with which the ball will roll to the hole. Establishing the slope also helps her create a feel for how much break to play in the putt.

Setup

There is a common fundamental in putting technique: Have your eyes over the ball and on your target line. But Lexi likes to have her eyes a few inches inside the ball and target line. This creates a stroke that has the putter face moving on a slight arc rather than straight back and through. When Lexi makes a practice stroke, she sometimes likes to swing the putter right-handed only in order to get a feel for the speed with her dominant right hand. I have even seen her do this on the practice green many times. It's a good exercise for any golfer to get a feel for the speed.

Tempo in the Stroke

All good putters have a tempo or rhythm to their stroke. The same is true for Lexi. The key is to figure out what type of tempo works best for you. One of the big changes that Lexi made in her putting-stroke tempo was to increase the speed of the tempo. She felt that her stroke was actually too slow. Although it seems counter-intuitive, increasing the tempo actually gave her a better feel for controlling the putts. A good way to check your tempo is with a metronome. Listen to the "tick – tock" of the metronome to find the tempo that works best for you.

Hold the Finish

Early on in Lexi's career, she used to have what she calls a "recoil" in her putting stroke. What that means is that after her putter face made contact with the ball, the putter would actually move in reverse away from the hole as the ball rolled to the hole. A big focus on her putting stroke is to have an exact "finish point," and then hold the finish at that exact point until the ball rolls into the hole. This holding the finish helps Lexi stay down through her putts and not look up prematurely. Holding the finish will help you stay down through your putts as well, which will result in more successful putts.

SHOULD YOU HIRE A REAL ESTATE AGENT OR LAWYER TO BUY A HOUSE?

If you're selling a house in California, then it's critical that you have a licensed real estate agent list your property on the Multiple Listing Service (MLS) so that the seller obtains the best marketing exposure; but, if you're buying a house, you might be surprised to learn that using a lawyer is often a better alternative to the normal agency relationship.

Uncomplicating the Complicated in All Aspects of Business and Real Estate Law and Estate Planning

HERE'S WHY:

■ LAWYERS OWE THEIR CLIENTS HIGHER DUTIES THAN AGENTS

Real estate agents owe their clients typical fiduciary duties of good faith, fair dealing and full disclosure, but these duties are fairly limited. For example, agents in California can (and often do) represent both the buyer and seller of a home, or may even have a personal interest in the transaction, as long as the proper disclosures are made. Lawyers, on the other hand, are ethically bound to avoid conflicts of interest by representing only the interests of one party, and a lawyer may not have a personal interest in the transaction. Lawyers owe their clients the highest duties of loyalty and fidelity.

■ AGENTS CANNOT GIVE LEGAL ADVICE

Real estate agents are not authorized to practice law. This means that they can help negotiate and fill-in blanks on a form selected by the parties or act as a scrivener in recording the parties' agreement, but that's about it. Lawyers, on the other hand, are specifically trained and authorized to practice law without limitation. Moreover, lawyers owe their clients a duty of competency, including a duty of diligence that far exceeds the duties of a real estate agent. This means that lawyers are supposed to think about and anticipate potential problems in the transaction that agents often overlook (often resulting in expensive litigation), and lawyers must advise their clients accordingly.

■ AGENTS ARE PAID ONLY IF THE SALE IS COMPLETED

This may sound like a benefit to a homebuyer, but the fact that a real estate agent only earns a commission if the deal closes creates inherent conflict and bias in the agency relationship. The agent is obviously incentivized to make sure the transaction is completed so they can get paid, even if the closing may not be in the buyer's best interests. This conflict is even more pronounced when the agent represents both the buyer and seller in the transaction, since a buyer's interests are in direct conflict with the seller's interests—the buyer wants the lowest possible price while the seller wants the highest possible price. Recognizing this inherent conflict, some states actually prohibit such dual agency. Lawyers, on the other hand, typically charge an hourly or flat fee, such that they are unaffected by the transaction itself.

■ ANDERHOLT WHITTAKER LLP OFFERS THE BEST SOLUTION

The real estate lawyers at Anderholt Whittaker LLP are extremely knowledgeable about the local real estate market and have access to the same tools as real estate agents, but our focus is strictly put on you, as the buyer. We have a licensed real estate broker who is also an experienced and knowledgeable real estate lawyer in our ranks. We also offer flat-fee and hybrid contingency fee arrangements so that our homebuyers can realize the benefit of the commission based fee structure without suffering the detriment and inherent conflict that taints the typical agency relationship. Going to the Dogs!

Canine-friendly country clubs of the Coachella Valley

Many of us pet owners find that when buying a house and picking a community, it is very important to consider our four-legged furry children. Yes, it's true that dogs often rule our lives, but it's worth every second of unconditional love they give back to us.

As a realtor, I focus on selling homes in country clubs and I'm often asked to help find a house suitable for the owner's pets and a country club that will provide the best amenities not only for the human but the dog. Due to the fact that homes on golf courses often don't have large enclosed yards, community amenities become even more important.

In my extensive travels across the country with my Golden Retriever, Riley Rose, I have come to the conclusion that the beautiful Coachella Valley is one of the most pet-friendly places in the country. Not only do many top restaurants, hotels and stores welcome well-behaved dogs, many country clubs also do. Just cruise down swanky El Paseo and you'll see many an owner strutting their mutt! The same is true at many of the valley's clubs.

Here's a list of those clubs I have found that offer the most for dogs and their owners.

The high-end Hideaway and Madison clubs in La Quinta top the list. Well-trained dogs are welcome to ride along with their owners on the golf cart during rounds of golf. They are also welcome on the patio to enjoy al fresco dining. The Hideaway has an annual dog show to name the top dog.

Also at Hideaway, Melanie Shear, a member, hosts an annual fundraiser for a charity that funds a "snip bus." This event draws a crowd of over 300 for shopping, lunching and an auction. It has raised over $100,000 every year for this important charity that offers free spaying and neutering for valley pets. More than 3,700 animals have been spayed or neutered at little to no cost.

The Tradition Club is also very pet-friendly and many members gather each evening for social hour at a makeshift doggy park. What could be more fun than cocktails and dogs?

Indian Ridge Country Club offers a dog park known as "Rover's Ridge." It's fenced with separate areas for big dogs and small dogs. Every afternoon is "yappy hour," during which owners meet new friends while their dogs do the same. The club also has an Easter Dog Parade, where members bring their dogs in costume and the dogs are judged by category. It draws a nice-sized crowd.

One of the most unique dog parks is at The Palms Golf Club. It features a large grassy fenced-off area with its own doggy water feature—perfect for those hot afternoons.

Andalusia Country Club in La Quinta has a seven-mile trail surrounding the property that's perfect for walking dogs.

The Reserve offers a one-acre dog park and more than 26 miles of walking trails within the community, which many four-legged members (and their parents) enjoy on morning and evening walks. There are also weekly off-property hikes on which members can take their dogs when county and/or state rules allow.

Heritage Palms Country Club has a wonderful dog-walking group that meets every morning rain or shine, cold or hot, for a community walk. This fun group also has a custom of celebrating their dogs' birthdays with lavish parties.

Country clubs are definitely catering more and more to pursuits that complement golf and tennis. Dog-related activities and amenities are certainly part of the mix.

Whether you have two or four legs, there are multiple good options when it comes choosing a home and club and settling down in the beautiful Coachella Valley.

Pokehana

The national poke craze has hit the desert, but Pokehana is no traditional fast-casual chain. The restaurant's president, Daniel Lee, grew up watching his parents cook high-end Japanese dishes at Okura Robata Grill & Sushi nearby. In fact, his mother, Jay, contributes all the homemade sauces for the shop's build-your-own poke bowls. Think bases of the freshest ahi cubes adorned with whatever your heart desires from crisp, julienned vegetables to marinated mushrooms to sesame seeds to grated ginger. The addictive combinations are endless, but if you are new to poke and overwhelmed by the choices, opt for the house-crafted Tuna Hana bowl. The new Acqua, which hugs the water at the River at Rancho Mirage, is a lively and fun choice for California fare ranging from steaks to seafood to pasta to pizza. The large bistro is always hopping and the vast menu is conducive to an adventurous palate. But it's the small, quirky touches that guests come to love, such as the meatloaf a la Arturo, an earthy wild mushroom soup, the huge house-made herbed potato chips, the hand-spun cotton candy dessert and the chicken pot pies made only on Sundays. (71-800, Hwy. 111, River at Rancho Mirage, Rancho Mirage; 760.341.2711; acquaranchomirage.com)

Justin Eat & Drink

Justin Eat & Drink

Chef Justin Jenkins is quickly becoming known for this new restaurant because of his deep passion for cooking seasonal specialties sourced from the local, organic Sage Mountain Farms. Patrons rave about the pork shank with cranberry, as well as the shrimp and grits made from Anson Mills heirloom grits cooked in shrimp stock and topped off with Gruyere cheese. The cowboy candy starter is hard to resist with its crisp slices of baguette to dip into cream cheese covered with candied jalapenos. For fall, Jenkins will explore sweet root vegetables and winter squash, utilizing them in silky purees or roasting to evoke their natural sugars. Rumor has it there may be some late-night ramen pop-ups presented by the chef in the space down the line. (68784 E. Palm Canyon Drive, Cathedral City; 760.904.4093; facebook.com/justinrestaurantcc/)

The hottest new cocktail place, Truss and Twine is a concept bar started by the chef and owner of Workshop Kitchen + Bar,

Chef Tanya's Kitchen

Michael Beckman. A contemporary desert vibe reigns with the inclusion of rotating DJs and a menu of drinks that spans various eras, from tiki to the Golden Age to Prohibition. But it's the original concoctions from the desert-inspired mixology team that are most fun, like the Game Changer, made with gin, lime, cucumber, sugar, onion brine, sea salt and celery bitters. A small-bites menu accompanies the libations, which includes whimsical items such as habanero and date beef jerky; goat cheese with bougainvillea dust, honeycomb, and cactus confit; and uni deviled eggs with jamon iberico. Chef Tanya's Kitchen

Twenty years ago, Chef Tanya Petrovna birthed Native Foods in the valley, giving health food a good name. That spot went on to become franchised in ten locations across the nation and spawned a local renaissance in how healthy food could taste. Now she's back with a modest luncheon storefront in an industrial zone, still touting that everyone should "eat plants, look good in your pants!" You won't even know you aren't eating meat when you bite into her Banh Mi and You stuffed with garlic-lime seared tofu, sweet and sour daikon curls, house pickled jalapenos, cucumber, cilantro, mint and basil. Same with the Daily Grinder made of peppered seitan, provolone, shredded cabbage, black olives, mustard, pesto, tomato and kale giardiniera on a hoagie roll that rivals your favorite Italian deli sub. Taking Off in a Tesla Model S P100D

By Aaron Atwood

"Ludicrous" mode is aptly named

There's fast and then there's OMG fast. The new Tesla Model S P100D with Ludicrous mode is the fastest production car you'll drive. Period. The specs on the S are as sexy as they are surprising. The new Model S clocks 0-60 mph in 2.28 seconds. A Space X rocket doesn't do that, but it and the Tesla weigh about the same. The S weighs in at 4,891 pounds and its two-second run is like King Kong winning gold in the Olympic 100-meter dash. Ludicrous mode is well named and redefining fast.

Compare the Model S to its next-closest competitor in production car speed. The Porsche 911 Turbo S nips at the heels of the Model S and weighs less than 3,700 pounds. The Model S is the automotive equal to Mohammed Ali. It flies like a F-14 fighter jet and stings like a scorpion.

With rocket speed and room to seat up to five adults, the Model S doesn't disappoint. There's no car in any manufacturer's showroom that can deliver this level of G-force power. Engineering types have calculated all kinds of fancy figures that prove, without a doubt, that the Model S flat out flies, accelerating at 1.4Gs. You have less acceleration falling out of an airplane! The LaFerrari is at 1.2 Gs.

How does Tesla do it? The company has an attitude that comes through in its design. Take the "Ludicrous" mode for example. To tell the computer that you want to try to orbit the earth in a 5,000-pound car, you access the settings mode and follow the steps. At one point, you'll be asked: "Are you sure you want to push the limits? This will cause accelerated wear of the motor, gearbox and battery." The two buttons below are marked, "No, I want my Mommy" and "Yes, bring it on!"

Tesla begs the world to "bring it on" with continued innovation.

The way Tesla has paired its electric engine to the transmission so eloquently shows in one more key stat: torque. This lesser-compared stat for muscle cars is stunning when you look at the difference between the battery-powered Model S and the gas-powered Porsche 911. The Tesla produces 920 lb-ft of torque compared to 516 lb-ft of torque in the Porsche 911s. This translates to immediate punch that makes you feel like you're on Space Mountain every time you drive to the grocery store.

The interior, too, is full-on Tesla technology. The navigation is incredibly easy to manage along with other tech items. The most important feature is autopilot, which brings you as close to autonomous and the wow factor easily overcomes the inconvenience.

The Model S is the total package. It gives you flat-out speed, acceleration and tech features most drivers don't know they need until they see them in action. Now that Elon Musk, founder of Tesla, has introduced the Model S, the competition will scramble to out-do him.

This writer says, "Bring it on!"

driving as you can get and still be legal. The autopilot mode keeps the designated distance between you and the car in front of you. It will change lanes. The car can manage stop-and-go traffic with no screaming or rude hand gestures.

You can also "summon" the Model S to drive to you while you're standing somewhere nearby with the key in your hand—who needs valet parking? The cameras in front and behind watch for danger or obstructions.

The entire car could be run on the Tesla app. With the app, you can honk the horn, change the climate and generally mess with everything. Seeing this technology in action, you get the sense that the future has arrived.

Perhaps the only downside for the Model S is that it's an electric car. That means you still have to charge it at least every 315 miles. As a daily commuter car, this is not a big deal; road trips, however, get tricky. Finding a charging station still is not as easy as finding a gas station. But having a charging station in the garage of your home makes owning an all-electric car nearly as easy as owning anything else on the road,

Bela Fit Active Wear

Helping women look good and feel even better

Anyone serious about fitness usually has a passion for health and wellness and appreciates the relationship between body and mind. The cycle of positive energy is perpetuated by flattering and fun workout gear, so it naturally follows that having a ready selection of active wear with upbeat designs and stylish motifs that can be worn all day will inspire and motivate.

Ursula Reisch understands the symbiosis between looking good and feeling great. The owner and founder of Bela Fit, a collection of Brazilian-made leggings and capris, brought her product into the world eight years ago. Designing her own workout clothing made Ursula feel more confident during her daily jogs in her hometown of Redondo Beach, California, and fortunately for women of all ages, body types and fitness levels, she has shared her interest in beautiful fabrics and Brazilian textures with the consumer world.

All of Bela Fit's leggings and capris are handmade and sewn by Brazilian crafts people and textile companies. A special, high-quality fabric called Supplex is used, which has the feel and flexibility of cotton and advanced durability through fiber technology. Supplex is generally a blend of 90 percent polyester and 10 percent Lycra, sometimes with higher or lower percentages of each depending on the thickness of the specific product.

Current sizing of active wear is geared for small to medium, however the company has just started manufacturing a medium to large size which will be available for purchase in the near future. Bela Fit's reasonably priced designs gravitate towards explosive color, feisty animals and friendly florals. Leggings and capris run from $29 to $89, with each and every design clearly displayed on the company website.

Leggings

One of Bela Fit's most popular designs is Hibiscus. A happy palette of bright pink and yellow hibiscus flowers dance amid a canopy of green split-leaf philodendron with rich, sky-blue in the background. Somehow having a garden of these trumpet shaped petals climbing up one's legs instantly creates a connection with nature, transporting the wearer to the Caribbean, where the hibiscus is the national flower of Haiti, or to Hawaii where the blossom is also the state flower. (Either destination is fine by us). Hibiscus leggings are available for $72.

The Palos Verdes Peacock design captures the beauty of the natural environment, representing the large, majestic birds that are known for their stunning blue and green iridescent tails. Donning a pair of leggings might actually lead people to believe you are a moving train of tail feathers, boasting a canvas of colorful "eyes" with the characteristic markings in blue, gold, red and green. Extending from waist to ankle, these soft and stretchy knit leggings will whisk you away to the tropical locales of Sri Lanka, Java or Burma, where the birds are indigenous. They are priced at $72.

Capris

Several of Bela Fit's capris and leggings have common patterns, however there are numerous designs that are exclusive to the line of cropped pants. One of these is the Pineapple design, a bold print with dark pink and red pineapples, including vivid green crowns of pointed leaves set against a dramatic black background. Stretching three quarters of the way down the calf, the capris are breathable and fast drying while also strong enough to resist abrasions, punctures and tears. Pineapple capris retail for $49.

Peace capris evoke images of carefree days of the 60s, with memories of flower children, freedom of expression and Woodstock. The neon pink, purple, green and blue peace signs, white geometric shapes and bouncy blue and pink hibiscus flowers are nestled in a blanket of black, comingling to create a light-hearted nudge to get the heart rate up. A message of acceptance and affirmation seems to underscore the harmony inherent in the design. "Peace for our time" can be achieved for $29.

Vintage Jean capris are an incredibly lifelike recreation of trendy, ripped denims in hues of light, medium and dark blue. Constructed from a comfortable, high-performance fabric with elasticity that stretches up to five times, these capris compact the body and make everything look a little tighter. The attractive crops can be worn while exercising as well as running errands or lunching on the patio, all the while providing gentle support, a firm fit and protection from the sun. They may be purchased for $68.

Bela Fit workout wear is available at various gyms, yoga and Pilates studios. Representatives regularly present private trunk shows. The products may also be found at fairs and festivals in southern California. In the Coachella Valley, Bela Fit is sold at private clubs including The Hideaway and The Madison Club, both in La Quinta, California.

Online sales are made through Amazon, eBay and, of course, the Bela Fit website (mybelafit.com). For more information or to contact Ursula Reisch, email info@mybelafit.com.

with cool jewels that embrace color, texture and natural elements

The Oiseaux de Paradis

The Oiseaux de Paradis, or Bird of Paradise, necklace is a classic example of the brand's design and sensibility. Crafted with a whopping 634 diamonds (12.01tcw) and 25 sapphires (2.43tcw), this piece is a masterful work of art and accessory. Part of the Oiseaux de Paradis collection, the design celebrates beauty and grace with an ethereal overtone and a nod to nature. This lovely piece can take flight on your own neck for $205,000.

Calm, cool and collected. That's how you plan to come across to the world this fall, right? Your confidence and moxie will get you most of the way, but the jeweled accessories you select will help you cross the finish line with artistry and aplomb.

We've outlined some elegant necklace options to consider as we move into peak season in the desert, ready to embrace the earth, moon and stars and maybe even diamonds, pearls and emeralds.

Van Cleef & Arpels

One of the global standard bearers of high jewelry, Van Cleef & Arpels was founded in 1896 by Alfred Van Cleef and his uncle Salomon Arpels in Paris on Place Vendome across from the Hotel Ritz. These pieces often feature flowers, animals and fairies, and they have been worn by such style icons as the Duchess of Windsor, Grace Kelly and Elizabeth Taylor.

The Bouton d'or

The Bouton d'or necklace really is cute as a gold button. The Bouton d'or collection was originally created in the late 1930s under the name "Paillette." The modern iteration showcases refined curves culminating in a delicate point, contrasting soft with angular. A harmonious bliss is created through the conjoined discs which are all hand-formed and polished. A concentration of 51 carnelian stones at the front of the necklace transitions to 30 lustrous Mother of Pearl stones and dozens of 18K pink gold round pastilles. Each has a teeny diamond set in the center, adding up to 186 total stones (5.55tcw). The 16.55 inch stunner is available for $99,000.

Van Cleef & Arpels

The Palmyre

The Palmyre necklace is precious, just like its stones. This six-row wonder features 384 round white diamonds (39.44tcw.) set in glistening 18K white gold. The Palmyre collection is light and airy, the stream of diamonds appearing almost like delicate droplets of water. The openwork structure, available in both white and yellow gold, accentuates the play of light and lends a sensual fluidity to the overall look. The Palmyre necklace may be purchased for $365,000.

The Flowerlace

The Flowerlace necklace brings forth images of flowers and lace, as the name suggests, showcasing the collaboration between two of Van Cleef & Arpels' most relied-upon categories of inspiration: nature and couture. Differentiated by its delicacy, the neck piece contains 423 white diamonds (20.22tcw.) of the highest industry standards, set in a languid bed of 18K white gold. Somewhat traditional in composition, the design feels fresh given its on-trend asymmetry with one long hanging vine decorated with three floral shapes of five petals each. Demure and dramatic at the same time, this work of art sells for $188,000.

The Snowflake

The Snowflake necklace inspires in any season with its cool and controlled presence. Van Cleef & Arpels has been interpreting the snowflake motif in its designs since the 1940s, leading to an entire collection. Round diamonds, 367 of them (30.99tcw.), brush gently against the skin, glittering with every twist and turn of the wearer. Set in bright 18K yellow gold, this necklace is likely to make one feel like a princess, no matter the season. It's priced at $340,000.

Irene Neuwirth

An independent, fine-jewelry company based in Los Angeles, Irene Neuwirth was founded in 2003 by designer Neuwirth and business partner Tracy Stoll. Neuwirth's fundamental inspiration for her designs is the splendor of the ocean. Viola Davis, Naomi Watts, Zoe Saldana, Julianne Moore and Iman are among the celebrities who favor the collection. Neuwirth's pieces are all produced in the United States.

Mixed-Gemstone & Pearl Pendant

Don't be fooled by the Mixed-Gemstone and Pearl Pendant Necklace. What at first appears as a simple strand of generously spaced pearls reveals itself to be a masterful mini-sculpture resting at your décolletage. Cultured Akoya round pearls are set in a satin-finished 18K rose and white gold chain. An oversized 2.5 inch pendant comprised of a single, carved, five-petal opal flower with greenish-blue hues is surrounded by eight smaller, milky white opal flowers (23.04tcw.). Full-cut white diamonds in 18K yellow gold accent the intricacy of the petals and leaves, with one opal flower growing on its own, midway along the chain. Also part of the Diamond Collection, this strand will be your very own for $97,520.

Emerald & Turquoise Geometric Link

The Emerald and Turquoise Geometric Link Necklace features a string of round turquoise cabochons (7.56tcw.) and three glowing rectangular emeralds (5.55tcw.). The nuances of the blue-green tones and textures blend beautifully, and once again, the juxtaposition of round and rectangular establishes a pleasing contrast in contours. Set in a prominent bed of 18K yellow gold, this chain is 19.5 inches in length and retails for $22,180.

Colombian Emerald

The Colombian Emerald Necklace also has a geometric foundation. This spectacular and sequential series of vibrant green Colombian emeralds (42.35tcw.) displays both square and rectangular stones with noticeable and highly desirable transparency. Great care has been taken to skillfully cut the stones to nearly identical dimensions for this piece, however the subtle variations in overall sizing is a testament to their natural beauty and one-of-a-kind sourcing, with the trademark warmth and intensity characteristic of Colombian emerald mines. Bring this set of South American gems into your life for $51,520.

Mixed-Gemstone geometric link

The Mixed-Gemstone geometric link necklace is an earthy yet elegant display of the finest natural stones. Pear-shaped and square blue, yellow, pink, peach, dark orange, sage and purple tourmalines (93.95tcw.) are strategically positioned along an 18-inch satin finished 18K yellow gold chain. Accented with square and pear-shaped aquamarines (1.47tcw.) and pave white diamonds (.30tcw.), each end is tipped with a short strand of oval-link chain for added dimension and interest. A very noticeable single oval pink tourmaline is encircled by a row of pave white diamonds. Welcome it into your home for $45,460.
