Publisher's Notes

By Timothy J. Pade • pade@desertgolfer.com

In this issue, we are proud to feature the most decorated Olympian of all time, Michael Phelps, whose record totals 22 medals. Phelps holds the all-time records for Olympic gold medals (18, double the second highest record holders), Olympic gold medals in individual events (11) and Olympic medals in individual events for a male (13). In winning eight gold medals at the 2008 Beijing Games, Phelps took the record for the most first-place finishes at any single Olympic Games. Five of those victories were in individual events, tying the single Games record. In the 2012 Summer Olympics in London, Phelps won four gold and two silver medals, making him the most successful athlete of the Games for the third Olympics in a row.

Now retired from the sport of swimming, Phelps has become an accomplished golfer, bringing the same passion and dedication to his new sport as he did to swimming. Most recently, he was featured on the Golf Channel with renowned instructor Hank Haney. Haney has worked with Phelps to improve his game for more than a year, and he continues to coach him on and off the golf course.

Our photographer Dane Andrew has given us a superb cover shot, capturing Phelps' intensity on the golf course. While we may no longer see Phelps in swimming pools around the world, he is often seen in high-profile celebrity tournaments such as the Ryder Cup Pro-Am, AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am and, most recently, in the American Century Championship at Lake Tahoe. Please see our profile of this dynamic and accomplished athlete starting on pg. 12.

Also in this issue, you will find an insightful report on Donald Trump's new course in Aberdeen, Scotland, written by our own Clive Clark, a European PGA Tour star, Ryder Cup player and accomplished golf-course architect. See his review of the course on pg. 16.

Meanwhile, David McLay Kidd, another accomplished course architect, has created a notable layout at Huntsman Springs in Idaho's Teton Valley. We at Desert Golf Magazine predict that this new gem will soon achieve high rankings. Additionally, all profits from this resort go to cancer research, so golfers have multiple reasons to play here. See more about Huntsman Springs on pg. 20.

On pages 24-27 and 28-31 we feature two amazing golf facilities in the Coachella Valley: Bermuda Dunes Country Club and Desert Willow. Bermuda Dunes is a classic layout that was in the Bob Hope Classic rotation for 50 years. There is a lot going on at this venerable club, including some changes to the facilities that will make this beloved club even better. Desert Willow in Palm Desert offers two courses that provide a championship experience akin to that in top private clubs, yet they are open to the public. Owned by the city of Palm Desert, this facility provides amazing golf as well as a spectacular clubhouse with excellent dining.

As always, we also provide comprehensive coverage of all the lifestyle elements that matter, including real estate, dining, fashion and jewelry. Of particular note is our travel feature on Jamaica; if you have not yet made it to this fascinating Caribbean island, consider a trip over the coming months. And our automotive reviewer offers up a look at the new Mercedes Concept S Class Coupe. Finally, our golf course guides provide the latest information on courses in the desert region.

We hope you enjoy this issue and that you're already having an amazing start to this new season—we're proud to be part of it with you.

Avoiding the Water

It turns out that golf and swimming are very different

Photos by Dane Andrew/Total
Entertainment News

“Golf really is a dangerous sport,” quips Olympian Michael Phelps. But we’ll get to that story a little later.

Born in Baltimore, 28-year-old Phelps is famous for being the most decorated Olympian of all time with 22 medals, 18 of them gold. After the London games in 2012, Phelps officially retired from swimming.

Once the celebratory trip to Disneyland was over, whatever was a 27-year-old retired Olympian and multimillionaire to do? In Phelps’ case, he decided to play golf.

Accustomed to the regimen and success of training, Phelps enlisted the aid of renowned swing coach Hank Haney. It was suggested to the young athlete, a complete newbie to the game, that he sign up as Haney’s next student on the coach’s popular television show, The Haney Project. Phelps accepted, thinking, “How hard can this be?”

One year later Phelps exclaims, “It’s brutal! I don’t understand how it can be that hard to hit this little tiny white ball and hit it straight every time. But it just doesn’t happen for me.”

Averaging 110–115 in his first year, Phelps admits to currently not having a registered handicap. However, he is happy to say that he has shot a few rounds in the mid-80s and is steadily improving.

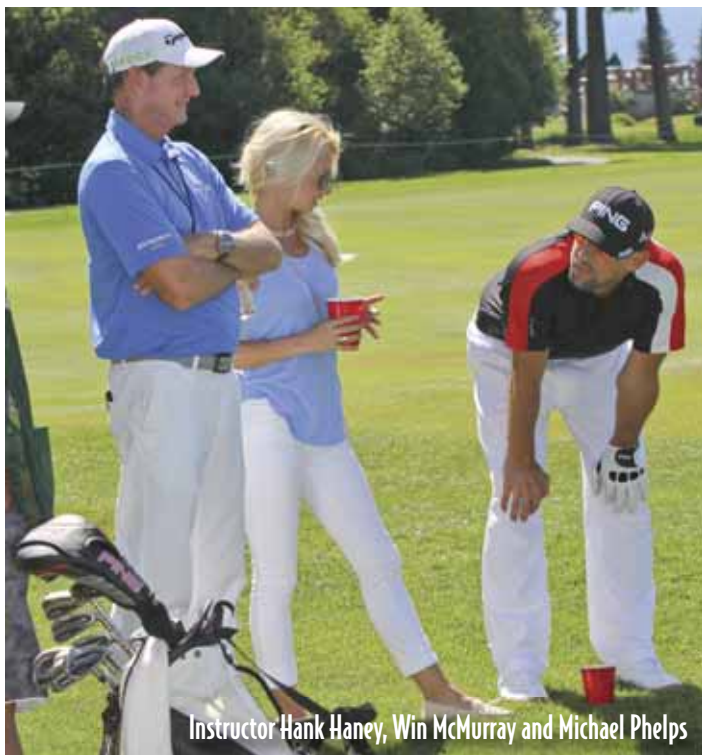

Not surprising, Phelps did not anticipate how humbling this game can be. “It’s been an eye-opening experience for me just because I’ve usually been able to pick everything up fairly quickly. This has been a sport where, when I was with Hank on the Haney Project for six months, we must have hit almost 20,000 balls. I still have calluses and blisters and am taping up my hands almost every day.”

Now possessing more game and more confidence, Phelps feels honored when invited to play in PGA Pro-Ams raising money for charity. “I played in the Pro-Am at the Ryder Cup and the Waste Management, as well as a couple of others that were really nerve-cracking, like Medinah. Going out there in front of thousands and thousands of people, I was so nervous I couldn’t put the tee in the ground. I had to take a 3-wood, crank the tee and put the ball on the top so my hands weren’t shaking so much.”

Charity golf tournaments aren’t the only charities that Phelps is involved in. He has his own foundation, the IM Program, and the goal is simple: Encourage children to live healthy and active lifestyles and teach them how to swim.

“We work with the Boys & Girls Clubs of America,” explains Phelps. “In four years, more than 3,000 kids have become water safe, which helps them believe in themselves, helps them set goals. It’s been cool being able to get some of the stories that I’ve gotten from kids who have overcome fears, who have started heading in the right direction in terms of goals they want to achieve. That's something that excites me and that's one of my favorite things!" You can learn more at michaelphelpsfoundation.org

Phelps may not be ready for professional status on the golf tour, but he does have a club-endorsement agreement with Ping. After touring Ping's Arizona facility, Phelps was fitted for a set of clubs that accommodates his 6-foot-4-inch frame, long arms and large hands. He's already noticed a big improvement in the flight of the ball. "It's pretty wild," he recently told the media. "It's crazy to think this sport is so technical. A lot of sports are very technical, but one of the (Ping) guys said there are 50-something different shafts they can put on the clubs. I'm used to having a pair of goggles; a small, medium or large swim cap; and a jammer to put on and that's it."

Ping did add a few special touches to Phelps' clubs, including accents in red, white, blue and gold.

"I just want to have fun," the 28-year-old says. "That's the biggest thing." Phelps truly enjoys playing with other athletes. "That's the cool thing," he says. "We all just love the sport. Even though it's a very challenging sport and a very humbling sport, we all still love to go out there and play any course because you'll never see the same course twice."

After a moment's pause, he continues. "If you do replay a course, the same hole might not even be able to be played the exact same way you played it before. I think that's something that's pretty neat about golf. In a swimming pool, I saw a black line on the bottom and swam in lane lines in 78-degree water. There's really not much you can change in that environment."

As for the injury and the bulky black boot he now needs to wear, it seems that the former swimmer worsened an existing stress fracture while playing golf, perhaps by stepping into a hole. "Golf really is a dangerous sport," he says with a laugh. "The good thing is, I only have to pack one shoe."

Escape to Scotland

During the desert's sizzling summer months, find respite at a magnificent new course in Scotland

By Clive Clark

“The Donald,” not one to hide his light under a bushel, declared his new course, Trump International Scotland, as “the greatest course in the world.”

Well, maybe; however, the course raters at Golf Magazine ranked it No. 50 on their list of the Top 100 Courses in the world. Lofty praise for a new course, you might think. But Trump didn't view it that way, responding, “I am honored, but not thrilled.” He believes his course is destined to achieve its rightful place above Augusta, Cyprus and Pine Valley, not to mention the grand old links of Scotland, including the Old Course at St Andrews, Muirfield and Turnberry.

Trump International Scotland is located 10 miles north of Aberdeen, which is a three-hour drive north of Edinburgh and halfway up the east coast of Scotland. Politically, it has raised many eyebrows in golf's native country. The Scots are a calm and ‘dour’ nation of folk, but expose them to Trump's bold tactics and they rise like a swarm of discontented hornets. The to'ing and fro'ing during the permitting process ended similarly to the 1746 Battle of Culloden, where several small detachments and a couple of battalions went missing in action.

Who knows what bones will be discovered in time down in the depths of the deepest bunkers?

But that's enough about the politics. What is the course like and is it worth a trip from the West Coast of the United States? Trump's course meanders partially through a wildlife reserve and also through massive sand dunes that are, literally, a moving feast. Many said that even if planning permits were granted, it would be impossible to stabilize the dunes. Trump didn't believe that and, having battled his way through the permitting process, he had battalions of green staff plant an amazing 11.5 million individual marram plants, which are native to sand dunes and about the only thing that will stabilize them.

In short, the course is spectacular and dramatic. Martin Hawtree, the British golf-course designer whose family has been in the business for a long time, did a very good job. Whichever photographs you have seen, they don't do this course justice. In the flesh, the sand dunes are at least double the size they appear to be in mere images. Some tees are perched at least 100 feet above the fairway, providing magnificent views of the course and, in some instances, spectacular long views out to the North Sea.

Trump being Trump, no expense has been spared at Trump International Scotland. However, golf connoisseurs and aficionados alike have raised concerns as to whether or not the course plays like a true traditional Scottish links. In an effort to grow the course in, the fairways contain a substantial amount of rye grass, the same cultivar as is used for the overseeding process in all of our U.S. desert courses. As you may know, that produces a "Hollywood green" appearance, and partially because the fairways are new and need a lot of water during grow-in, they also play slow with little run. This is a far cry from the pace and color of traditional links, although as the course matures, I am sure these true-links qualities will emerge.

The Scots may raise their eyebrows at the $300 greens fee; however, it's very much in line with Muirfield, Turnberry, Castle Stuart and Kingsbarns. Agreed, this is quite a lot of money for a round of golf, but if you compare it to Pebble Beach at $495, Spy Glass at $370 and Whistling Straits at $360, it's not over the top.

Fee aside, the course has many fans. It has been called "awesome" and "amazing," and more than a few believe it is likely to become one of the top 10 courses in the world. There is no doubt that this is a must-play golf course. It's challenging but playable, a par 72 that measures 7,423 yards from the tips. There are 108 tees, which equates to six tees per hole, meaning there is a tee to suit every category of golfer.

Bunkers? Yes! There are 93 traditional pot bunkers—18 of them on the 18th hole! That's almost 20 percent of the bunkers on No. 18, which makes me think of Walter Danecki. He was the mailman from Milwaukee who made a bogus entry to the British Open by fraudulently declaring himself a scratch player when, in fact, he was struggling off a 24 handicap. He got stuck in a few bunkers as he carded his way to a record-smashing score of 119. Sadly, he did not improve on this effort in the 2nd round. The mind boggles thinking about how he would have tackled this beauty, the 18th at Trump.

We may never know the answer to that. But you can certainly find out how you do on Trump's spectacular closing hole.

Huntsman Springs

by Lisa Perry

Win-win in Idaho's majestic Teton Valley: Award-winning golf resort donates all profits to cancer research

In just four years, a first-class mountain resort in the Teton Valley continually proves that that an idyllic rural retreat can indeed provide sumptuous creature comforts without commercialism and crowds. In Driggs, Idaho, Huntsman Springs operates in such a quietly efficient, personable way that harried urbanites continually choose it for an extended getaway. The resort is the creation of four-time cancer survivor, international businessman and philanthropist Jon Huntsman, Sr., and all profits garnered by the resort are donated to cancer research. His inspiration for Huntsman Springs? A day on the Teton River casting for trout.

David Huntsman, resort CEO and president of the Huntsman Cancer Foundation says, "My father is an avid fisherman and he loves Idaho—he was born and raised not far from Huntsman Springs. He is very hard-charging and driven from a business sense, and when he goes to the river he is always thinking of a business justification to rationalize spending time fishing."

Huntsman says that his father began buying thousands of acres of land in the Teton Valley. "He thought it would be a passive investment, but it evolved into something that could benefit those suffering from cancer. That's our driving motivation every single day." All profits from Huntsman Springs go to the Huntsman Cancer Foundation, owned and run by the University of Utah, which specializes in genetic cancer research. The foundation is structured so that the Huntsman family can never accept any of its accompanying profits.

Golf Course Architect David McLay Kidd

Scottish-born David McLay Kidd, who counts St. Andrews Links' Castle Course among his creations, was charged with putting together a world-class destination golf course in the Teton Valley. "It's designed as maximum risk, maximum reward," says Tony Snoey, Huntsman Springs' general manager and president. "Options are always different, depending on time of day and weather. It's a good test of golf. That being said, the views are pretty, the course is in pristine condition and hospitality is second to none. It's a total experience in the Grand Tetons.

Mountain View Lodge

the wellness center opens in 2014, complimentary swimming and tennis lessons will be offered as well.

The Huntsmans have donated funds for Driggs' new county courthouse and upgrades for its high school ball fields. Each year, the resort hosts an annual "Celebrate America" festival, free to the public and held downtown the week before Independence Day. Guests enjoy a county fair and a nighttime concert with fireworks held on the Huntsman Springs driving range. The event began in 2010 with 7,000 attending and grew to an estimated 30,000 this year.

Huntsman Springs' logos feature Lucky Pierre, the resort's resident rare white buffalo, considered sacred in some cultures. Visitors from around the region come to see and snap photos of the friendly 2,000-pound mascot and his female herd. The family owns a collection of classic cars, and the resort displays one each week for

"First-timers say, 'Wow, that was tough, but it's fun and I can't wait to get back out there.' They probably left some shots. Every time you play, it opens more and more to reveal itself. It's mysterious the first few times until you learn its nuances. Members love it."

The course and resort community have been recognized with at least 15 national awards. While golf is a showpiece, the resort also offers stellar fly-fishing, hiking and biking, and access to an annual 500 inches of powder at Grand Targhee Ski Resort, just 12 miles away. Snoey says, "Huntsman Springs is also becoming known for service. We take great care of our members and guests, and nothing goes unchecked—whether it's stocking homes with groceries, shuttling them to and from the airport, picking up a license at the courthouse or finding a mechanic to fix their car. You can have the best amenities money can buy, but you need the right people to make them work."

A new venue with tennis courts, swimming pool and spa is scheduled to open onsite next June. "The upcoming wellness center is important from a family aspect; we want to have exciting and fun opportunities available for those who are not golfers," Huntsman says. "We're proud of what we've done and think our property sells itself. We want people to experience it for themselves, and we think they'll agree with us that it's a wonderful place for families and to get away. It's important that it bears our family name—it's near and dear to our hearts and very personal."

Huntsman Springs' residential community attracts successful families and individuals from around the country who maintain second and third homes, but members are not required to own property to enjoy the resort. Memberships are streamlined. "Once you pay your dues, there are no cart fees and no food-and-beverage minimum," says Snoey. Golf lessons are unlimited and complimentary. "Our PGA staff provides about 10 lessons a day to our members, whether they are just learning or improving their game." When area auto enthusiasts. "The Huntsmans try to be a great partner to the community," says Snoey.

Do the Huntsmans get to enjoy their namesake resort? "My parents have nine children and 56 grandchildren," says Huntsman. "It takes an entire community like Huntsman Springs to hold a family reunion."

Bermuda Dunes Country Club

The very definition of classic

Classic
classic adjective \klay-sik\
a: serving as a standard of excellence :
of recognized value.
b: traditional, enduring.
c: characterized by simple tailored lines in fashion year after year.

Whether it's a car, a boat, a movie or a golf club, the characteristics are the same. The definition speaks for itself. Classics are generated by visionaries executing a futuristic concept during construction, fueled by the belief their design principles will stand the test of time. If they are correct, the passing of the years will eventually christen their creation as such.

While many were built during a period of timeless architecture, not all of the Coachella Valley's older courses have attained the classic label. Some were never destined to reach classic status. Others, their 1950s roots abandoned, were updated beyond recognition.

Of course, renovation projects are not all evil or even necessarily anti-historical; indeed, it's vital that clubs improve periodically to maintain membership and attract new members. The ideal situation for any club is to have a golf course that stands the test of time, like a leather motorcycle jacket or the little black dress—or like Bermuda Dunes Country Club.

The signs of its 1959 birthday are everywhere. From the homes in the community to the welcome mats, from the Barbacide, Clubman, and Vitalis available in the men's locker room to the first tee of the Classic 1 Course, Bermuda Dunes Country Club is a trip back in time. The low, flat roofs, sharp angles and floor-to-ceiling windows featured in the architecture throughout the community set the tone for the experience even before one reaches the clubhouse. The original clubhouse was not much bigger than the homes that surrounded it; however, in 1985, the original was replaced with the current Spanish-influenced clubhouse, which boasts 45,000 square feet within the walls of its contemporary Southwestern design.

With 18 holes crafted by William Bell Jr., the club quickly filled its membership roster with Southern California's elite. Original members included Clark Gable, Cary Grant, William Holden, Eddie Fisher and Debbie Reynolds, helping to propel Bermuda Dunes into its lofty place among the Coachella Valley's original 18-hole championship-caliber courses.

The club requisitioned Bell Jr. to design the Lakes Course in 1963, creating 27 architecturally congruous holes. These nine new holes blended seamlessly with the originals, making Bermuda Dunes one of the first in the valley to offer 27 holes of golf to its members. The strength of the layout kept it in the Bob Hope Classic rotation of courses for 50 years, and Arnold Palmer played Bermuda Dunes to PGA Tour wins in 1959, 1960 and 1973, the last being his final Tour win.

"I think the course that we have is classic in design and classic in the way you play it. If you hit good shots, you play well," says

Tony Hoyles, the club's director of golf. "The members like that there is nothing hidden, nothing tricky. It's just good golf."

The original nines have been appropriately dubbed Classic 1 (3,503 yards) and Classic 2 (3,514 yards). Together, they make up the Classic Course and are numbered 1-18, with each nine a par 36 from the black tees. The third nine is referred to as The Lake Course (3,271 yards), also a par 36.

One spin around quickly reveals why the Classic Course is a favorite of members and PGA Tour pros alike. With a generally flat layout, and tees just off to the sides and backs of the greens, the nines are eminently walkable. Bell Jr. scraped interest and landforms from the flat desert, building up certain tees and greens and including the occasional holding pond/hazard. There's also the 1950s bunkering that still exists at Bermuda Dunes today as the proverbial classic example of how Bell Jr. and his contemporaries employed sand traps on the golf course.

While the bunkers may be somewhat simple in shape compared to more modern concepts, they are always a factor in play. Whether they front the green on the left and right, as they do on each and every hole of Classic 1, or encircle the green as they do on Classic 2's 160-yard par 3 No. 12, golfers find themselves giving the bunkers great consideration. Or they find themselves playing out of them. Or both.

"They do a good job of being right in the way," says Hoyles of the bunkers. "It seems like they come into play on every approach. For an amateur golfer who tends to come up a half club short, that puts them directly in play. The greens also have a reputation for being firm and fast, and they're small. So if you go over a green, you've got your work cut out for you, too."

Even a flawless 1959 Impala has a new stereo, and often a few other key parts replaced along the way. Bermuda Dunes has executed the equivalent at the club, completing such capital-improvement projects as renovation of green complexes on all 27 holes and the addition of a new well, both in the last four years. There has also been work to minimize Bermuda Dunes' irrigated turf. But, while subtle changes and improvements have been made under the hood, the courses remain as close to unmolested as 55 years of play, growth and environmental effects allow.

It's said down South, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it." And if you've got a classic like Bermuda Dunes, you don't fix it. You enjoy it.

Desert Willow Golf Resort

Firecliff Hole No. 17

Palm Desert's premier golfing destination provides a country club experience that the general public can embrace and enjoy

All you need is one quick glance and you'll understand why Desert Willow Golf Resort has become one of the premier golfing destinations in Palm Desert, Calif. From its high-end golf academy to its exquisitely remodeled clubhouse and impeccable views of the Santa Rosa Mountains, the resort offers distinctive country club appeal—yet it's open and available to the public. And just like a fine country club, Desert Willow's staff of golf instructors is exceptional, and its range of dining options, from teriyaki chicken sandwiches to lobster mac n' cheese, is able to satisfy all taste buds.

But make no mistake about it: The resort's two courses, Firecliff and Mountain View, are the main attractions.

Voted the No. 1 Best Public Access Course by Desert Golf Magazine every year since 2010, Firecliff features tight fairways; fast, sloping greens; and over 100 bunkers to challenge golfers of all skill levels. Measuring 7,056 yards from the back tees, the course, which currently has a 138 slope and 73.6 course rating, is typically described with one adjective: thrilling.

"Course management is crucial, as there are plenty of water hazards and bunkers surrounding the greens and fairways," says Bruce Nation, director of sales and marketing for the resort. "The water hazards can be unforgiving and the bunker placements are difficult. To avoid high scores, golfers must tactically maneuver their way around the course."

Whereas the challenges of Firecliff are immediately apparent, Mountain View offers golfers a more tranquil experience. Surrounded entirely by the Santa Rosa Mountains, the course is not as long or narrow as Firecliff, and it does not feature as many hazards. That said, Mountain View is anything but a cakewalk at 6,913 yards from the tips.

Opened for public use in 1997, the courses were designed by two renowned course architects, Dr. Michael Hurdzan and Dana Fry, along with John Cook, an 11-time PGA Tour winner. Since their founding, each of the courses, operated by Kemper Sports Management and owned by the city of Palm Desert, has received national recognition, appearing on Golfweek and Golf World's Best Municipal Courses lists. Last year, Golf Digest rated Firecliff and Mountain View four and 4.5 stars, respectively, on its Places to Play list.

In addition to its award-winning courses, the resort offers a golf instruction facility that is steadily gaining in popularity. Overseen by Director of Instruction Paul Bucy, a 19-year PGA professional, The

Mountain View Hole No. 6

Palm Desert Golf Academy provides a range of lessons and services. Bucy and his staff presently offer instruction focused on putting, chipping and swing fundamentals, and during a two-hour-long on-course lesson, they evaluate every aspect of a golfer's game.

For students who are interested in assessing their swing, the academy utilizes the J.C. Video swing-analysis system, which evaluates ball flight, swing angle and swing speed. Players can also receive a fitness evaluation that focuses primarily on flexibility, culminating in a workout program tailored for each golfer's specific needs.

Bucy is a certified club fitter for Titleist who uses the Zelosity Launch Monitor to fit drivers, irons and wedges. Each academy instructor is certified to fit all major brands and customizes recommendations to each golfer, helping them perform at their utmost potential.

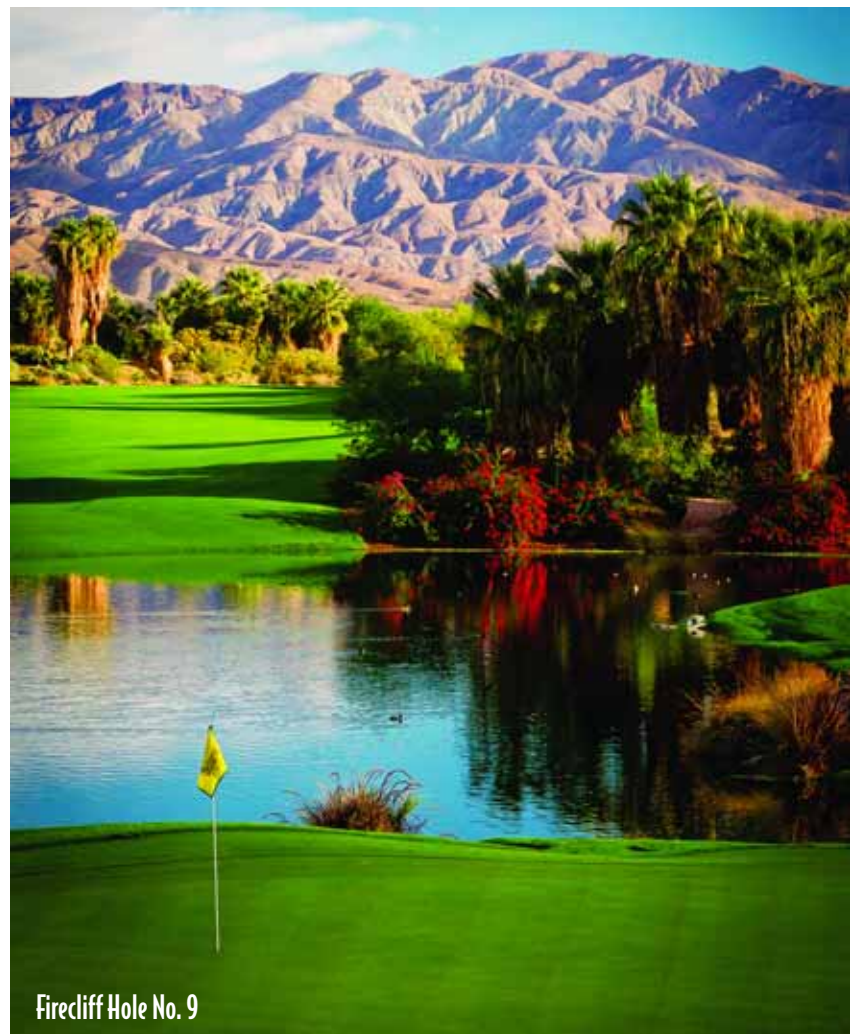

"Golf Academy memberships are now being offered," says Nation. "All new members, who sign up for 2014 will be entered into a drawing to receive a new TaylorMade SLDR driver."

Through membership, golfers enjoy a wide range of benefits, including four 50-minute individual lessons, discounts on club fitting and instruction, and member-only clinics.

The resort also offers two notable savings programs: the Platinum Club Card and the Double Eagle Program. Ranging in price from $229 for Palm Desert residents to $329 for non-residents, the Platinum Club Card provides such benefits as reduced greens fees and a 15-percent discount on golf lessons.

If golfers are visiting the Palm Desert area for only a short period of time, the Double Eagle promotion is ideal. As long as golfers play two rounds in 14 days, they are entitled to receive up to 30 percent off their purchases of each round, an offer valid until September 21, 2014.

Although the resort is primarily known for its acclaimed golf courses, academy and promotions, it was not designed for golfers alone. In fact, the 33,000-square-foot clubhouse, renovated in 2011, hosts hundreds of weddings, banquets and business meetings each year. One social gathering in particular, Music and Dining Under the Stars, has become increasingly popular in the Coachella Valley. Guests on these evenings enjoy buffet meals, entertainment and musical genres from jazz to classic rock.

The clubhouse also provides several dining options. Cook's Grill serves breakfast and lunch items; Roadrunner Café offers a lunch and snack bar; and Lakeview Terrace and Vista Bar are popular destinations for crab-cake sliders, black cherry martinis and frozen pineapple margaritas; the terrace overlooks Firecliff's ninth and eighteenth holes.

"Desert Willow offers it all, says Nation. "Whether guests are looking for golf instruction, fine dining, entertainment or serene views of the desert and mountains, they will find it at our resort."

Recovery Shot

Golf, After the great recession, still defines Arizona, especially on the fringes

Desert Highlands

High above Scottsdale's desert floor, one distinctive characteristic stands out among the craggy mountains, rugged landscape and tens of thousands of tile-roofed homes: This metropolis, experiencing a real-estate revival since the Great Recession, remains a hotbed for golf.

The most unheralded courses, though, are located around the rim of the of the famous Valley of the Sun and in other parts of the state. Hundreds of emerald-green golf courses dot the terrain, giving the arid landscape a lush if surreal appeal unlike any other in the United States. And it's not just a quantity issue; the quality is extraordinary, too.

In the early 1980s, golf really began to heat up in the Valley of the Sun. Northern Scottsdale's mountain-studded Sonoran Desert—ideally suited for dramatic golf designs—witnessed a real-estate boom, which gave birth to some of the country's most dynamic private-golf communities. Among them: Desert Highlands, Troon Golf & Country Club and Desert Mountain, with its six championship courses, all designed by Jack Nicklaus.

A decade earlier, Rio Verde, recently renovated by Tom Lehman, had become an established 36-hole club adjacent to the McDowell Mountain Regional Park. And before the economy nosedived and real estate swooned, clubs like Pine Canyon helped put mountain golf on the map in Flagstaff, Ariz. It's now positioned for a strong recovery, like many places in Arizona.

Pine Canyon

Pine Canyon has earned its share of awards, including America's Best Residential Golf Course (Golfweek) and Best Clubhouse of the Year (Golf Inc.). Now, True Life Companies, its new owner, is heralding a revival. Real estate and memberships are on the rise.

Golf industry veterans in the Phoenix area are optimistic as well. Don Rea, owner-operator of Augusta Ranch Golf Course, a short 18-hole course in Mesa, was recently named president of the Southwest Section PGA. After a tough weather season last year, Rea thinks this season will be the opposite.

"To me, it's always about having a good overseed and course conditions," he says. "We are known for that. I tell people no matter what you pay, the courses in Arizona are going to be in great condition and the value will be there."

Since 1999, Bill Huffman, Arizona's most established and prolific golf writer, has hosted Backspin the Golf Show, a local radio program dedicated to the game. After 31 years in the state, he's seen it all. While the Scottsdale area offers terrific golf courses like Troon North and Grayhawk, Huffman says golfers willing to drive a little will save a lot.

Gold Canyon

He points to Southern Dunes in Maricopa, south of Phoenix, and Gold Canyon in the East Valley, as two hidden gems of the greater Phoenix area. "Gold Canyon is the perfect alternative to Scottsdale," Huffman says. "It has the views, plus it's more reasonably priced. It's the No. 8 most-underrated golf course in America, according to golf.com. Southern Dunes is the best Native American-owned course in Arizona."

Other quality courses in the area noted by Huffman as under-publicized include Raven at Verrado in Buckeye, Quintero Golf & Country Club in Peoria, northwest of Phoenix, and even Sedona Golf Resort.

Rea likes Longbow in Mesa, Papago in Phoenix, Gold Canyon and some of the better-known Scottsdale courses such as TPC Scottsdale, Talking Stick, Camelback and McCormick Ranch. "I also enjoy Eagle Mountain with its box canyon," he says.

Most golfers are generally smitten with Talking Stick, a 36-hole stunner. Situated on a flat desert parcel, the North course is a minimalistic inland links creation with wickedly effective risk-reward options, complemented by the South course's lush parkland routing. Purists favor the North's distinct heathland flavorings, generous no-rough fairways, knee-high native grasses, swept-up finger bunkers and dunesy hillocks.

Raven Golf Club Phoenix, like Talking Stick, Papago and McCormick Ranch, is less penal than many of the Valley's target courses. These layouts feature smooth (and grassy) tee-to-green transitions, short (if any) carries over raw desert and much larger landing zones in the fairways.

There is relief for the golfer wary of three-sleeve-per-round days. The Raven, known for its pine-tree-lined fairways and multi-tiered greens, is a Gary Panks and David Graham-designed course only minutes from Phoenix Sky Harbor Airport. "Raven Phoenix," Huffman says, "is by far the best golf course near the airport."

Opened in the late 1990s, Raven quickly climbed into the upper echelon of Coore and Crenshaw took their time on this creation. They walked the land for two months in an effort to locate the most desirable green sites before deciding their routing plan. They ultimately decided upon the present-day plan because it afforded them a front-nine loop moving clockwise and a back nine that played in a counter-clockwise motion, moving in and out of the hundreds of large saguaro cacti that dominate this site.

In Arizona, like many places, the season determines the price you'll pay to play. High season typically runs from December to April and low season from June to August. Mid-seasons are the two stretches in between.

Phoenix's high-end public offerings. It fell into disrepair about five years ago, but OB Sports Management, based in Scottsdale, has taken over the course and revitalized it.

The renovation included new bunkers, the pruning of dead trees and 750 tons of cinder spread under trees to give the course a cleaner look. There's not a saguaro cactus or cholla bush on the property. Rather, it's a gentle parkland course, straightforward, challenging from the championship tees and fair.

The best hole at Raven Phoenix is one of the easiest in terms of handicap. No. 5 is a classic risk-reward par 4. It's only 324 yards, but it features seven bunkers. Get greedy and it's just as easy to make a double-bogey as it is a birdie.

Arizona has hundreds of great holes like that one.

Forty-five minutes northwest of Raven Phoenix, We-Ko-Pa Golf Club, another course on the fringe of the Valley, is filled with strong and demanding par 4s, short and incredibly intriguing par 3s, multi-tiered putting surfaces and elevated teeing grounds along with split fairways. "We-Ko-Pa," Rea says, "is great with its open corridors and no homes."

The result is wonderful drama within the natural desert environment. We-Ko-Pa's Saguaro and Cholla courses were both included in the Top 100 Resort Courses ranking by Golfweek for 2013. The Bill Coore and Ben Crenshaw-designed Saguaro layout was ranked No. 20, while the Scott Miller-designed Cholla course was ranked No. 46.

Saguaro opened in 2005 and featured design elements not commonly found in the desert. Built for walking, Saguaro has more in common with older, more traditional courses where greens are close to tees and the course follows the natural movement of the land.

Noteworthy

The season will determine the price in Arizona: High season typically runs from December to April, low from June to August; mid-seasons are the two stretches in between.

The latest on golf gear and other products you simply must have

By Mike Conrad

With the holidays right around the corner, airlines and highways will be busy. Needless to say, space will be a premium on a plane or in the car, so we've compiled a selection of gadgets that we hope will make your travel days a little easier.

ODOYO Smartphone Cases

There are apps for everything, including those that turn your smart phone into a personal GPS system to help keep you on course and driving in the right direction. The downside? Your phone could be on and in use for many hours at a time. Not to worry! ODOYO manufactures smart-phone cases with a built-in spare lithium polymer battery, which gives you the power you need throughout the entire day—no more searching around for a quick charge. And you have options based on your usage. For heavy iPhone users, there's the Power+Shell EX, which features a built-in 2200mAh high-capacity rechargeable battery. That is far more powerful than the standard 1440mAh battery in the iPhone 5. In addition to the extended battery life, the Power+Shell EX also protects your iPhone. A cool little feature is its "kickstand" that allows you to watch videos or movies hands-free. Each unit has a micro-USB charger that charges both the case and phone at the same time. In addition to iPhone cases, ODOYO offers a variety of cases for devices by other manufacturers. ODOYOusa.com

Denon Exercise Freak

I was very excited to find a wireless Bluetooth headset that sounds great and allows me to "cut the cord," especially handy when working out to mitigate all those holiday calories. I can now walk freely and not have to worry about how I carry my iPod /iPhone, MP3 player or other Bluetooth device. The Denon Exercise Freak is not just for exercise; it's perfect for that flight or long drive in the back seat. One of its best features is that you can control the volume or even take a phone call while wearing the headset. It's extremely comfortable and designed to resist sweat, and the behind-the-ear design keeps the earpiece in place even through the most intense workout. As of this writing, Denon is offering a rebate toward purchase of the Exercise Freak. Check it out at <http://usa.denon.com>

iprop

Another cool little gadget is the iprop, a universal tablet stand. Soft and infinitely adjustable, it reminds me of a small beanbag chair for my iPad. Its flexible design means it can be used on flat or uneven surfaces, and it works with Motorola, Sharp, BlackBerry and Apple devices, whether tablets or phones. It's ideal for use on airplane trays or to keep your device steady while you're riding—not driving—in the car. The design is simple but effective; it even held my iPad without me having to remove the hard-shell case. dockem.com

UrgentRx

When my family travels, we often end up packing a medical case that would put many doctors to shame. Finally, there's a product that has everything you're likely to need but doesn't take up a lot of space in luggage, and it conveniently fits in the glove box or your golf bag. UrgentRx offers power packs of many over-the-counter medications. Whether you or your travel companions are prone to upset stomach, aches and pains, allergies, heartburn or headache, there's a remedy for you. As soon as you have any of the above symptoms, just rip open the pack and pour the fast-dissolving powder pack into your mouth. Raspberry, cherry and lemon-lime are just a few of the flavors available. Keep a few packs with you where ever you go. urgentrx.com

Spare One

Travel is one of those times when parents are hyper aware of safety—theirs and their children's. Spare One offers an emergency cell phone that operates on a single AA battery. This phone is perfect to put in your child's backpack or your car for an emergency situation. You can use it as a standard pre-paid phone; however the best feature may be that you do not even need a SIM card to use the emergency call button. The latest version, called the Spare One Plus, now has an available location and alert service. It comes in a waterproof bag that floats. Of course, the reality is that you hope neither you nor your child ever have to use this phone, but if there is an emergency, it provides a lot of peace of mind knowing it's "in the bag." Check it out at spareone.com

Here's hoping everyone has safe holiday travels and gets to enjoy time with family. And if you are traveling and have an extra long flight or drive, go ahead and catch up on my blog at gottahavegadget.com

A Second Home as Income

What you need to know to make it work for you

If you're thinking of buying a second home, have you thought about it as an income producing property? There are many advantages to positioning your second home as a seasonal rental, and you can create a rental strategy that works for you and your needs. For example, you can choose when to rent the home, to whom you want to rent it and for how much. The right rental strategy could fully cover your house payment or cover enough that a second home once thought to be out of reach is now an affordable reality.

Before buying, check the local city and county ordinances regarding rentals in the area where you want to buy. Many cities charge a variety of taxes, including a bed tax just like the local hotels are charged. If the home is located in a community, you should also check the HOA rules and CCRs for any rental restrictions. Many clubs have a one-month-minimum rental policy in order to avoid a new rowdy bunch of tourists visiting their community pool every weekend.

The first step in positioning your home as a rental property is to make a list of all the things that you love about it and the surrounding area. Why would someone want to vacation in your town, and what makes your home special compared to all the other homes out there? You should also research how much you can charge for your home as compared to other rental homes on the market.

Next, choose a rental management strategy. One option is what I call the "Friends and Family" rental strategy. This is as simple as posting pictures of your property on your Facebook page and creating an email that goes out only to immediate friends and family. The pros of this strategy are that you are renting to people you know and who are likely to take good care of your property. The cons are that you will get requests for free rentals, and if there are damages you might have a very awkward time collecting.

Another option is the "Do It Yourself" strategy. In this scenario, owners manage their own property, using websites such as VRBO (Vacation Rental by Owner), HomeAway, CyberRental or FlipKey to advertise it. The owner must answer phone calls and email inquiries and deal directly with renters. If you choose this route, the best advice is to get the renter on the phone and have a chat. You can handle many rental details by email; however, there is nothing like talking on the phone to get a sense of someone. If you are not comfortable, do not rent to them—you can say no for any reason.

A third strategy is to use a professional realtor or rental company. The con is that you lose some of your profit. The pro, however, is that this strategy gives you some distance from the renters—and potential hassles. The fact is that it is a lot more work than many people realize to advertise and screen potential renters, draw up contracts, collect money, check renters in and out and so on.

It's also important to note that you can choose any combinations of these strategies. You could, for example, have a non-exclusive with an agent or management company and also book your own listings.

Regardless of the strategy, you have to prepare your home to be rented. It is important to take high quality, preferably professional, pictures. The decision to book is usually made entirely online and based on the photos. You also have to make sure that the property is up-to-date and has the amenities today's travelers expect, such as high-speed Internet. You should make sure that everything works, nothing is broken and that the property in its entirety is very presentable. You will also want to provide instructions for your renters. There are certain things that you will want your guests to know about upon entering, such as how to use certain electronic components, where to place trash, whether or not to recycle, where extra linens and towels are located and what the rules of the neighborhood are.

Of course, before you decide on buying a property that will be used as a seasonal rental, you have to run the numbers to make sure that renting makes sense in your financial plan. What, for example, are the tax consequences? You should talk with your accountant before investing in a second home or incurring any rental income, as you will need to understand the tax consequences and how to plan for them. Some of what you learn may surprise you.

Adam Ochoa, a CPA from The Practice, says, "If you plan on making some extra cash by renting your vacation home, you'll need to familiarize yourself with a few tax rules. One is that not all vacation rental income must be reported. Generally, income received from the rental of your vacation home must be reported on your federal income tax return; however, there's one provision that is not complicated:

Homeowners who rent out their property for 14 or fewer days a year can pocket the rental income tax-free. This is known as the 'Master's exemption' because it is used by homeowners near Augusta National Golf Club in Georgia who rent out their homes during the Master's Tournament (for as much as $20,000!). It is also used by homeowners who rent out their homes for movie productions, or those whose residences are located near Super Bowl sites or national political conventions."

What kinds of communities work well for seasonal rentals? Rancho La Quinta

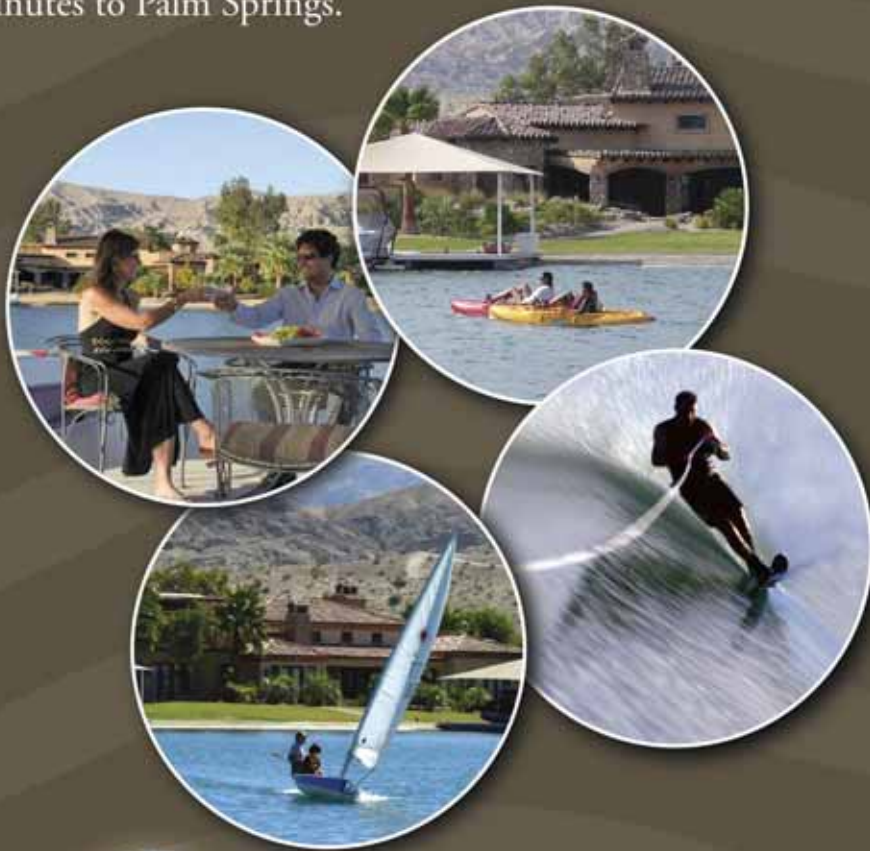

Country Club is one example. A property recently for sale there shows what a successful seasonal rental can be. This home offers superb location with southwest mountain views. A gated courtyard flows to a dramatic rotunda entry with a stunning chandelier and soaring 14-foot ceilings. Features include Travertine flooring, upgraded window treatments, plantation shutters and a surround-sound system with seven plasma TV's! In addition to the three bedrooms and 3.5 baths in the main house, there is also a two-room casita that can be used as a

Positioning your home as a seasonal rental could give you the extra income you need to make that second-home purchase a reality. Another bonus: Getting your home ready for a seasonal rental could be the motivation you need to spruce it up, update it and turn it into a show place. In fact, you might do such a good job that you fourth bedroom. The home's gourmet kitchen and expansive Great Room offer everything necessary for spectacular entertaining, and among the highlights of the sumptuous master suite are French doors opening onto the resort-style yard with covered patio, built in barbecue, sparkling saline pool and a raised spa with boulders and lush foliage.

The community itself is another asset. Rancho La Quinta is just minutes away from the site of the famous Humana Challenge and that of the Coachella and Stage Coach Concert Series. It's also minutes from the polo fields and the venue of the HITTs horse show. Rancho La Quinta Country Club, to which about half of the homeowners belong, features 36 holes of golf on two private courses: A Robert Trent Jones traditional course and the more modern Jerry Pate layout. In addition, there are community pools and spas throughout, a well-equipped fitness center, tennis facilities, locker rooms and dining. The home's proximity to all of this means that it draws top dollar for seasonal renters.

Vacation rental specialists Chris and Shari Hubbard with Windermere Real Estate provide some numbers. "This home was purchased for $1,250,000 and rents out for approximately $10,000 per month, generating about $50,000 per year income for the owners. [Almost anyone] in the desert who owns a second home could be making money on their home when they are not using it." The Hubbards point out that rentals range from condos to single family homes, and that rental prices range from $200-$2,000 per night and $2,000-$15,000 per month. They advise owners to work with a professional at least for the first year of rental, "as one mistake could end up costing you money."

Desert Golf Magazine Dining Guide

The Best of the Coachella Valley

Autumn brings with it many weeks of idyllic conditions as well as the return of old friends and the arrival of new faces. It also brings healthy appetites ready to be delighted and sated at the array of restaurants that make up the Coachella Valley's burgeoning dining scene. There are many enticing establishments to choose from, from old favorites to a few new eateries on the block. To help you decide where to dine next, we've compiled a list of our favorites (and yes, you'll note a decidedly Euro flavor). Bon appetit!

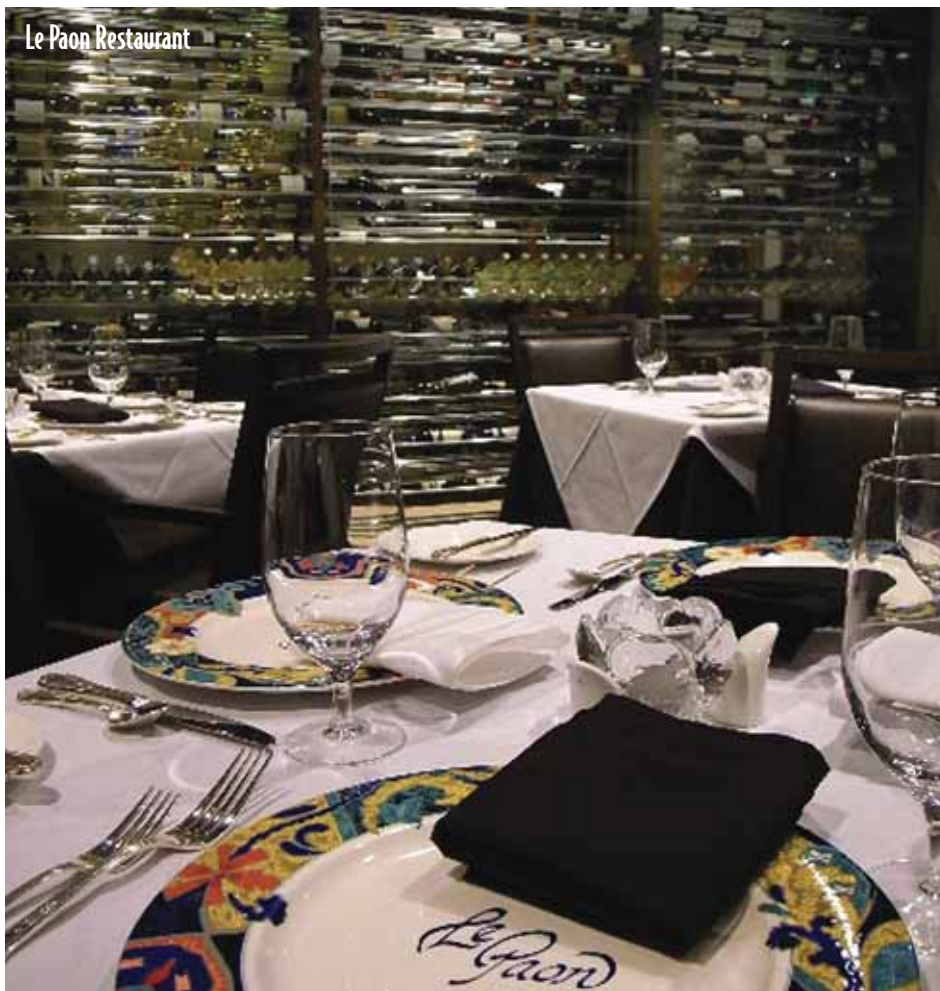

Start your culinary tour in Palm Desert, where brothers Eddie and Antoine Babai welcome you to the intimate environs of Le Paon Restaurant (73-399 El Paseo) where contemporary French cuisine is front and center. "It's comfortable and elegant and from our second floor the view is magnificent," says Antoine, Le Paon's general manager and maitre d'.

Le Paon is the perfect choice for a romantic or special-occasion dinner, and Eddie, a classically trained chef, presents one of the most time-tested and authentic French menus in the desert. "We have clients who have been with us for 30 years," he says. "The clients we had on Highway 74 all came back when we opened on El Paseo three years ago. It doesn't matter old or young, rich or poor; everybody supported us and came back. We have customers who were kids with their parents when they started dining with us and now they're adults and still coming."

In terms of awesome value, don't miss the "Happy Night" bar menu, or go for a table in the dining room beneath the glimmer of the chandelier for a full-on experience. You might start with the Champignons farcies au crabe (crab stuffed mushrooms), the aptly lauded house-made Pâté Maison or the Escargots de Bourgogne. As for entrees, the Grenouilles à la Provençale (frog legs); Filet de Chevreuil, Sauce Poivrade à la Framboise (venison tenderloin); and daily fish specials count among customer favorites.

"One of our best-selling items is the Dover Sole," Eddie notes. "The price is right and the presentation is right; it's cooked by the order and deboned at the table. And the steak we serve here, you won't find it at other steakhouses. The Tournedos Neptune is our medallion of beef covered in Alaskan king crabmeat and bearnaise sauce."

The chef proudly points out that the restaurant's famous soufflé, which accounts for 90 percent of the desserts sold, is his own recipe. He also makes all of the fresh pastries, and even the ice cream is made in-house, all of which means saving room for dessert is de rigueur! Of course, any dish you choose is all the better when accompanied by the nightly piano music and a wine from La Paon's list of more than 200 French and select California varietals.

When In Palm Springs, opt for a fresh experience at the always interesting Mister Parker's at the Parker Palm Springs (4200 E. Palm Canyon Drive), where new kitchen talent is updating the California-French bistro-style menu. "We have a new executive chef in Herve Glin and a new executive sous chef in Sang Lee, and they are presenting a new fall menu," says Forrest Williams, the restaurant's manager. "Simple lines are what they're going for, with a great product. Basically, the dishes won't be smothered in sauces." Instead, Forrest says, the new menu will feature raw, fresh ingredients and wonderfully 'clean' flavors. There will also be a fresh cocktail list and an enlivened wine selection to pair nicely with the reimaged menu.

What won't change is that the venue itself remains one of the Valley's most alluring. "It's a very unique space with a sexy vibe," Williams says. "It's a place where couples will start mingling with other couples, sitting side-by-side. It's just a real comfortable environment with low lighting, candlelit tables and a lot of great music from the '70s."

The Jamaica Invitational Pro-Am

It's the largest destination pro-am tournament in the Caribbean—and well worth the trip

The Jamaica Invitational Pro-Am, aka Annie's Revenge, has a new presenting sponsor this year: Appleton Estate Jamaica Rum. The tournament, now in its 8th year, will be played Nov. 20–24 on two of Jamaica's best championship golf courses, Cinnamon Hill and White Witch. Along with the new sponsor, there are also some new features that will make the event even more exciting.

Estate Jamaica Rum. "The heritage, flavor and soul of our Appleton Estate Rum is synonymous with Jamaica, and the event's mission to expand awareness for golf and tourism parallels Appleton's desire to expose more high-end North American consumers to its brand."

With the sponsorship support of Appleton, an exciting feature has been added this year: the Appleton Estate Jamaica Rum Shootout, a new "day after"

other pro-am teams electing to extend their stay in Jamaica.

The Jamaica Tourist Board is pleased to welcome the partnership support of Appleton. "Appleton's commitment to Annie's Revenge will surely reinforce and extend the power of the Jamaica brand well beyond our shores," says Donnie Dawson, deputy executive director of tourism for the Jamaica Tourist Board. "North America is key, in particular the United States, our primary source market for tourism, so the opportunity to partner with Appleton and showcase the spectacular golf experience that Jamaica has to offer is a perfect fit."

Appleton joins Iberostar Hotels & Resorts, Jamaica Tours Limited and Chukka Caribbean Adventures as Jamaican hospitality brands that are official sponsors of the eight-year old tournament. Hotel packages are available at Iberostar Grand Hotel Rose Hall in Montego Bay, a AAA Four Diamond adults-only resort.

Golf clubs, individual players and companies interested in participating can learn more about the event by visiting the tournament website, jamaicaproam.com, or by contacting The Golf Connection LLC at 484.762.1185. Clubs interested in competing are encouraged to have their host professional enter online as soon as possible to reserve a spot in the field and start the entry process. Individuals who are not a member of a club or part of a team are also welcome to enter online and will be paired with a host professional by the

IBEROSTAR Hotel pool

Both tournament courses are considered among the finest in the Caribbean. White Witch, located on a 600-acre plantation, is a 6,859-yard layout across mountainous terrain and offering spectacular ocean views. Cinnamon Hill rolls across 400 acres of dense, tropical foliage, running 6,637 yards. The purse for the pros is $30,000, while amateurs compete for more than $10,000 in prizes.

As the tournament's presenting sponsor, Appleton will integrate its brand message into all marketing and promotion for the event, which draws participation from golf clubs and avid golfers across the United States and Canada.

"The Jamaica Pro-Am is the finest tournament in the Caribbean and a fantastic event for showcasing the beauty, spirit and taste of Jamaica to avid, upscale golfers from across North America who participate in the event," says Tanisa Samuel, brand manager for Appleton event. This one-day NET Stableford tournament will provide Appleton the opportunity to entertain VIP customers in a unique and exciting way. Appleton's VIP guests will be paired with a PGA club professional and will compete against tournament office. Teams consist of three amateurs and a host golf professional. All amateur players are required to have a verifiable handicap.

Mercedes

Concept S-Class Coupe

Love it or hate it, say goodbye to the Mercedes CL—it's out with the old, in with the S-Class Coupe.

Revealed as a concept car at the Frankfurt Auto Show in September, the S-Class Coupe was met with rave reviews. “The new S-Class Saloon was received enthusiastically in the market and perfectly lives up to its role as a representative of the power of innovation of Mercedes-Benz,” says Dr. Joachim Schmidt, member of the management board of Mercedes-Benz Cars, Sales & Marketing.

The concept coupe is powered by a twin-turbo V-8. Pumping out 449 horsepower and 516 pounds-feet of torque, it tops its base model C-Class predecessor handily. With a power plant like this, numbers on the track will easily be in the low 4 seconds in the 0-60 category.

Gorden Wagener, vice president design at Daimler AG, adds: “The Concept S Class Coupe combines tradition and emotion, and it is a symbol for the embodiment of our design style of sensual clarity. The perfected design with self-assured style and the highly exclusive appointments makes the coupe a true design icon and an expression of modern luxury.”

Look at the lines of the S-Class Coupe and you’ll see distinct nods to the former C-Class series; however, there’s a decided aggressiveness that can’t be overlooked. The headlamps squint with a certain fierceness. The LED lamps create an “eyebrow” over the main bulb. It’s a dynamic look that says, “Take the wheel and control this beast.”

The bodylines create the effect of sharpening the already piercing persona, and it’s the long, arching line that runs horizontally from the front fender to behind the door that is the centerpiece. It’s the awe effect, the showstopper. Uniquely Mercedes, the S-Class Coupe will undoubtedly compete as the flagship vehicle in the stable of luxury models.

The lack of B pillars, the typical frame that outlines the doors of most cars, is also quintessential Mercedes coupe. Designers brought out the best of tradition as they crafted for a new era. For example, chrome wraps the window areas, giving another dimension to a component that does not often receive much thought.

And if the CL of 2013 is any indicator, the large hood is not just for show. A 12-cylinder model won't be far behind. The AMG 6.0L bi-turbo V-12 is a 621-horsepower super car—anything less for the S-Class would be a total failure in rollout for the brand. That said, expect to pay dearly for the extra torque as anything AMG is going to start in the low $200s and go up from there.

When you drive one of these beauties home, however, you'll practically be able to drive it with your eyes closed. The coupe is equipped with Intelligent Drive technology. Two "camera eyes" create a dual view of the road surface up to about 150 feet in front of the vehicle. These cameras detect the position and movement of objects with what Mercedes calls "6D Vision." Then things get very high-tech: Data from an onboard radar and the cameras account for traffic, pedestrians, animals and meteors from outer space that may jump in the road in front of you.

The suspension makes use of the cameras as well, detecting surface undulations in advance. If the scan detects a pothole, a feature called Magic Body Control adjusts the suspension in advance to make your ride just the way you want it—smooth.

Also in the high-tech realm is the vehicle's MoodGrid software from Gracenote. As a driver of the S-Class Coupe, you can listen to nearly any song you want. From Beethoven to the Bee Gees, you'll find it on Gracenote because more than 18 million tracks are at your fingertips. The entire system is programmable, and it's intelligent enough to know that you like the Moody Blues on Monday and it should stay out of your way.

The interior is nothing if not space age. The dash slopes and swooshes; the chairs arch as if you are as likely to land on the moon as you are to end up at work. The headliner is hand woven from silk while the control center has a layer of precious metal baked into it that creates a highly scratch-resistant, luminous surface.

No feature was overlooked in the S-Class Coupe. This will be the most exclusive Mercedes on the market in 2014, and discerning buyers will want to contact their dealers now to get on the list for a test drive.

The Shirtmaker Is Back!

This season on the golf course, it's all about the dress

Designer Catherine Wingate

It's a fact that history dictates fashion. Designers scour the styles of old in order to create today's trendsetting clothing, including women's golf apparel. For ladies in the 1800s, the game of golf was all about fashion and finding a potential suitor at an elite country club. With golf itself secondary to suitors, female golfers wore long-sleeved, tightly fitted blouses paired with long skirts that reached just inches about the ground. Unfortunately for designers, women discovered that they actually enjoyed the game, making this fashion trend undesirable.

Early designers faced a challenge: How could they create clothing that was comfortable for play and yet fashionable according to the dictates of the time? There was a long string of hits and misses as they wrestled with that very question.

The Lizzie Driver Santorini dress

But in the mid 1920s, women's golf fashion had a hole-in-one with the "Shirtmaker," a one-piece dress that was perfect for golf and other active sports. New York City's Best & Co. sold this functional frock for about $2.55. The Shirtmaker was so popular that it was widely copied, easily becoming the leading golf-dress style for the next 30 years.

Fast forward to the 2013 PGA Golf Expo in Las Vegas, Nev. In addition to gorgeous new colors and prints on display, the golf dress was once again front and center—with decidedly contemporary appeal. Today's version is the ultimate active wear, allowing busy women to transition easily between the many activities that fill their lives. Some designs are so versatile that all it takes is a change of shoes and a quick touch of lipstick to make a night out on the town in that flirty little golf dress completely doable.

At Expo, designers came up with a wide variety of dresses to show. Some, for example, had attached shorts, while others were shown with complementing tights. Whatever your particular style, you'll likely be able to find the dress that best meets your needs and fashion sense. And though some of these new designs will not hit stores until December or January, you don't have to wait to shop.

Designer Catherine Wingate currently offers two different dress styles. First, there's her zip-front version with built-in shorts and two pockets. Made with moisture-wicking fabric in white or navy, this dress screams sports. It's priced from $195. Wingate's second design is double-breasted with custom buttons. Available in black or white, it perfectly melds comfort and styling for a classic look that works as well for dinner or cruising as for a round of golf. $260. catherinewingate-apparel.com

The Lizzie Driver Santorini dress has a light and airy look that's perfect for spring and summer. This striped, sleeveless piece has a breezy, collared, two-button V-neck with a pale aqua contrast collar and contrast lime drawstring waist. The fabric is 92 percent Rayon and 8 percent Spandex; under shorts are not included. Priced from $200. lizziedriver.com

What woman's closet is complete without the little black dress? GolfHER has its own version of the LBD, one that's functional on and off the golf course. Boasting pops of color in the collar, sleeves and trim, this little black number comes with a detached under "skort" and a practical pocket for storing golf or tennis essentials. It's 90 percent nylon and 10 percent spandex and is priced at about $95. golffhergirl.com

While many of the styles this year have a sporty look enhanced by hidden panels that provide comfort and stretch, Roaming Dhabi Designs had a different idea. Its slim, fitted dress strays from the traditional sporty design in favor of Mandarin-inspired styling that includes the simple elegance of a banded collar. Offered in sleeveless and long-sleeved versions, this lovely dress provides seamless transition from the golf course to a fun evening out. Two welted back pockets are ideal for tees, golf balls or small personal items, and any woman can find her perfect look among the five available colors: royal lilac, daffodil, emerald green, raspberry rose and black. Once again, tights or shorts are optional. Priced from $98. roamingdhabidesigns.com

Today's female golfers have an unparalleled array of fabrics, styles and colors to choose from. But if you want to play golf, embrace your womanhood and be utterly fashionable all at the same time, wear a dress!

Flash or Panache?

We'll let you decide

Before we know it, the red-carpet galas, awards ceremonies and country club extravaganzas will be upon us—and we will be ready. The jewelry experts and designers at El Paseo Jewelers and the Roberto Coin Boutique on El Paseo in Palm Desert, Calif., are in the throes of creating new collections, displays and excitement for the upcoming season. Stay tuned for more on that in an upcoming issue.

In the meantime, if you're looking for something both fun and functional, we have a suggestion. One of the busiest booths at this year's PGA Expo in Las Vegas was that of Navika USA, a company that's all about sparkling, wearable and functional accoutrements on and off the golf course.

Family owned and operated, Navika was established in 1984 by Nita Mehta, who serves as CEO. She is helped by her husband and company president Vinnie Mehta, and today they continue to grow the business without deviating from their original mission of providing quality products at reasonable prices combined with outstanding customer service.

That is not just a family commitment to excellence; it's also a solid business strategy that has proved remarkably successful. Navika is sold in many of the finest resorts, country clubs, hotels and gift shops in the world, and it is a licensed manufacturer for the LPGA, PGA of America, PGA Jr. Ryder Cup, USGA and LoudMouth Golf International.

So what does Navika have that adds style to any look? Just peruse the collection. Take the Chameleon Ball Marker Necklace, for example. Featuring micro pave crystals or Swarovski crystals, the distinctive ball marker rests in a David Yurman-style stainless steel pendant encircled with Swarovski crystals. Priced from $44.95, it offers a seamless, beautiful look at an excellent price point.

If wearing a necklace on the golf course isn't your thing, there's the Leather Ball Marker Bracelet, perfect for active golfers yet stylish enough to wear out on the town. The bracelet features the same distinctive ball marker as the necklace, set in a gold- or silver-plated holder on either a fashionable red or white genuine leather strap. The crystals will dance with every swing. Priced from $48.95.

Who said stroke-counters are passé? Navika has managed to make a simple stroke-counter look like a Fashion Week accessory via the use of brilliant crystal beads. The gold- or silver-plated beads glide easily on a leather felt strap that can be clipped to your golf bag or belt loop or worn as a bracelet. Strap colors include gold, pink, green and purple. This is a stylishly fun way too make light of forgetting the number of strokes per hole that we truly do want to forget about! Priced from $19.95.

Kicks Candy—even the name sounds fun. Here Navika has made it a breeze to locate your ball marker while you're bending over to pick up or mark your ball. A simple clip attaches to your lace-up golf shoes and holds a dazzling ball marker that's always easy to see and find. Priced from $12.95.

Clearly Navika is fashion forward and geared for stylish fun. Its designers have found multiple ways to make functional ball markers an accessory must-have, incorporating them into necklaces, bracelets, shoe ornaments, hat clips, tac pins and earrings. These pieces are the perfect gift for your sweetie or a collectable to be swapped among girlfriends. Thanks, Navika, for keeping golf gear whimsical, fashionable and oh-so dazzling.
