Publisher's Notes

By Timothy J. Pade • pade@desertgolfer.com

We are proud once again to feature President Clinton on our cover, and to help promote and support the 2013 Humana Challenge presented in partnership with the William J. Clinton Foundation. This annual event, which greatly benefits our communities through charitable donations, is one of the largest economic contributors to the Coachella Valley. This year, Humana tournament director Larry Thiel had to step down due to a family illness. We wish his family well and thank him for the work he has done over many years for the tournament and the game of golf. We are also pleased to welcome Bob Marra, the tournament's new executive director and CEO. Our coverage of the Humana Challenge starts on pg. 12.

In this issue, we also feature the always-popular Waste Management Phoenix Open, which draws one of the largest galleries of any tournament and features what has become known as THE golf party. The WM Phoenix Open is rich in history, and this year's event should be exciting as Kyle Stanley attempts to defend his championship. See our coverage starting on pg. 18.

We are excited to provide you with some new features and topics in this issue as well. Among them is our look at the benefits of solar power in desert communities, and our findings may surprise you. Solar energy is used in a wide variety of ways and locations today, and both homeowners and communities are finding that they can save hundreds or even thousands of dollars on energy costs. Toscana Country Club, for example, now includes solar systems in its new construction properties. There are even solar panels available today that can provide extra life for your golf cart! Please see our article on Planet Solar, one of the Valley's foremost solar companies, starting on pg. 44.

Also in this issue, Clive Clark visits The Hideaway and shares his insights about the design elements that help make it one of the desert's top clubs. Clark is in a unique position to talk about these golf courses; after all, he's one of the top course architects in the world and he designed one of The Hideaway's two layouts. He also designed one of the best public golf courses in the nation for the city of Indian Wells, so look for our feature on Indian Wells Resort in our Feb/March issue.

The Coachella Valley has some of the best dining in the world, and once again we've compiled a guide to the latest and greatest restaurants in our area. Local Judd Spicer profiles many new eateries as well as some old favorites. The much-anticipated Mastro's opened to great fanfare in November, one of the premier steakhouses around, as we noted in our previous issue. And there are many more tempting options for you to try, so check out our latest recommendations starting on pg. 48.

As we look forward to the holidays this season, we are truly thankful to those of you who continue to support Desert Golf Magazine. In these economic times, we are so proud to continue our rich tradition of publishing one of the nation's premier golf magazines. Without the ongoing support of our advertisers and subscribers, we would not be able to continue. The staff and I sincerely thank each of you for your generosity and confidence in our efforts.

Happiest of holidays to you, and we hope you enjoy this issue as much as we enjoyed putting it together!

Warmest Regards,
Timothy J. Pade

Humana

Continues to Challenge

The 2013 tournament ups the ante—again

President Bill Clinton and Greg Norman

After an undeniably successful 2012 Humana Challenge, and a few months before the January 17-20, 2013 event, the wheels of change went into motion. “I understand and I know that we have to build on the strength of the field,” says Bob Marra, new executive director and CEO of the PGA tournament.

Marra, a local businessman and Humana Challenge board member, replaces Larry Thiel, who served as the event’s tournament chairman since 2010. “I’m honored to have the opportunity to take on this incredible responsibility in this community,” says Marra.

Like many changes, this one comes with opportunity. A new direction and ideas for growing the tournament include making golf was used to bring health-and-fitness information and options to golf fans of all ages. Spectators at the 2012 event had access to healthy concession items, pedometers for measuring their steps and determining calories burned, and on-course wellness activities. There was even a family fitness area. The event attracted new fans of professional golf and attendance went up.

A golfer himself, Mike McCallister, Humana’s chairman and CEO, was delighted to see how fans embraced the health-and-wellness concept at the tournament. “The concept of health, fitness and wellbeing is going to have to be at the core of changing what’s happening in this country from a healthcare-cost perspective and from a personal health perspective,” says McCallister. “[PGA Tour Commissioner] Tim Finchem and I have the concept of “participatory wellness” a component of the event, which is a natural fit for Humana as title sponsor. Partnering in this endeavor with Humana is the William J. Clinton Foundation, the PGA Tour and the Desert Classic Charities. Combined, this stronghold of entities has embarked on an eight-year groundbreaking journey that will not only retain the tournament’s diehard golfers and fans, but should engage the non-golfing public as well, giving them a important cause to support in conjunction with the excitement of celebrities and Tour professionals.

This union between professional golf and the health-and-wellness industry has brought a new dynamic to the game. The first step, of course, was changing the name of the much beloved Bob Hope Classic to the Humana Challenge in 2012. With that name change, the stage was set for an entirely new PGA tournament experience. For the first time, the arena of professional talked over the years about how golf is unique, in that the fans actually get up and walk and follow the players. The Humana Challenge gives us a wonderful opportunity to take a positive message and promote the idea of behavior modification for everyone as a key component to the long-term health of this nation.”

There is no question that President Clinton’s participation also brings a new energy to the event. Throughout the tournament week an abundance of meetings and lectures take place involving the Clinton Global Initiative America and the Clinton Global Foundation. Serving as host in 2012, President Clinton worked hard to recruit new PGA Tour players to the event, and even played in one pro-am round.

“CGI members have improved the lives of more than 300 million people around the world,” President Clinton says.” We form partnerships to take action on issues that matter most, which is why I am pleased that the Clinton Foundation, the PGA Tour and Humana are working together to promote healthy lifestyles. The tournament builds on my personal love for golf, preserving the Bob Hope Classic legacy, and the Clinton Foundation's commitment to healthy choices."

In 2013, the Humana Challenge will continue to honor and celebrate the legacy of Bob Hope, as well as maintain the new four-round format and three-course rotation. New is the expanded field of 156 PGA Tour professionals and 156 amateurs, including celebrities.

Also new is the focus on areas of Marra's expertise—marketing and public relations. "My greatest strengths lie in the far-reaching and long-established relations in the community and business community, and with those in the nonprofit organization world who need to be activated to a much greater level to understand the importance of this event and their involvement in it," Marra says.

Working with and helping local charities remains a top priority for the Humana Challenge. During the past 53 years, this tournament has generated more than $52 million for charities in the Coachella Valley, primarily the Eisenhower Medical Center. Each year, the goal is to raise more funds than the previous year, and now there's the equally important goal of providing on-the-spot healthy lifestyle programs and options during the event.

Tickets for the 2013 Humana Challenge are priced starting as low as $30. They can be purchased on the tournament's newly redesigned website, humanachallenge.com, or ordered via phone by calling 888.672.4673.

Leading up to the tournament, Humana Challenge will host online content as well as contests for those who become a Humana Challenge fan on Facebook at

Challenge

A tournament concept so new,
it's changing the game.

When we reimagined the Humana Challenge, we planned to award the champion a trophy. We didn't dream we'd receive one ourselves. Being named Sports Event of the Year affirmed we were on to something. Something good. From our new format to our landmark healthy living initiative, we've set a new standard. Join us as we move into full swing for the 2013 tournament. President Bill Clinton and an all-star lineup of celebrities and pros will again be on hand for some great PGA TOUR golf and to promote vibrant well-being.

Take part in the pure fun and lively pursuits throughout Bob Hope Square. This high-energy venue offers everything from a family fit area with activities like golf hitting nets and putting greens to an array of mouth-watering options from local eateries. Add to that a host of exhibitors, live music and more.

Experience the year's most highly awarded sports event. Because when you're talking trophies, this victory means everyone wins.

The Waste Management

Phoenix Open

By Matt McKay

A Proud Tradition of Nontraditional Golf. The Waste Management
Phoenix Open has a good thing going

Kyle Stanley

Let's face it. Golf in Scottsdale isn't traditional. It isn't old school. It isn't buttoned-down oxford shirts with bow ties. It's straw fedoras and button-up shirts made to be worn untucked. It's not patent-leather spikes but spikeless sandals.

That's why the Waste Management Phoenix Open (WMPO) is the perfect reflection of the area's golf culture. It's out there but in there. It's got polish and it's got its rowdy, frayed edges. It's wide open and played under vast skies. It's as free and unfettered as the Wild West itself—or at least as free and unfettered as a PGA Tour event can or dares to be.

"We're a young city. We're only 61 years old, and the state is still comparatively young, too," says Laura McMurchie, vice president of communications for the Scottsdale Convention and Visitors Bureau. "A lot of people move here with the spirit of the west and embrace that "Wild West" mentality. We're still shaping who we are as a city and people feel like they can be whatever they want to be."

There is certainly no other event on the PGA Tour like the WMPO, and you'd be hard pressed to find disagreement on that issue. One of its unique characteristics is its position on the calendar, with the final round typically falling on Super Bowl Sunday. This year's event is no different; the tournament is scheduled for Jan.28-Feb. 3, and the Super Bowl is set for Feb. 3 in New Orleans.

Perhaps no other PGA tournament is celebrated as much for what happens off the course as for what happens on it. The famous Bird's Nest, this year sponsored by Coors Light, has been host to millions of golf revelers over the last 20-plus years, and the tournament's concerts and related activities are well known throughout the golf world.

2012 Waste Management champion Kyle Stanley

Phil Mickelson

The WMPO has also developed into what amounts to the social event of the season in Scottsdale. Those who want to see or be seen, or get out and feel a part of it all in this town, know there is no better way to go about it than to attend the WMPO.

“Even if you’re not a golfer, it’s THE event to go to here,” says McMurchie. “If you’re in Calgary, everyone goes to the Stampede. It doesn’t matter if you know roping or wrangling, you just have to go.

“On the course, there’s a lot to see. Everyone wants to know who has the best ticket or vantage point or corporate tent...it’s very social and, of course, the players really get into it. It’s evolved into something everyone enjoys. It’s a special culture we have.”

There’s no better embodiment of the tournament than the famous par-3 No. 16, the only true “stadium” hole in the game, in that it is completely surrounded by grandstands. In part because of its originality and one-of-a-kind history, players not only tolerate the rambunctious atmosphere, they often encourage crowd participation, occasionally donning football jerseys or flinging promotional items into the throngs above as they make their way toward the green.

The hole has become such a successful and notable experiment that several other Tour events nationwide have considered, or are actively employing, similar techniques on their par-3s. While that may be flattering, McMurchie believes that the concept at core is consummately Scottsdale. The 16th at the TPC Scottsdale is what it is because golf in Scottsdale is what it is.

“Over the years, seeing what players have had to say, they love [No. 16],” McMurchie says. “They wouldn’t want every tournament to be like that, but this one is like a breath of fresh air. Everyone embraces what it is. There’s a synergy between the marshals and fans where they all know it’s a little out of the ordinary, but they know they need to keep it within certain limits.

“We realize if a few people are looking at that model for their tournaments, then they feel like what we’re doing is a success. There may be room for a few more [events] with a lighthearted feel, and obviously players can pick and choose where they want to play. So if that type of situation isn’t for them, they have other options. But it’s our tradition, we’re proud of it and we think it reflects who we are as a golf community.”

The Ultimate Hideaway

A master architect provides an insider's view of The Hideaway Club golf courses

By Clive Clark

Nestling peacefully near the base of the majestic Santa Rosa Mountains is the ultimate hideaway. Aptly named, The Hideaway Club is a place in which to rejuvenate, unwind from personal and business stress, and be pampered in unabashed luxury. This year The Hideaway celebrates its 10th anniversary.

The Hideaway is a Discovery Land Company project. Discovery Land specializes in the development of exceptional, high-end private club communities, and has developed over a dozen in locations from Kukio in Hawaii to Baker's Bay in the Bahamas.

Michael Meldman, CEO and founder of Discovery Land, says, "We created The Hideaway to fit the traditions of La Quinta, a place where our members and their families can escape and enjoy the luxuries and amenities of a club in a great location."

The Hideaway is entered via a pair of massive Castilla-style wooden gates, which open onto a private courtyard containing a charming old-Hacienda-style security house. The Hideaway has all the facilities of an elite country club, including an Olympic-size swimming pool,

Michael Meldman

tennis courts, a spa and a fitness center, and a level of service that is phenomenal.

At the heart of the community is the 45,000-square-foot Spanish-revival-style clubhouse, the setting for numerous well-attended functions. The club is extremely active, offering a roster of events from twilight golf and fireside chats with touring professionals to master cooking classes with the club's executive chef—and much more. The clubhouse also offers views of two golf courses: "The Pete," designed by legendary architect Pete Dye, and "The Clive," designed by the author of this article, Clive Clark. The beauty of the two courses is that they perfectly complement one another.

“The Pete”

This course is true to the Dye philosophy, well designed with challenge and risk-and-reward elements. Although it’s not the easiest golf course in the world, aggressive play can reap great dividends. That said, if you’re attacking the course and your shot making is less than anticipated, it’s easy to spin off the track.

The fairways are generally wide and provide an attractive target. The trouble typically begins with the second shots and approaches. There are several holes where water creeps devilishly close to the green, making the margin between success and failure extremely slim. There is, however, a good balance between ease and difficulty. For example, take the short par-4 15th hole. For a scratch player, it’s almost drivable, and it should offer a comfortable par for the mid-handicap or even higher-handicap golfer. Two holes later, at the 17th, the ‘tips’ offer players a par 3 of 235 yards with an expansive stretch of lake in front and to the left edge of the green, with only a small ‘bale-out’ area on the right. Even off the 195-yard members’ tee, it has an intimidating effect.

The Clive Hole No. 1

“The Clive”

When I was asked to design a course at The Hideaway, it was a very exciting prospect. At that time, a lot of my work was done in the UK and on the European Continent. Not only was this to be my first design in the desert, I lived a mere five minutes from the site, and I knew that designing a course surrounded by custom home lots in the Californian Desert would be an entirely new challenge for me.

My plan—and I believe it succeeded—was to design a golf course that would inspire club members to play well, give them a moderate degree of challenge but ensure that they would have fun. Although 15 of the holes contain water, I didn’t want The Clive to be either penal or intimidating. It was designed very much as a course for members to play and enjoy, not as a course to be a test for major professional championships. That doesn’t mean professional golfers will not enjoy playing the golf course, but the focus was on members.

Most of the greens are open-fronted and allow players to run the ball onto the green. Many of the greens have a tendency to collect the golf ball rather than reject it, and most of the fairways are some 50 yards wide, a generous target.

Various strategies were employed within the design. For instance, the 1st and 10th holes have particularly wide fairways—nothing like getting a round off to a good start! Hole #12 employs what I call “the St. Andrews theory.” Those of you who have played The Old Course at St. Andrews know that the trouble from the tee is on the right. To the left is half of Fife. However, playing toward the trouble on the right provides a much better angle for the approach to the green. By contrast, the abundance of ground on the left may be safe, but it usually leaves a shot that is forced to go over trouble and is therefore more difficult. On the 12th at The Hideaway, the right side of the fairway is a perfect line, but you risk going into a couple of nasty bunkers. To the left is half of California where you are safe, but vision to the green is obscured by substantial mounds and the blind shot creates a greater degree of difficulty.

The 13th hole is an unusual par 5 in that the second shot can be played two entirely different ways. Off a good drive, the longer hitter may go for the green in two; it’s all carry over a lake and two mounds with a valley in between, which gives a great sighting line to the pin. The alternative is to go down a separate piece of fairway some 30 degrees left of the aforementioned line, which then leaves a shot of around 100 yards to the green. The 13th is a classic risk-and-reward par 5.

To increase the enjoyable factor, I avoided making the par 4s very long. Many championship courses today have par-4 holes of 500 yards or more, which for most club golfers is unreachable in two shots and therefore in practical terms adds another par 5 to the golf course. At The Hideaway, I kept the par 4s shortish to medium in length. The 18th is the longest par 4 on the course, measuring 452 yards from the tips, and also the most difficult. It makes for a challenging finish even off the members’ tee at 420 yards. The landing area for the drive is generous, but the second shot skirts a lake and then traverses up a gentle hill to a green protected by bunkers that stagger up the right-hand approach. In other words, the first bunker you see on the right approach is 30 yards short of the green. This creates ‘dead ground,’ the effect of which is that the pin seems closer than it really is. Skillful golfers who understand course management will quickly realize that they may have to add a club-and-a-half to allow for playing uphill and the effect of the ‘dead ground.’ Less skilled golfers will no doubt find themselves working on their bunker play!

One of the most outstanding holes on “The Clive” course is far from the most difficult. Off the members’ tee, which generally plays 130 to 140 yards (the ladies play it at just over 100 yards), the 7th hole is one for everyone to enjoy. This short par 3 has oodles of visual appeal and is laced with babbling brooks, split-level lakes, several waterfalls and masses of colorful shrubs and flowers, all set against the magnificent backdrop of the Santa Rosa Mountains. Although it is a forced carry over these lakes and waterfalls, it is a short carry and the target is large. It’s a hole where one might enjoy the scenery as much as the par that most players comfortably achieve.

Don Sutton, the famed pitcher, was one of the first members at The Hideaway. He once said, “My perfect day starts with a morning whirlpool in the locker room, a cup of coffee, playing with three of my best buddies, winning all of my bets and then enjoying a glass of Chardonnay on the patio while watching the sunset over the Santa Rosa Mountains. I’m enamored by Clive’s floral concept; it’s like playing golf in the middle of the Rose Parade!”

Happy Anniversary, JW

The JW Marriott Desert Springs Resort & Spa is celebrating its silver anniversary, and the best present of all is what it offers its guests

How better to celebrate a 25th anniversary than with a $25 million renovation? One of the Coachella Valley's premier resorts, the JW Marriott Desert Springs Resort & Spa is not getting older, it's getting better, and both new and returning guests will be celebrating, too.

The all-encompassing renovation includes updated guest rooms and suites, two new dining options, upgrades to the stellar Palm Course, and now the reopening of the acclaimed Valley Course following a $1.5 million refresh.

"We are excited to celebrate 25 exceptional years in service by providing guests with a rejuvenated resort experience and fresh dining options," says Ken Schwarz, the JW's general manager. "This revitalization reflects the resort's continuing effort to enhance the overall guest experience, paving the way for many more successful years to come."

The first new dining venue to open was Rockwood Grill & Blue Star Lounge. Rockwood Grill is an all-day dining venue with a menu featuring diverse American classics, a perfect melding of upscale and casual. Transformed from what was Lake View restaurant, Rockwood Grill has a completely revamped main dining room, a dramatic illuminated bar and a takeout counter for guests on the go. Added to the mix is Blue Star Lounge, the all-new outdoor terrace with fire pits and a la carte seating.

Both areas embrace the nationally popular farm-to-table trend, easy here thanks to the abundance of California farms and local producers. Among the enticing menu items are a Coachella Valley Date Milkshake as well as bacon wrapped dates. The fresh market salad is made with Suzie's organic farm greens, and there's a rib eye steak for the meat lover and gourmet hand-stretched pizzas for pizza lovers. In addition to locally inspired appetizers and entrees, bar and lounge patrons can enjoy handcrafted farm-to-glass cocktails, regional microbrews and, of course, a selection of California's finest wines.

The newest dining choice is Fisherman's Landing Bar & Grill, which debuted in July. There are three other Fisherman's Market & Grill locations throughout southern California, and like those popular sister establishments, Fisherman's Landing at JW Marriott Desert Springs offers a variety of signature seafood favorites.

As for guest rooms, the transformation, which was completed early in 2012, includes new beds and bedding set off by teakwood artisan headboards. All rooms also received new artwork, carpet, drapes and paint, and each one is now equipped with an iHome audio system. Returning guests will also note that guest corridors have been painted, updated and refreshed as well.

For golfers, the piece de resistance is the unveiling of the resort's Valley Course. Like the Palm Course, which was renovated and reopened last year, the Valley Course is a Ted Robinson design. And like the Palm guests," says John Faulk, the resort's director of golf. "We are confident that the updated courses, restored in the spirit of Robinson's father's original design, will continue to offer guests an unrivaled golf experience."

And true to that original design by the man who was known as the "King of

That focus on waterscapes extends throughout the resort, part of what makes this property so inviting. The lower lobby is set at the edge of the water, and gondolas are on hand to transport guests to restaurants or take them for a peaceful tour. The boat dock is also the setting for the popular wine-tasting events, which include a selection of super-premium wines accompanied by an array of artisan cheeses. The tastings are led by the resort's sommelier.

No mention of the JW Desert Springs is complete without a nod to the phenomenal spa, an oasis of serenity and calm offering a range of excellent services, including several created just for men, and an adult-only pool where tranquility reigns supreme. Also of note is the tennis facility, which features 15 hard-surface courts, three clay courts and two stadium grass courts.

Finally, if you are in the market for new golf clubs, the TaylorMade Performance Lab at the JW is the place to determine the best club for your game and swing. The Lab's experts provide analysis and custom club fitting based on your particular swing characteristics. Once available only to PGA Tour professionals, the two-hour custom fitting experience includes driver, fairway

Course, the Valley Course was renovated by Ted Robinson, Jr., who worked to bring back many of the details of his father's original design.

Among the most important of the changes are those in the green complexes, which have been updated to meet USGA specifications. Greens now feature tiff-eagle grass to create a Tour-quality putting surface. Additionally, all tees have been laser-leveled and re-grassed, creating a perfectly balanced tee box for improved ball striking. Naturally, new challenges also wait out on these courses, challenges designed to thrill players of all levels. Bunkers and surrounding areas, for example, have been reshaped to create "magnetic bunkers," a term meaning they're designed so that the ball will inevitably find them if a player's shot making is not up to par. New bunkers have been added to increase challenge, and many of the original fairway bunkers have now been moved closer to the center of the fairway to narrow the landing areas. The overall result is that these courses demand accuracy from tee to green, but they remain fun to play, too.

"We are excited to introduce the all-new Palm and Valley courses to our valued Waterscapes," the courses integrate more than 35 acres of streams, lagoons and waterfalls, all set against the backdrop of the Santa Rosa Mountains. No matter the score that ends up on the card at the end of the round, golfers are guaranteed play on a spectacularly beautiful course that celebrates the evocative landscapes of desert, mountains and water.

To experience the new courses firsthand, ask about the resort's golf vacation packages.

woods, hybrids, irons, wedges and putter, and it's designed for golfers of all ages and skill levels. Should you decide to buy custom-fitted clubs after the session, TaylorMade can expedite that for you at a price unavailable elsewhere.

Renovated. Reinvented. Ready for Play.

Golf at JW Marriott Desert Springs Resort & Spa has just upped its game. The resort's championship Palm and Valley courses have received a complete overhaul including new tees, bunkers and USGA-specification greens on the 18 holes of each course. Score spectacular scenery on the revamped Ted Robinson-designed links, filled with exotic birds, breathtaking mountain views, meandering waterways and pristine greens. To top it off, enjoy the royal treatment on your round with a state-of-the-art navigational system right from your cart, using your onboard computer to view graphic layouts of each hole and compute exact yardage to the pin.

Then for the fun when your game is done! This premier 5-star playground becomes your watering hole, your spa retreat and your ultimate dining destination. The luxury property's recent $25 million makeover showcases upgraded guest rooms and new waterfront restaurants like the chic Rockwood Grill and the seafood spectacular Fisherman's Landing.

There's truly no better 'stay' for a great golf getaway!

How to Use Goal Setting To Become a Better Golfer

It's not enough just to practice—you have to practice effectively

By Lynn Beasley, Psy.D. (C), CSCS

Individuals are not born experts in their area of interest. It takes many years and thousands of hours of deliberate practice for a person to become an expert in a given area, be it music, sports or any other category.

When an individual is first learning a new skill, the step-by-step instructions of how to perform that skill are kept in the working memory. Once a person has become proficient at the task, the information becomes procedural as opposed to declarative, meaning the performance becomes automatic.

Research suggests that high-level athletes have better recollection of their performance, as well as details about the environment. Novice athletes, on the other hand, have a better recollection of the step-by-step mechanical procedure they used to execute the skill. This speaks to the fact that the expert golfer is not using working memory; rather, he or she is performing the skill automatically and thus has the ability to pay attention to other stimuli and environmental cues without a decrease in performance of the primary task, and to adapt to different conditions when necessary—skills professional players must have.

The key to becoming an expert in golf, or any other desired domain, is deliberate practice. It has been documented that it takes approximately 10,000 hours of deliberate practice for anyone to become an expert in anything and move from using the working memory to the procedural memory. “Deliberate” is the key word here. Practicing without purpose will not develop the memory needed to encode the necessary motor programs to become an expert golfer.

One way to make practice deliberate is by goal setting, a terrific mental skill that can be used to improve your practice, increase motivation and focus and help you develop the desired motor programs to become an expert golfer, at whatever level of expertise is right for you.

The key is to set clear objectives and define the level of intensity necessary to achieve those objectives. When we fulfill a goal, we feel a sense of achievement; but if the goal isn't met, we may feel a sense of failure. That's why the process of goal setting is so important.

Here are some basic guidelines to follow for setting appropriate goals.

- Make goals specific and attainable. A vague goal (e.g., I want to get better) will not help you. Goals should be as specific as possible. Typically what golfers desire is to play better, lower their handicap, hit the ball farther, be a more consistent putter and improve other skills. But simply stating that you want to be better and then going to the practice range to hit a bucket of balls will not correlate to improved abilities. Instead, you have to set attainable goals that will result in improvement in these areas. A good practice goal, for example, might be to start every practice having to make five 10-foot putts in a row before hitting any balls on the range. Not only is this a concise goal, it's easy to measure improvement and success.

- Find the right level of challenge for you. Goals should not be so challenging that they are unattainable; however, if a goal is too easy it will not motivate you and your performance will suffer.

- The goal should be within your control. For example, winning is not always within your control regardless of your execution. An opponent's game and environmental variables are outside of your control. The only thing you can control is your own personal performance.

- The goal should reflect what you want to achieve, not someone else's goals.

- The goal should be measurable. Measuring progress will help keep you motivated to achieve your goals. For example, one of your goals might be increased focus on a specific swing-thought. To measure how well you are achieving that on the golf course, take a second score card with you and score yourself on your level of commitment. Use a scale of 1 (not committed at all; many other thoughts enter your mind) to 5 (completely committed) to score your chosen swing-thought for the day. Remember, you're not scoring the result of the shots. The more 4s and 5s you start to see on your scorecard, the better your actual golf scores will likely become.

- Every practice or training session should include small goals that build toward the greater goal. One example of this might be how you approach your warm-up before teeing off. You could commit to spending at least the last 10 minutes of your warm-up going through your pre-shot routine for each ball you hit on the practice range, changing your target or club with each shot. That smaller goal helps you achieve larger goals on the course.

Learning how to effectively use goal setting is an excellent way to improve your deliberate practice procedures, which will ultimately help you achieve your desired level of expert performance.

The Residence Club at PGA West

By Christine Loomis

A New Standard for Vacation Ownership
The Residence Club
at PGA WEST
raises the bar

PGA WEST, known as “the western home of golf in America,” may just be the perfect destination for those looking for a vacation home with superb onsite golf but without the upkeep and expense of a second home.

Scott and Linda Schley of Denver certainly found that to be the case. “We fell in love with the Palm Springs area years ago. While in the process of buying a stand-alone home, we discovered The Residence Club at PGA WEST. The economical benefits were off the charts. It has been a wonderful arrangement for us. We enjoy the convenience of no maintenance and the availability. We were able to spend 11 weeks here our first year.”

This phenomenal La Quinta, Calif., community is home to six outstanding golf courses: the Arnold Palmer Private Course, Jack Nicklaus Private Course, Tom Weiskopf Private Course, Nicklaus Tournament Course, TPC Stadium Course and the Greg Norman Course. The club lies at the foot of Coral Mountain, a striking geologic reminder that this valley was once submerged in an ancient ocean. Today, PGA WEST remains a distinctive enclave that brings all the history and grandeur of the game of golf and these remarkable surroundings to bear. Add impeccable service and the result is arguably as close to paradise on earth as we can get.

As owner Beth Reisig of Washington, DC, puts it, “Each visit is truly luxurious. We are really pampered here. The staff is welcoming and courteous and they make us feel like we’re at home.”

The community is spread across 2,000 acres, plenty of room for the golf courses, tennis and fitness facilities, three clubhouses, a health and racquet club and diverse social activities. It attracts residents and visitors from across the globe. Some purchase golf course homes on streets that evoke the greatest names among clubs and golf resorts in the world—Winged Foot, Shoal Creek, Southern Hills and Pinehurst among them—and these homes are stunning.

But they are not the only option. The Residence Club at PGA WEST provides its owners with luxury, deeded ownership, expansive floor plans and access to the wealth of amenities in the PGA WEST community. The key is that the cost reflects the amount of time you live in your vacation home.

And there’s a new offering well worth considering if you have ever thought about spending quality vacation time in a second home in the Palm Springs area.

Potential owners now have the option of either a 1/9 or 1/4 ownership, whichever works best for them. The new 1/4 share of a luxury 3,365-square-foot villa gives owners the ability to visit even more often (based on the club’s reservation policies). What makes the Residence Club at PGA WEST so enticing is that ownership comes with a fully furnished and professionally decorated home, concierge and bell service, a spectacularly appointed owner’s clubhouse and, of course, access to the world-class golf courses that have made this community so coveted. The best part of all may be that owners can leave thoughts of upkeep and maintenance back at their primary home.

“The club offers escape from the upkeep and maintenance concerns normally associated with vacation home ownership,” says Christine Kiener, project director and broker at the Residence Club at PGA WEST.

Owners agree. Dr. Deutsch of Los Angeles, says, “The Residence Club at PGA WEST turned out to be exactly what we were looking for. The great part is not having to deal with the upkeep and cleaning. We can take our vacation, then walk out the door knowing everything will be taken care of.”

For Mark Trumper of Seattle, the positive experience is multilevel. "This is our way of owning a vacation home without having to deal with the responsibilities; but I didn't realize until I visited what a sophisticated experience it would turn out to be."

In fact, ownership includes such amenities as concierge-aided tee times and dinner reservations as well as assistance at the club's business center and computers for owner use. Residence Club staff will pre-stock your home with groceries at your request before your arrival, and owners don't have to worry about lugging personal items back and forth; the club will store them. The bottom line is that The Residence Club at PGA WEST is committed to providing truly worry-free vacations for its owners.

The villas are ideal for both living and entertaining. Each one features dual master bedroom suites, a fully equipped gourmet kitchen, a Great Room opening to an elegant outdoor living space, a heated plunge pool and outdoor fire pit, and a casita suite with its own entrance. Housekeeping is included.

To sweeten the pot even further, there's the availability of the new Sport Golf Membership, which doubles the golf experience. In addition to the TPC Stadium, Greg Norman and Jack Nicklaus Tournament courses available to members, Sport Golf members also have access to the private courses by three of the greatest names in golf course design: Palmer, Nicklaus and Weiskopf.

There simply is no downside to this kind of ownership when it's in a resort destination known throughout the world and staffed by personnel who understand the importance of excellent and comprehensive service. And whether owners are on or off the golf course, the amenities and opportunities here are extensive, allowing them to fill their vacations with family time and socializing with both new and old friends.

"The staff ensures a fun, relaxing atmosphere and there is always something going on at the clubhouse, like Saturday wine tastings and theme parties," says Brad Campbell of Surrey, BC, Canada. "I believe The Residence Club is one of the world's best-kept secrets."

The Coachella Valley is a mecca for golf and golf course living, but it has many other enticing options, too. You can head to the Polo Fields to experience the sport of kings. You can enjoy Thermal Motor Sports, revving the engine of your favorite vintage car. Or you can wrap up your day at Shadow Lake Estates, where you can water ski until sunset.

Thermal Motorsports Track & Club

The Thermal Club is just down the road and adjacent to the Jackie Cochran airport. Under construction, the luxurious 350-acre club will have everything a driving enthusiast or fan could want. For the driver, there is the 4.5 miles of road-racing course that can be operated in 21 different configurations.

“Our goal is to create the best private motorsport venue in the world,” says Mike Finnell, the facility’s general manager “We have teamed up with Discovery Land Company to create something very unique and a big asset for the Coachella Valley.”

There is a 10-acre paddock for staging, along with a state-of-the-art karting track and three separate pit areas. Members will be allowed to build two-story day villas either on or off track. You can enjoy your private six- to 20-car garage with an entertainment suite above. Facilities include the Tower building (clubhouse), tuning and restoration shop, trackside garage and a fuel island. All the architecture is Spanish Revival—style with rich details not typically found in the motorsports world.

Empire Polo Club

Since its inception in 1987, Empire Polo Club has gained a reputation as a preeminent location for the sport, expected even to upstage the renowned polo facility in Palm Beach, Fla. Already home to the Coachella and Stagecoach concerts, this desert oasis in the east valley is surrounded by a variety of housing as well as every possible amenity, including country clubs and shopping. With over 200 acres of manicured grounds, Empire has become a popular event venue. Among the four function areas is a lushly landscaped lake.

The polo facilities include a regulation-size arena, three exercise tracks, seven polo fields, a grandstand and private boxes. There are superb stabling facilities with all the bells and whistles—tack rooms and turnouts, pipe stalls and box stalls. There’s also a polo school with private and group lessons for every level, along with public polo matches and a full competition season.

Off the field, there’s the Tack Room Tavern with its big booths, huge back bar, western décor, flat screens galore and excellent food; it’s open for lunch and dinner daily. Adding to the cool factor, the Date Shed nightclub is a cutting edge year-round music venue and bar that attracts many musicians.

Those looking for an amazing horse property in the desert should consider La Quinta Polo Estates, an upscale gated equestrian community in La Quinta, Calif. Recent properties for sale include a 4,967-square-foot home with five bedrooms and four baths that closed at $795,000. It offered a main house and separate casita home, a tennis court, a four-stall barn,

"I have been a licensed real estate agent in the desert for 23 years, and with my clients I have bought and sold many horse properties in the community," says Janine Stevens of Coldwell Banker La Quinta. "My clients love the fact that they can have their horses on property and still enjoy the desert lifestyle and the privacy of the community, all close to local golf courses, shopping and restaurants."

Shadow Lake Estates

For those who have always desired a lakefront retreat, welcome to the desert's only private residential water ski and activity lake, located just minutes from almost anywhere in the Valley. As you enter the gates to the best-kept secret in the desert, you will find the lake is perfect for full- and part-time residents, and the community offers easy access to Palm Springs' shopping and recreation yet is just far enough away to feel utterly calm and tranquil.

As of this writing there are 12 brand-new luxurious lakefront homes available for purchase, priced from $2,450,000 to $2,695,000. Floor plans feature 5,900 square feet of sensational living space, four or five bedrooms, an optional glass elevator, travertine floors, granite counters, stonework and a gourmet kitchen with Dacor appliances. The fabulous high ceilings of the Great Room and the central location of the kitchen create a grand space for wonderful meals and family gatherings. Each lakefront estate home also includes its own sandy beach, private dock and hydraulic boatlift—and the mountain views just may be the best in the valley. A multitude of flex choices allow owners to create a unique space for their needs.

"As we designed these homes, we have carefully selected every option and amenity to compliment the splendid lifestyle environment our homeowners desire," says builder John Quinn.

Close to all that the Coachella Valley area offers, Shadow Lake Estates is an amazing draw in its own right, a place where family and friends are guaranteed to come together and create memories that will last a lifetime.

Solar Energy

Sunnyside up

Yes, solar energy helps the environment, but money talks with significant savings

With monthly electricity bills approaching four-digit amounts in summer, more and more desert homeowners are embracing all that sunshine—and finding economic relief—with solar energy.

“Solar is the new Hummer in the driveway, the new buzzword, the hottest thing that’s environmentally friendly,” says PlanetSolar regional sales consultant Jill Weiss. “More importantly, people are saving money, so it makes sense.” Studies show that installing just one solar-panel system is the environmental equivalent of taking two cars off the road. Are solar customers out to save the planet? For most, that’s an added bonus. They’re primarily out to save money.

Solar energy launched in the 1980s and because it is a relatively new industry, information may be sketchy or misunderstood by consumers. Solar-panel opponents argue that these systems are hard to maintain, not worth the investment and ugly. But those who use solar-energy systems counter that cleaning is easy, they pay for themselves in a few years and add value to a home. Their most compelling argument is as basic as it gets: Get over it—I’m saving a ton of money.

Solar fans make a valid point. In fact, a 2008 study compared the investment return of solar installation, S&P 500, a 30-year U.S. Treasury bond and a five-year CD. The ROI breakdown: Solar installation: 10-15%; S&P 500: 9.59%; 30-year bond: 3.62%; five-year CD: 2.82%. Impressive.

Terry Beardsley, director of golf at Eldorado Country Club in Indian Wells, Calif., says club members who made the switch to solar urged him to do likewise. “I did the math. If you live in the Sun Belt, it’s a no-brainer.” Beardsley says the annual electricity bills for his home at Indian Wells Country Club were running $5,500 a year, and with summertime temperatures hitting 110 degrees, his costs were $850 a month running his air-conditioning at a constant 80 degrees. Since installing his system nearly two years ago, he says, “My highest bill has been 98 cents. I saved $4,000 a year out-of-pocket. With California rebates (state rebates vary), it took off $23,000 to install solar panels and six years pays for it. I keep my house at 76 degrees, the benefit adds $50,000 value to my house and there’s a 20-year warranty.” He says he hoses off the panels twice a month, then twice a year has them professionally cleaned.

Beardsley’s HOA was worried about aesthetics, but he went with a more expensive set of solar panels that use less space and had them placed on the southern, back portion of his roof. “My homeowners association was fighting it and initially wouldn't give permission. I was trying to be nice guy and wanted their blessing, but it's a federal law and nobody can stop you. They approved it and I haven't heard from them since."

New homes at Tradition Golf Club are all built with solar panels, and Coachella Valley golf communities including Bighorn, Mission Hills, The Vintage, Indian Wells Country Club, Morningside, Indian Ridge, The Reserve and Citrus are also on board with solar projects. Kirk Weiss, PlanetSolar's regional sales manager, says the company is the exclusive solar-trade partner for new homes at Toscana Country Club, and the success rate has been pronounced with 100-percent buy-in since the program began in June. "Five years ago HOAs thought solar panels were ugly, but now they can be blended into the architecture."

Jill adds, "Savings are there whether residents are full time or seasonal. Those who are not here for the summer still save 80 percent of their annual bill since all solar energy produced is banked with the utility company." To new customers who are eager to learn specifics of solar usage, Jill notes, "Basically, you have an electric plant on your roof. You need to get a rider on your household insurance, but panels are rarely broken, made to withstand 140-mile-per-hour winds and four-inch hailstones."

What about wayward golfballs flying at course-side homes? "In every case except one we have never had golf balls damage a system," Weiss says. "The problem was the pro tee box which was quite far back but elevated, and golfers liked going over the houses. Balls landed on this house more often than not. Only one panel was damaged—and there were 20 balls on the roof."

Dining in the Desert

The Desert Golf Magazine guide to eating out in the Coachella Valley

Arnold Palmer's

With peak season waxing anew in the Valley, desert diners can once again look forward to local restaurants serving up an enticing mix of innovative and classic dishes. Stellar suggestions abound, though visitors would do well to try any of these Desert Golf Magazine favorites.

You may not play like “The King,” but you can certainly dine like him. Arnold Palmer’s in La Quinta (78-164 Avenue 52) serves variety to guests with the same inimitable flair with which Palmer brought golf to the masses. Happy hour from 4:00-6:00 p.m. in Arnie’s Pub is a perfect way to finish off your round or start your evening. The half-priced bar menu includes Prosciutto di Palmer California Antipasto Rolls, a tasty snack to pair with the pub’s excellent wine list. For dinner, ample seafood, vegetarian and steak dishes can complement the day’s scorecard—whatever number you posted.

At Morgan’s in the desert at the La Quinta Resort & Club (49-999 Eisenhower Drive), James Beard award-winning Executive Chef Jimmy Schmidt prepares some of the most aptly lauded cuisine in Southern California. In talking about his locally sourced menu, Schmidt says, “December is really the start of the growing season for the Coachella Valley; everything that was planted in the fall is starting to come in.”

A wide variety of regional crops highlight the high-season menu. Entrees are complemented by pomegranates, sweet corn, artichokes, figs, mangos and snow apples, and there are tempting starters such as Trotten Inlet oysters sourced from the Puget Sound area of Washington.

When asked to describe one of his favorite dishes, Schmidt doesn’t hold back. “We have a great rack of lamb crusted in pistachios that come out of a valley just north of Coachella, and we do it in a pomegranate reduction using unusual varieties of pomegranate that are really full-seeded. We serve it with black beluga lentils grown by one of our local farmers during the hot summer months.” The dish pairs perfectly with a Syrah.

In Rancho Mirage, diners can celebrate the glory of Gotham with a visit to The Slice Pizzeria (72775 Dinah Shore Drive, #107), where New York flavors and milieu are among the ingredients for some of the best pizzas in the region. Additional menu selections include a build-your-own-pasta option and other Italian favorites.

Seasonal specials and promotions make the tab as casual as these welcoming environs. "The Slice is a fun, family-oriented, full Italian restaurant," says owner Jack Srebnik. "And the name deceives you that's it's only pizza. We have a full variety of salad, pizzas, pastas and all homemade deserts. And it's all New York-style food."

Detailing a few Slice favorites, Srebnik says: "Our Linguine and Clams is one of the best-selling dishes and the Lasagna is like grandma's, full-bodied lasagna. The food is plentiful and the portions are large — you don't leave here hungry."

The restaurant is open for lunch and dinner daily, and weekenders should take note of the affordable (and excellent) Saturday and Sunday breakfasts. Whatever hour of the day you visit, know that the patio is a perfect setting for peak-season dining. "We have all your traditional Mexican dishes, but we also have our Mexi Pot Stickers and Santa Fe Eggrolls," Srebnik offers of his neighboring establishment. "I like to say that it's 'South Beach comes to Mexico.' It's a menu that you won't find any other place."

"Our downtown Palm Springs' Maracas has a huge outdoor patio and it's a place to be seen," he adds. "And our Rancho Mirage restaurant has live entertainment and a huge bar that's just like Cheers."

Haven't enjoyed the smiles at Point Happy for a spell? Be sure to return to the singular setting that is The Cliffhouse (78250 Highway 111), where a remodel by new owners has turned a Valley favorite into an updated classic. Returning guests will instantly note the refreshed look highlighted by a new lounge, bar area and plush seating.

Art and Golf

By Matt McKay

Daniel Maltzman finds inspiration in both of his not entirely dissimilar passions

©Seth DeDoes

The world of Daniel Maltzman is surreal. It's filled with interesting women. It's fast-paced. It's out-front. It's bold. It's brash. It's colorful. It's Miro-meets-Warhol. It's also Sunset Strip meets Country Club. And all the elements of his world are reflected in his works of art.

"I think it has a sort of a pop, sort of an edgy, contemporary feel that anyone can feel," Maltzman says. "My art (has) kind of an inspiration and a twist from everybody put together in one."

Maltzman has been painting and creating both on and off the golf course since his youth. His golf talents led him to compete at the collegiate level at both San Diego State and Chapman University, and he graduated from Chapman in 1986 with degrees in art and psychology. His art has more recently led him to Beverly Hills, where he owns, operates and supplies the Daniel Maltzman Gallery.

Maltzman says that he has always loved to draw, but it was his experience in the clothing industry that actually led him into the world of art. While in his mid-20s, he was creating clothing for private labels such as Ann Taylor. That job not only allowed him to attain a level of financial freedom, it also allowed him to tap into his creative, artistic side. Now he employs those same elements while working with his newest chosen craft.

Because his gallery came with blank walls, Maltzman now spends a majority of his time creating the feature works that he exhibits there, and he also handles the business ends of the enterprise. However, his second love — golf — is never far from his mind. Still sporting a nine handicap and with two hole-in-ones to his credit, Maltzman can often be seen at his old stomping grounds, Hillcrest Country Club in Los Angeles, partaking in his “other” passion.

The artist’s works include his Women’s Series and his Shadow Figures Series. His abstract art is also very popular with his regular clientele, a group that ranges from venture capitalists and casino-hotel owners to rock-and-rollers. Many of those clients have been cultivated through golf relationships, which began before his love of, and talent for, the world of art developed to its current state.

Maltzman learned to play golf accompanying his father, Donald, on rounds at Hillcrest. He eventually grew to love the game while also developing a desire to master certain elements of flair—something he says the game of golf and the act of creating artwork share. The two pursuits are more similar, he maintains, than they first appear.

With the opening of his Beverly Hills gallery, Maltzman's art world has grown so much that it dominates much of the time he once devoted to golf. He is in the process of rolling out his "The World of Maltzy," project, which will be based on photographs manipulated into the style that reflects Maltzman's creative philosophy. He says the series will have elements of reality. It will have its roots in a photograph but will be transformed by surreal overlays and retouches by Maltzman. The result could be described as psychedelic billboards.

But as those who play know, golf is on your mind even when you're not playing. And the game is such a prevalent part of Maltzman's life that it was inevitable that it would eventually creep into his artwork. It did so with the Art of Golf series created in 2011.

It was also incorporated into the appropriately titled painting "Golf Girl," which was right in line with his penchant for painting provocative women in alluring poses. Maltzman says he will be creating more golf-related work in the near future, including a painting currently in progress.

"Golf has the same characteristics that art has, as painting," says Maltzman. "You cannot pinpoint the element of the desire that is created within the mind, the brain, the soul, and the passion...yet that element is there and it's deep with both [disciplines]."

MP4-12-C Spider

McLaren's Formula 1-turned-everyday-car is for a daring few

If McLaren is a household name, you either have a rarified zip code or subscriptions to every car magazine on the planet. The McLaren MP4-12C Spider is audaciously priced and raucously designed.

Imagine owning a Formula 1 car and driving it to work every day. The MP4-12C Spider, not to be confused with the MP4, is all sport. You may know McLaren from the company's F1 days wowing onlookers with the racing aspects of a super car. When the MP4-12C hit the market in 2011, it was clear McLaren was actually upping its game—if that was even possible.

The 12C rides on an all-carbon composite chassis. The weight is more like like a Ferrari. You can drive the McLaren all day without regrets or the need for a hot tub afterward.

The seating system gives drivers the feeling of hovering just above the asphalt, and the sensation at 200 mph is exactly why owners pay $268,000 for the vehicle. This brand of heart-racing adrenaline is only found in cars like this—and some would say only in this car. Finding something to complain about in the Spider is tough. Sunburn perhaps?

If speed is what you're looking for, the Spider won't disappoint. With a 0-60 time right at three seconds, McLaren hasn't left anything on the design-room table. It's all in the engine. The rumble of the turbos is power orated and the only sales pitch a dealer needs to make. Put the top down while you roll through town (you can operate it at speeds up to 19 mph) and let the car rip on the open roads. A top speed of 204 mph will have you looking for any sucker with a muscle car to take you on at the stoplight.

Technologically, the 12C is advanced to the point of space age. The rear wheels are driven by a seven-speed SSG dual-clutch transmission, operated with rocker-mounted shift paddles. A clear view of the 12C Spider's lightweight M838T power plant is available through a glass panel positioned behind the tonneau cover. A complex brake-steer technology tells the a Mini Cooper than a V-8 turbo-charged sports car. Weighing in at just over 3,000 pounds, the recipe for wow is all there. Early criticism of the 12C was that it just wasn't awe-inspiring enough compared to Italian competitor Ferrari. With the addition of the topless Spider, the game has changed. The folding hardtop added less weight than a supermodel but decidedly raised the stakes in the sexy department. Steel reinforcement was added to the rollover protectors, and off the line rolled a fully convertible MP4-12C. Truth is, very little needed changing.

The specs for 2013 are jaw dropping. An additional 25 horsepower was added to an already beefy engine to top out at 618 horsepower. The 3.8-liter twin turbo isn't designed to break your neck or have you on a first-name basis with your chiropractor, either. In fact, many critics praise the 12C for the ways in which it isn't car which wheels to slow through the corners, virtually eliminating under steering and injecting confidence. The Spider's visibility is a key confidence booster as well. With the top down, there is no doubt about the line the car is on and what is happening at nearly every angle.

Designers give drivers several choices for comfort or sport options in the chassis.

The "track" option will rev higher and allow for manual shifting. "Normal" is great for around town. A new feature for 2013 is the adjustable suspension; add 1.6 inches of lift in the front and an inch more in the back to get over speed bumps and up steep driveways. The lift feature can be operated while moving at speeds of up to 37 mph. The active spoiler system is a nice touch so that the 12-C isn't outdone by the likes of Porsche's 911. McLaren also boasts myriad personalization options on the interior and exterior features. Hot colors and a simple interior design are certain to live up to the McLaren expectation in this competitive price sector.

McLaren's technology and design elements are not just sporty, they're beautiful. To look at the MP4-12C Spider is to gaze at art on wheels; however, driving the Spider is life changing, euphoric and potentially hazardous to your bank account. Pre-orders are being taken at global dealers in 22 countries.

BOARD CERTIFIED PROSTHODONTIST

CRAIG CONROW DDS MS FACP
Cosmetic, Restorative & Implant Dentistry

A Specialist in Crowns, Veneers, Dentures, Implants & Full Mouth Restorations

MEET DR. CRAIG CONROW

A Prosthodontist is recognized by the American Dental Association as a "specialist" in restoring and replacing teeth. With three additional years of education and training beyond Dental School, Prosthodontists are uniquely qualified to provide full or partial mouth restorations. The best long term value is getting it done right the first time. Dr. Craig Conrow is eminently qualified through his extensive post-graduate studies, and sixteen years of full time patient care to provide you with exceptional dental care whether your needs are simple or complex.

Patient Testimonials

Dr. Conrow, it is rare to find a doctor with such care and dedication to his patients. I am both grateful and appreciative. I am always pleased to refer patients to you, as I truly believe that you are the most qualified, conscientious and overall best dentist in Southern California. — Paul C. Watson

Dr. Conrow, we want to thank you for all the exquisite work and caring you have given us over the years. You have helped correct years of problems and given us a higher quality of life. We are ever grateful for your dedication to quality and your devotion to care for your patients. You have made our lives better because of your exceptional talent and your genuine interest in the well-being of your patient. — Carol & Welton Whann

Dr. Conrow, imagine a dentist referring a dentist to another dentist. Well, that's exactly how I became a patient of Dr. Craig Conrow. I practiced dentistry for over twenty years before I moved to the desert. When I needed emergency dental service a dentist friend of mine referred me to another dental specialist, Dr. Craig Conrow. That's a lot of dentist referring dentist. The care and service I received in Dr. Conrow's office was extraordinary. We dentist know when we experience quality dentistry, competent and professional care from the dental staff. That's exactly what I found in Dr. Conrow's practice. Sometimes I think that only a dentist can fully appreciate the work of another dentist, but my mouth feels and looks great and you don't have to be a dentist to appreciate that. — Carol L. # Making a statement

Your choice in rings has a lot to say about you

Our mothers called it a cocktail ring, but times have changed. Today, this same opulent eye-catching finger jewelry is called a statement ring, and designers say it's one piece of jewelry that will never go out of style.

A statement ring includes eye-catching bling and is typically so unusual that people can't stop talking about it. Often the greatest value to these rings is that you can see them from a mile away, and many are sentimental favorites, too. Statement rings were once most likely to be heirlooms or finds from bazaars, but their increasing popularity with the Hollywood crowd has prompted designers to create mind-blowing finger jewelry—with a hefty price tag.

Even though the term 'statement' pretty much says it all, designers continue to try to define the concept. As one put it: "They are timeless and statement enough to the point that you don't have to bring anything else."

Another notes, "The rings are a great way of saying something without actually saying anything."

The duty of the statement ring is to transform any woman—or outfit—into a higher level of sophistication, so choose your ring wisely, or perhaps boldly. This accessory is by definition a conversation piece that will prompt discussions about its origins and history. It is amazing that so much attention can be garnered from one ring.

Statement rings come in all shapes and sizes. Enjoying tremendous popularity now is the YSL "Arty" Oval Red Stone Ring, $290 on YSL.com. Disney jewelry is another of-the-moment choice, and not just for kids. A mini replica of Disney's iconic castle is whimsical in gold with purple towers. The Disney Couture Oversized Castle is $70 at fredflare.com

Vampires are a statement and so is the VERAMEAT Vampire Love Ring, complete with teeth, $110 at verameat.com. The Skull, Starfish & Claw ring by Alexander McQueen pops with color and sparkle; it's priced at $245 at bergdorfgoodman.com

Fine jewelers such as Leeds and Sons have put their own twist on statement rings with the Utopia-Gallery Collection. These beauties are made with Australian white pearl or Tahitian black pearl set in 18k white or rose gold. For more details visit Leedsandson.com

As the ultra chic trend for 2012, the best part about these rings is that there is no rhyme or reason to them and no need to color coordinate. In fact that's the point. These rings are all about you being bold and daring.

One caveat: leave other statement pieces at home; your ring should tell the whole story.

On a complementary note, clothing this season will do even more to make your ring stand out as colors are trending away from the bright palettes of past seasons. Instead, there's a resurgence of neutral shades and flesh and earth tones. Also on the way out are the feathers that have long been popular for hair, clothing and accessories. Other natural materials, however, are taking their place, including shells, wood and seed beads. And look for heavy use of resin plastic.

Trends come and go, but one fashion rule never changes: Whatever you wear and however you wear it, make it a statement that is true to you.

Wind? Rain? Cold? Golfwear
manufacturers have you covered

Don't let the term "desert" fool you; winters here are cold! High winds and low temperatures might keep some golfers inside, but our cold winter mornings are a breath of fresh air compared to months of 100+ degrees—and we know exactly what to wear.

The latest technology has arrived in the form of heated golf outerwear from Mobile Warming Gear. In layman's terms, we are talking about clothing with heaters.

"While some golfers put their clubs away when the weather turns cold, those with a true passion for the game want to get in as many rounds as possible," says Keith Apple, general manager of Mobile Warming Golf. "We're making that a comfortable reality, rain or shine, with a unique system that ensures a player's core stays warm for up to 10 hours."

The company has launched its first-ever collection of waterproof jackets and vests with heating technology. Each garment is enhanced by micro-alloy heating elements built into the back and chest area. Completely unobtrusive, the Mobile Warming system is powered by a small, rechargeable lithium ion battery providing heat at the push of a button. There are four adjustable settings.

Eliminating the need for bulky layers, Mobile Warming Gear designs also provide freedom of movement with golf-specific cuts and four-way stretch performance materials that are breathable and washable. The sleek and stylish outerwear pieces, priced at $160–$220, are available for men and women, and colors include turquoise, gray and black. Visit mobilewarminggear.com and be the first in your foursome to really be hot!

For the majority of golfers, layering will remain a constant on the course, as will the need for more advanced performance fabrics. Taking inspiration from PGA Tour young guns, Sunice has introduced the Sunice Edge Collection. Launched in October, Edge offers sleek styling with a trimmer fit and a variety of pieces so that golfers can create their own layering system. The outerwear is made from Gore-Tex with Paclite technology, the lightest and most packable of Gore's waterproof membranes.

"When we began drawing Edge, we wanted to create a different feel and fit while keeping our superior technical features and comfort," says Mark Fletcher, president of Sunice.

In addition to performance, Edge is all about looks. The black, white and lime color palette is striking. Embossed logos, interesting placements and contrast-color zip designs bring the collection up to date. For pricing and information visit sunice.com

For the golfer who is always warm and doesn't require layering, there's the Sun Mountain Headwind collection for 2013, with pieces starting at $59. Sun Mountain's Headwind Windwear effectively blocks the wind yet is so lightweight golfers might even forget they are wearing it. With its water-repellant coating, this pullover also protects against light showers. Following a successful first year, the Headwind collection is expanding to include men and women's short- and long-sleeve styles. Constructed from Sun Mountain's proprietary water-resistant and breathable RainFlex fabric, these garments feature a flexible insert across the back and shoulders that stretches with the golfer to allow for an unrestricted swing.

The Headwind collection is offered in an array of colors that include royal blue or red for men and purple and cedar for women. For the more traditional golfer, black, gray and white are also available. Visit sunmountain.com for the nearest retailer.

With today's technologically advanced clothing, golfers can embrace the weather, stay warm and dry and keep playing the game they love regardless of climatic fluctuations.

Patek Philippe's Platinum World Time
$4 million

A $4 million auction bid made Patek Philippe's Platinum World Time the most expensive watch in 2002. The self-winding watch displays each of the 24 time zones and is known for its readability, user friendliness and having separate and switchable night and day tones.

Chopard Blue Diamond Ring
$16.26 million

Blue diamonds are among the rarest of naturally colored gems. That's why this oval-shaped diamond ring, with triangular-shaped diamond shoulders and a pave-set diamond band in 18-carat white gold, will set you back about $1.7 million per carat. A pricey and unique alternative to the typical engagement ring. For more information, visit chopard.com.

201 carat Chopard
$25 million

The watch face is somewhere there in the middle, surrounded by 201 carats. This watch-bracelet comes with a trio of heart-shaped diamonds: A 15-carat pink diamond, 12-carat blue diamond and an 11-carat white diamond, all of which open when a spring-loaded mechanism. More than 600 yellow diamonds are sprinkled alongside 91 or so colorless diamonds.

Pillage the Strip, then retire to your plush quarters. From just $79.

Eclipse

$1.2 billion

This 560-foot-long yacht has two helipads, 11 guest cabins, two swimming pools, three launch boats, an aquarium, and a minisubmarine that can dive to 50 meters below the ocean surface, according to London's Daily Mail. The master bedroom and bridge have bulletproof glass, and the security system includes missile detection systems that warn of incoming rockets. The owner, Roman Abramovich, a Russian billionaire who also owns Britain's Chelsea Football Club, reportedly fitted the yacht with a laser system that prevents paparazzi from taking photos. It was built by Blohm + Voss in Hamburg, Germany.

The Bugatti Veyron 16.4 Super Sport “World Record Edition”

$2.3 Million

If your passion for performance and luxury autos cannot be stopped, and your McLaren F1 is becoming a bore along with the rest of your exotic cars, it might be time to check out Top Gear's “Car of the Decade,” the Bugatti Veyron. The most recent model, the Bugatti Veyron 16.4 Super Sport, has an estimated price tag of $2.3 million and, if that figure is even close to the ultimate price, will be the most expensive car in the world. The Super Sport, unveiled at the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance in August 2010, is not your typical luxury car. Its W16 engine—essentially two narrow-angle V8s sharing a crankshaft—with four turbochargers generates 1,200 hp and, along with improved aerodynamics over the original Veyron, allows it to reach a top speed of 268 miles per hour. That makes the Super Sport the fastest production car in the world.
