A woman with long brown hair and light-colored eyes is the central figure. She is wearing a light-colored, possibly silk, button-down shirt. Her right hand is raised to her chin, displaying a large, oval-shaped ring with a green stone. She is also wearing a long, multi-strand necklace with various colored stones (purple, orange, green) and a matching earring. The background is a softly blurred art studio, featuring a wooden easel and a ladder.

Publisher'sNotes

By Timothy J. Pade • pade@desertgolfer.com

Welcome back to a new season of Desert Golf Magazine. Many of you have been in cooler climates the past several months, and there are numerous new happenings here in the desert we want to tell you about.

We are proud to feature Justin Timberlake on our cover this issue, and we commend his work to help the Shriners Hospitals. The Justin Timberlake Shriners Hospitals for Children Open, formerly the Las Vegas Invitational, would have all but disappeared if not for the remarkable efforts of the Shriners organization and Timberlake's contribution of his name, passion and time. See our coverage of this event starting on pg. 12.

Another great event this season is the Charles Schwab Cup Championship at Desert Mountain in Scottsdale, Ariz. Desert Mountain, a mega golf community with six superb Nicklaus-designed golf courses, celebrates its 25th Anniversary this year. Our coverage of the community and tournament starts on pg. 20.

All of us at Desert Golf Magazine are excited to get this season under way with a somewhat renewed economy. While the desert temperatures are thankfully cooling, the housing market in the area is actually heating up; now might be the right time to consider buying or selling your golf-course property. For an insider view of desert real estate that might help you with your decision, please turn to pg. 32.

As anyone who has lived in the California desert even for a season now knows, the restaurant scene in the Coachella Valley is vibrant. Many new establishments have already opened or will soon, among them some eateries with big names attached, including Wolfgang Puck and Mastro's. Check out our Desert Dining Guide and all the fabulous new venues and fare you now have to choose from, starting on pg. 42.

If you're looking for a new pair of golf shoes with all the high-tech features and flashy colors—to say nothing of high-end materials including crocodile, ostrich and snakeskin—you'll get a bead on how to put your best golfing foot forward in our round-up of shoes for men, women and juniors on pg. 28. And as always, we showcase the latest in fashion on and off the course and what's new from world-renowned jewelry designers. That coverage starts on pg. 50.

For you desert car aficionados, we are featuring the new Tesla Model S electric car. The future of driving is here now, and this incredible vehicle is poised to be a game-changer. We also feature the Chevy Volt, a less expensive option to going green on the road. Read about both starting on pg. 46 and go to your nearest dealer armed with a wealth of information.

We are all looking forward to a new season and to bringing you the best the desert has to offer in each and every issue of Desert Golf Magazine. We hope you will enjoy this journey with us and we look forward to seeing you on the links.

Warmest regards,
Timothy J. Pade

The Evolution of a Tournament

Justin Timberlake and the Shriners are moving to center stage

Kevin Na the 2011 Justin Timberlake Shriners Hospitals for Children Open Champion

The 2012 Justin Timberlake Shriners Hospitals for Children Open can be characterized in many ways. But one thing is clear: it will be the last of its kind. You could call it transitional. You could call it a new beginning. You could call it the end of an era. You could call it the year the tournament has come of age. For this will be the last year the tournament will be a part of the PGA Tour's Fall Series, the handful of events that have traditionally taken place after the FedEx Cup playoffs conclude.

Next year, the tournament will be a full-fledged member of the FedEx Cup series, with a bigger purse and a bigger stage, all renewed its sponsorship of the event for the next seven years, and the purse will increase with the tournament's new status, going from $4.5 million to $6 million.

As a Fall Series event, and a season-ending event before that, the tournament has always had a bit of an oh-by-the-way feel, particularly for the game's biggest stars—save for a patch of years over a decade ago when the tournament offered what was then one of the Tour's biggest purses ($5 million).

As much as the players might love Las Vegas, leaving it off their schedule was not difficult if they'd just finished competing in the playoffs and PGA Championship and had no need for more official appropriately set in a city whose expansive growth and marquee name recognition will now be reflected in the importance and quality of its golf tournament.

You could also call it a celebration. That's what the tournament's director, Adam Sperling, is calling it. "It's an exciting time," Sperling says, now in his fourth year as director. "It's a celebration of our history, our missions and our future."

This year's tournament will have the same title sponsor, the Shriners Hospitals for Children. It will be played at the same course, the TPC Summerlin in Las Vegas, Nev. It will also be played during its customary fall timeframe, this year Oct. 4–7.

However, while it's anticipated that the tournament dates will be similar in the future, there are many more changes anticipated as the Tour goes from a yearly schedule to one that overlaps years, starting with the 2013-2014 season. When that "season" begins in late 2013, the JT Shriners becomes one of the early-season events in the FedEx Cup Series.

As such, competing players will earn full points within the playoff system in their efforts to reach the 2014 FedEx Cup playoffs and PGA Tour Championship. Shriners Hospitals has just money. The Las Vegas event, along with the other Fall Series tournaments, were critical to players attempting to make it into the Tour's top 125. Otherwise, its appeal outside the Las Vegas area and the affected players rested with the hardcore Tour fan.

That is until 2008, when the tournament began its association with a golf-crazy former boy-band member named Justin Timberlake, and subsequently the Shriners Hospitals. These associations gave the tournament a clear identity, and the well-established young entertainer as host injected a youthful cool into the tournament that had gone missing in prior years. Suddenly, the hardcore Tour fan found his previously low-key Las Vegas tournament now attracted the attention of Entertainment Tonight and People magazine, along with The Golf Channel.

Timberlake's involvement has certainly drawn more eyeballs and young fans to the event. But, as a Fall Series event, it seemed the tournament still hadn't maxed out on its potential. The tournament's status didn't match the city's status; however, the tournament's move to the FedEx Cup regular season seems destined to rectify that discrepancy.

Which brings us back to this year's event, its last as a member of the "old" Fall Series. While all involved look forward to the tournament's new position on the Tour schedule and hierarchy, there is the irresistible temptation to look at this year's tournament as the unique event it really is.

While past competitions have been fierce and occasionally historic (who can forget Jonathan Byrd's hole-in-one to win the 2010 playoff?), they have mattered most to players trying to maintain or enhance their Tour status for the following year. Other players had various motivations for participation—and not all of them could claim they were centrally focused on the competition.

The celebrity relief, bright lights, gaming and shopping opportunities also tended to give the event the cozy, relaxed feel of the old-time celebrity tournaments, which wasn't necessarily a bad thing. But given the choice between being a Fall Series event and one of the season's first bona fide FedEx Series events, it's likely that not a single event organizer would turn down the opportunity—especially if the event is still to be held in Las Vegas.

"Vegas is always a great time for the players," says Sperling. "We've got top corporate sponsors, great volunteers and, of course, it's a city like no other. It's not just about the golf course and the points. Players know when they come here, they're going to have a great time."

A Touch of Tuscany

An elegant Italian aesthetic and golf courses that make challenge fun

By Clive Clark

Do you ever judge a book by its cover? Sometimes that's not a bad thing. For example, if you were to judge Toscana Country Club by its cover, you would not be disappointed by the contents. Even the entry and driveway exude all that is luxurious. Situated in the heart of Indian Wells in Southern California, Toscana is in the center of a desert. Yet the lush landscaping could easily make you believe you were thousands of miles away in the heart of Tuscany.

This theme continues at the clubhouse where visitors are greeted by a tall splashing fountain and a building designed in the grand tradition of Italian architecture. The Club Villa complex spans 90,000 square feet. In addition to the clubhouse, it features dining facilities, a golf shop, an inviting spa and a sports club that includes a fitness center and tennis courts.

The entire complex exudes style and charm; yet it also has an informal, intimate feel that makes everyone feel perfectly 'at home.' That includes former British Open champion and CBS golf commentator Ian Baker-Finch, a member who plays much of his golf at Toscana between working on televised events.

South Course Hole No. 9

The project was developed by William Bone, CEO and founder of The Sunrise Company. Over the course of his career, Bone has developed 12 country club communities, over 20 golf courses and built more than 12,000 homes. At the heart of this community are two championship Jack Nicklaus Signature golf courses, The North and The South, which are surrounded by 652 home and estate sites.

North Course Hole No. 7

Nicklaus Design is the most prolific golf design company in the world, with over 370 courses in 36 countries to its credit. Jack Nicklaus has masterminded his company for the past 40 years, and is arguably not only the most successful golfer the world has ever seen, but also one of the greatest strategists in the game. As a champion who won 18 Majors, his course management was impeccable. This expertise has carried through to his golf course design. I believe Jack feels there is more to golf than simply hitting the ball, and that golfers should also enjoy the challenges that add an element of interest and fun to the game.

Toscana's courses are elegant and manicured, but true to Nicklaus philosophy, they are in essence thought provoking and challenging. And they each offer differing design and landscape elements. The South Course features a lush environment while The North Course reflects a more natural desert landscape. Both, however, offer playability for golfers of every level, and both require that players not only execute but also think.

There are a number of risk-and-reward holes. There is also evidence of traditional cross-bunkers. These in particular add to the challenge of the second shot, depending on what the player did with the tee shot and what the wind conditions are. Is it worth the risk of trying to carry these bunkers that are often placed 50 to 60 yards short of the green? Or is a lay-up a better choice? Playing over cross-bunkers also adds a further dimension; behind them lies "dead ground," which creates an optical illusion and makes the green appear closer than it really is.

One feature that will surely be noticed by players here is the speed slot. A speed slot is found on the tee shots and typically demands carrying trouble or having to play toward a hazard. Invariably the hazard is a bunker, or nest of bunkers, that must be carried. On the far side of the bunkers is a downhill ramp that will propel the tee shot forward. On these particular holes, it is possible for an accurately executed drive to gain an additional 20 to 30 yards—and we all like that!

However, if that's not the case, Bill Harmon, outstanding golf instructor frequently seen on The Golf Channel, is on hand to help you with your game.

What might also help are new tees, added at Toscana under the supervision of Jack Nicklaus. They're part of the PGA's Tee It Forward program, which Toscana Country Club supports. This program has been endorsed by a number of top players, as well as luminaries in the golf club manufacturing industry, such as Barney Adams. The Tee It Forward program encourages golfers to play from tees that match their skill level so they can better enjoy the game with fewer overall shots and shorter distances played on each hole. The benefit is that the new set of tees will encompass a greater range of skill levels.

Toscana has added a new tee on each hole on The South Course, giving members and their guests the option to play the Par-72 course at 4,550 yards. Four sets of combo tees, rated and sloped by the SCGA and the WSCGA, will also be available giving additional options.

Golf in the desert, which attracts a large number of retired or semi-retired golfers, will no doubt gain from this program. Toscana General Manager Paul Levy and Director of Golf Dave Craig are very optimistic that this will not only keep more elderly golfers in the game, it will encourage golfers of all levels to enjoy the game more.

At Toscana Country Club, that isn't hard.

Clive Clark is a staff writer with Desert Golf Magazine and former Ryder Cup player and World-Class Golf Course Architect

Jack Nicklaus and William Bone

Designer Perspective Jack Nicklaus talks about the courses

"With the first golf course at Toscana, we thought we would be fairly bold with our design approach. Basically, that was accomplished with the use of bold bunkering. It's a concept where you flash sand up the sides or faces of the bunkers. You can do that in the desert where you don't have the thunderstorms encountered in, say, Florida, which can tear it down.

With the first course, the initial piece of property was relatively flat and did not have a lot of unique, existing characteristics, so we had to create the course's personality with the placement of trees and the bunker style. With the second course (which has nine holes completed), we tried to make it more native and wanted to include more natural materials, particularly rock. When Bill Bone decided he wanted to do a little bit of rock work, he eventually incorporated over $2 million worth onto the nine holes, some of which needed to be artificial. He did that to enhance the course. It's not what we did—it's what Bill Bone did.

This is a great example of when you have a commitment from the owner to create something very special, which you don't get very often. Bill Bone understands golf; he understands what his clientele wants and what his golfers want. Without Bill Bone there, I would venture to say Toscana might probably be just another nice golf course."

Desert Mountain

a Scottsdale Treasure

Desert Mountain celebrates its 25th anniversary hosting
the Charles Schwab Cup Championship

Since opening in 1987, Desert Mountain, in Scottsdale, Ariz., has become one of the most renowned golfing communities in the world. Nestled in the Sonoran Desert, near the base of the Continental Mountains, the private, 8,000-acre golf and recreational community remains the world's only golf club to feature six Jack Nicklaus signature courses.

The community first received public recognition in 1989, when its most celebrated course, Cochise, hosted the The Tradition, a major championship on the Champions Tour. The Tradition was held at Cochise for the next 13 years, and the golfing public quickly took notice. In 1992, Golf Course News rated it as the best maintained course in the entire country.

Cochise Course Hole No. 13

One year later, Golf Digest added Cochise to its list of America's 100 Greatest Courses. Since then, the course has steadily been acknowledged as one of Arizona's finest.

So there is little surprise that the course will host yet another Champions Tour event this fall, the Charles Schwab Cup Championship, the tour's season-ending tournament. Nov. 1–4, the top 30 leading money winners of 2012, including the likes of Fred Couples and Bernhard Langer, will compete for the $440,000 first-place prize.

"As the longtime host of The Tradition, Desert Mountain was a natural choice to host the Schwab Championship," says Ian Knight, executive director, Charles Schwab Cup Championship.

With a $2.5 million purse, this is the only Champions event, aside from the Tour's five major championships, to feature four rounds of action. It is also one of the most popular tournaments of the Champions Tour's entire schedule.

Similar to the PGA Tour's FedEx Cup, the Schwab Cup is a season-long competition that is strictly points-based. To determine the most consistent golfer of the season, points are awarded to players when they secure top-ten finishes. All point totals are doubled during major championships and the Charles Schwab Cup Championship itself. In addition to the pressure of winning the Championship, all 30 contestants are also focused on securing the Cup and its $1 million grand prize.

But the task is not easy. Cochise, a 6,929-yard, par-70 layout, is expected to have contoured greens with a Stimpmeter at 13-plus feet. Precise shot making will be essential, as a majority of the greens provide small landing areas with very little forgiveness for errant shots. Many of the course's fairways are surrounded by water or rock ledges, forcing players to focus on precision rather than distance.

The course's signature hole, the 215-yard par-3 No. 7, will certainly test players' nerves. The hole's double island green, which it shares with No. 15, is not only surrounded by water and bunkers, but also features more slopes than perhaps any other green on the entire course. Par will likely be a very welcomed score, especially during final-round action.

As television viewers witness the course's formidable par-5 holes, including the island green 15th, and daunting par-4s, like the 3rd (Cochise's No. 3 handicap hole), they will also notice the layout's natural beauty, from its perfectly manicured greens to its mountainside views.

Nicklaus himself calls Cochise one of the most picturesque golf courses in the world and "one of the highlights of my career as a course designer."

In addition to its exquisite views of the Continental Mountains, Desert Mountain offers members a youth activity center; six-mile private trail system; and a fitness center and tennis complex, complete with hard, clay and grass courts. Restaurants, spas and pro shops are also plentiful, as each course features its own clubhouse with a specific architectural theme, ranging from Western to Frank Lloyd Wright-inspired designs.

A $1.6 million state-of-the-art Golf Performance Center was recently finalized, featuring putting greens, ranges, bunkers, pitching and chipping areas, and instruction from PGA-trained professionals. Members also have access to four-camera video-motion analysis and three-dimensional motion capture, among other technological applications.

Resale properties, including cottages, custom homes, estates, townhouses, and villas are currently available for purchase and are centrally located near each of the six courses. In fact, an onsite, full-service real estate company, Desert Mountain Real Estate, presently serves the community.

"This fall marks our 25th anniversary and we successfully transitioned into a member-owned club less than two years ago," notes Bob Jones, Desert Mountain's COO and general manager. "We introduced the Golf Performance Center earlier this year, and we're moving forward with an expansion of our fitness center. It's a great time in our history."

Christopher McDonald

Playing a golfer on the big screen is one (very cool) way to lower your handicap

With 85 films on his resume, lead roles in numerous television shows and an established stage career, actor Christopher McDonald is well known in the entertainment world. Golfers, however, know him as Shooter—Shooter McGavin, that is.

The movie, of course, is Happy Gilmore. “I turned [it] down twice because I was really tired from doing back-to-back movies,” McDonald recalls. “The [script] did look pretty funny, and they kept asking me to do it so I decided to go meet Adam Sandler. Within 15 minutes of our meeting, I knew I had to do this movie.”

Playing Shooter wasn’t difficult for McDonald as he was already a regular on the golf course. And thanks to Happy Gilmore, his game only got better. “My game got sick,” the actor says. “I was playing golf five hours a day, six days a week. It was nutty. I had a lot of fun doing that part as a villain who was in on the joke.”

McDonald picked up a golf club about 25 years ago thanks to his manager, Scott Manners. Like so many others, he found the game frustrating at first. “I always wanted to kill,” he admits. But it only took a few tweaks here and there and McDonald was on his way. At his best, he boasted an 11 handicap; today, he considers himself “a bogey golfer.”

Married in 1992, McDonald and his wife, Lupe, currently have busy schedules raising three daughters and one son. The actor has also enjoyed a nonstop career and is accomplished in multiple mediums of the entertainment world. The downside of all that success is that he now finds it difficult to get out on the course. “My home course is in Lake Arrowhead, and we just moved,” he says. “If I get on the course three times a month that’s good.”

Regardless of how often he plays or how steady his game is at any given time, one thing remains true: McDonald is always up for a charity tournament. He has been at such events as the Child Help tournament hosted by John O’Hurley and Cheryl Ladd, the LPGA’s Kraft Nabisco Championship and the Frank Sinatra Celebrity Invitational. He has also been asked several times to play in the Bob Hope/Humana Challenge. So far he has always been working at that time, but he hopes he can play in it eventually.

One of McDonald's most embarrassing moments on the course was during the making of Happy Gilmore. "There was a scene where I'm supposed to miss the putt but look like I'm trying to make it," he says. "No matter what I did, I kept making it, so I told myself to focus on making it and I would miss it. Twenty putts later, I finally missed it."

His most exciting moment wasn't on the silver screen but in a charity tournament. "It was stepping up to the first tee in front of about 300 people at the Frank Sinatra," the actor says. "I wasn't even warmed up. They announce my name and my role in Happy Gilmore. [Spectators] are lined up and down the fairway. The cameras are rolling and I hit the most spectacular drive right down the middle, straight as an arrow! It felt fantastic, everyone was cheering, it was like, 'oh man!'"

When asked who would make up his ultimate foursome, McDonald gives this question serious thought. "Wow," he exclaims. "Bob Hope, Bobby Jones, Frank Sinatra and one of the three Stooges, the one who plays good golf." That might be considered a fivesome, but it's likely no one would bother McDonald about it.

"Now that I've moved closer to the desert, I can't wait to play there more often. I love playing in the desert." For McDonald, golf isn't just swings and scores. It's the camaraderie between players he has found on the golf course that makes the game "super special." He has encouraged his family, nephew and everyone he knows to try the game.

But when it comes down to it, the part he enjoys the most is the same thing that keeps so many golfers playing. "That one shot, when the ball comes off the club and it's pure. It only happens maybe three or four times in a round; that's why I love this game."

With three new movies coming out this year, a wonderful family life, and more time to get out on the course, it seems that McDonald's life is right where he wants it. When asked to describe his life in one sentence he's quick to reply. "Chris McDonald has life by the tail!"

Golf Shoes

Get More Stylish

Traditional to outrageous – there's a shoe for you

Until five years ago golf shoes were mostly vanilla. Black. White. Maybe red or green in women's shoes. But the biggest change in golf apparel in the last few years has been in the footwear department. Now hundreds of styles are available for men, women and even juniors. If vanilla is the chosen flavor, it's still available; however, there are plenty of other flavors, too, and at a wide variety of price points.

FootJoy

Perhaps the company that provides the widest range of golf shoes is FootJoy. The 'base' FootJoy is the popular DryJoy, now reengineered as the DryJoys Tour ($180) for men and available in several styles. The Tour version comes with a two-year waterproof guarantee in what the company calls Extreme Comfort Leather. The DryJoys line also includes the new and highly stylized XPS-1 ($250). For the golfer looking for the highest quality in the line, the FJ Icon ($260) is the choice, while those who want the DryJoys brand on a budget have GreenJoys ($70) as the entry-level shoe. The line includes an attractive golf sandal.

Women also have excellent options in FootJoy including classic DryJoys ($160). The fashion-centric styles from the LoPro collection ($110) include the graffiti pattern, which should turn some heads. But the real star of the DryJoys family is the MyJoy program, which means you can fully customize pretty much any of the shoes in the DryJoys line. Collegiate and MLB shoes are also available. Price varies depending on shoe style.

Nike

Nike has a wide variety of golf shoes, as one might expect. The flagship model is the Nike Men's Zoom TW ($180), which looks more like a traditional running shoe than a golf shoe. Golfers might enjoy the Zoom Bandon ($100), which would be right at home on a basketball court.

Ecco - Adidas - Puma

Spikeless/hybrid golf shoes are becoming more popular. These shoes would wear well in a trendy South Beach club yet have enough functionality for the golf course—in the form of small rubber spikes. Ecco has the Men's BIOM Hybrids ($190); Adidas has the Men's adiSTREET ($90); and Puma has the Faas Grip Golf Shoes ($99). The spikeless/hybrid shoes provide the benefit of being lightweight compared to more traditional golf shoes.

Patrick Gibbons - Alligator Jake's - John Lobb

Those looking for exotic footwear have numerous options. Based in Scottsdale, Ariz., Patrick Gibbons (patrickgibbonshandmade.com) makes golf shoes by hand based on a customer's precise needs. Golf shoes can also be found in ostrich skin, alligator, sharkskin and other exotic materials. Try Alligator Jake's (alligatorjakes.com) for handmade alligator golf shoes. Maybe the most expensive golf shoes on the planet come from John Lobb (johnlobb.com), which will custom make shoes through its bespoke program. You'll need to visit Paris for the fitting and the shoes will be ready in about two months.

FJ - Callaway - Etonic - Nike - Dawgs

For the more budget-conscious golfer, there are plenty of excellent shoes available under $70. The FJ Junior Girl Summer Golf Shoe ($60) is stylish and functional, while the robust Callaway Sport ERA is an excellent value at around $50. The Etonic Lite Tech ($50) provides a classic look at a sensible price point. The Nike Range JR ($60) is an excellent entry-level shoe for the junior golfer.

Golf sandals are becoming more popular and many of the leading brands offer a sandal. Try the full range of ultra-lightweight sandals from Dawgs (dawgsgolf.com).

With golf shoes now available in a wide range of styles and materials, here are some factors to consider before buying:

Pay close attention to the materials. Less expensive shoes are made from less expensive materials. More expensive shoes are made from leather and true waterproof materials.

Sizing differs from brand to brand. Ask anyone who works in a shoe store and they will tell you that a size X in Nike differs from the same size in Adidas.

Look at what the pros are wearing for style tips. Some pros are ultra-conservative while others are more outrageous. What's your style?

Understand that water resistant does not mean waterproof. Take a look at the guarantee to see if the manufacturer backs up the word waterproof.

A simple black shoe or a simple white shoe will work well with pretty much any style of clothing.

The good news is that there are ample options available for golfers who are looking for style, functionality or both.

The latest in real estate development across California, Arizona and Nevada

Realty

Lake Las Vegas

By Jenell Fontes

Another Bubble or Road to Recovery?

Only time will tell, but this is definitely a good time to sell

SouthShore at Lake Las Vegas

“With housing inventory at a low, would-be buyers are scrambling to bid on homes even before they’re listed, and real estate agents are vying to represent the few sellers that do exist,” stated a Los Angeles Times article on June 10. Real estate agents in California, Arizona and Nevada echo that assessment and wonder what happened to the inventory.

The short answer is that many of the predictions were based on the number of homeowners in default, on the assumption that many of those homes would go into foreclosure. Default simply means that an owner has stopped paying the mortgage for three months. And once a homeowner is in default, he or she can attain a price modification or a short sale. In the last year, banks have been able to process these short sale and price modification files in a much shorter time, thus providing homeowners with an approved short sale or price modification of their loan. The result is that much of the projected inventory never made it to foreclosure and thus reduced the potential shadow inventory significantly. Housing inventory has sunk to levels not seen since the bubble years. In fact, the number of U.S. homes for sale hit just 2.5 million in April—the lowest number for an April since 2006 according to the National Association of Realtors.

So, what does that mean for the future of real estate? The sharp drop in inventory, along with rock-bottom interest rates, has helped stabilize even some of the hardest-hit markets, including Las Vegas and Phoenix. If you are thinking of selling, now is a great time. And if you’re thinking of buying, there are some wonderful communities and properties to choose from.

NEVADA

SouthShore at Lake Las Vegas

SouthShore is a guard-gated community within Lake Las Vegas Resort, which is set around a privately owned 320-acre lake just 17 miles from the Las Vegas Strip—but a world away. Like many areas, Lake Las Vegas currently finds itself with few homes for sale. “I attribute the low inventory to the high quality of the homes at very sharp pricing,” says Joseph Denofrio, a broker and premier director with Windermere. “Buyers see value in the beautiful surroundings

Bermuda Dunes Country Club

CALIFORNIA

Bermuda Dunes Country Club

Bermuda Dunes Country Club in Bermuda Dunes, Calif., is comprised of several gated communities within the gate-guarded confines of the main club. There are a variety of homes here, from timeshares to condo communities to luxury estates, with prices ranging from the mid $200s to many millions of dollars—all with very low HOA fees. One recent residence for sale was a four-bedroom, three-bath, custom home built in 2002 and listed at $449,000. The spacious open floor plan of 2,927 square feet included an entertainment area overlooking the pool and spa, and the well-appointed kitchen featured granite countertops and lots of cupboard space as well as a separate breakfast area. and the quality of construction and finishes in our resale homes. Whether conventional, bank-owned or short sales, great value always drives sales."

One home recently on the market here: a four-bedroom, four-bath, single-story residence in the gated community of Bella Vivente. The Tuscan-style home with 2,915 square feet of open living space is set on a cobble stone street. Features include an interior courtyard and guest casita. The real, draw, though, is the back yard looking out on SouthShore's golf course. Built in 1999, the property was listed for $467,000 and sold for nearly that price.

The Golf Club at SouthShore has many inviting attributes, not the least of which is the highly regarded Jack Nicklaus signature course. Additional amenities include a seven-acre practice facility as well as clubhouse and dining facilities. The course, which debuted in 1996, stretches 6,917 yards and features 88 bunkers, generous fairways and gently rolling greens. It is a visually stunning layout with numerous forced carries over canyons and water that provide challenge, but five sets of tees also make it accommodating to multiple skill levels.

The 28,000-square-foot Mediterranean-style clubhouse is the heart of the community. It is elegantly appointed throughout and offers panoramic views of the surrounding mountains and the lake. There are a variety of areas suitable for nearly any social event, including both indoor and outdoor banquet facilities, a variety of meeting rooms, a main bar and a large veranda.

sac was lived in by the original owners and exceptionally well cared for.

As for the club, it opened in 1959 and was home to the Bob Hope Classic for 50 years. There's still plenty of challenge to be found on its 27-holes. Depending on the combination, the three separate nines form three different 18-hole courses, and there's a full schedule of tournaments within the club as well as with other clubs in the Valley. Both golf and social memberships are available. Homes here are comfortably set back from the greens, and the mature landscaping and water features provide a stunning backdrop. This club embraces the grand history of golf yet offers reasonable housing prices just minutes away from La Quinta and Palm Desert.

Granite Mountain, Thumb Butte and even San Francisco Peak near Flagstaff. Facilities include a pro shop, driving ranges and putting greens. The main clubhouse serves both courses with a full range of dining available at Manzanita Grille, which also provides banquet services. The newly remodeled Centennial Center on the North Course offers full food and beverage service and a perfect setting for special events.

Actual strength and stabilization of the nation's real estate market will be a result of real recovery in the overall economy. Banks have been less stringent on lending practices, and many lenders are now working with consumers who have their properties listed for short sale after the three-year waiting period. This alone will bring many buyers back to the market. However, time will tell if this pop in the market is the road to recovery or just a minor surge. Meanwhile, the good news is that there is plenty of action in the market, and if you are thinking of selling it's a good time as prices are stabilizing and competition is weak.

This could be our first sign of recovery.

Prescott

"Prescott is located just 100 miles north of Phoenix; this community is a mile-high city with national forest, golf courses and fine dining," notes Sam Dumas, associate broker with Windermere Real Estate Northern Arizona. "Our market conditions feature an improving market with low inventory and low interest rates. The number of homes sold is up 8% YTD and our median sales price is up 5% YTD for single-family homes."

Named among the country's best places to retire, Prescott offers an upscale lifestyle without the upscale prices. Recent homes on the market here include a custom design located on the golf course. It was listed at only $415,000 and featured a circular drive and three-car garage, as well as a 23-foot RV garage.

The fact that Prescott operates the Antelope Hills Golf Courses underscores the city's reputation for providing a luxurious lifestyle at an affordable price. There are two courses. The North Course, which opened in 1958, is 6,778-yard layout demanding accuracy with its small greens and traditional tree-lined fairways. Stretching 7014 yards, the South Course opened for play in 1992 and offers a very different experience with large undulating greens and a wide-open track. Puerto Rico The Enchanted Island

By Timothy J. Pade

If you haven't been to Puerto Rico lately, you haven't been to Puerto Rico

St. Regis Bahia Beach Resort

Located in the northeastern Caribbean not far from the U.S. and British Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico is a Spanish-speaking unincorporated territory of the United States. It consists of the main island and several smaller outposts, including Vieques and Culebra. Rich with Old World heritage and blessed with a verdant, tropical landscape, Puerto Rico—translated as Rich Port and easily living up field included Lee Janzen, David Duval, Kevin Stadler, Boo Weekly, Tim Petrovic, Scott McCarron and Chris Dimarco, to name just a few.

Most of the players and visitors had the good fortune to stay at the Gran Melia Golf Resort, a stunning property along Coco Beach on the island's northeastern coast. The resort has 482 oversized suites, including 96 "Red Level" suites for the high-end traveler. A collection of several

With tropical pools throughout the property and the ocean steps away, there are plenty of ways to enjoy Puerto Rico's tropical splendor. Dining, too, offers a range to suit any taste. Guests can choose from an Asian Bistro serving sashimi and teppanyaki and a café highlighting the best of Caribbean cuisine. There is also Pasion by Chef Myrta with authentic gourmet Puerto Rican dishes, while at Tempo diners enjoy Italian specialties from pasta to robust veal dishes. This property is very affordable for both large and small groups, with rates starting at $200 per night.

For a more exclusive experience, there's Bahia Beach Resort & Golf Club, set on 483 acres just 25 minutes from San Juan's international airport. A highlight is the championship golf course designed by to its name—is also an island with high appeal for golfers. It has old and new resorts and golf-course communities with more than enough amenities to keep players busy on vacation.

From its lush, tropical rain forests to its pristine beaches, historic buildings to chic, contemporary hotels, there's plenty of reason to visit Puerto Rico. Even the island's most ubiquitous indigenous creature, the colorful iguana, helps to make golf here more interesting. Although some players find them annoying, these "mini-dinosaurs" roaming the fairways and links throughout the island add a touch of intrigue and fun to the game. But golf on Puerto Rico these days is also serious business, providing a substantial economic impact and drawing thousands of visitors annually.

The PGA Tour recognizes this Caribbean isle with a stop at the Puerto Rico Open held at the Trump National Golf Club. This great tournament tests the best players in the world. This year's Beach Golf Club is a playground for the luxurious St. Regis Bahia Beach Resort. Famed for its impeccable service and ultrachic accommodations, this resort community embraces an earth-friendly design that includes its own water-treatment plant and eco-system. With jungle out the front door and sweeping oceanfront beaches out the back, this 139-room property has every imaginable amenity, not the least of which are a fitness center and elegant spa. Rates begin at $800 per night; should you be looking for a spectacular setting for a vacation home, lots are available starting in the $350,000 range.

Perhaps the best family option is venerable El Conquistador Resort, a Waldorf Astoria Resort, near El Yunque Rain Forest on the northeast tip of the island. Set atop a 300-foot cliff, this enormous property features a water park, expansive casino and 918 guest rooms and suites in four distinct lodging areas. For the ultimate in relaxation and activity offerings, the resort also has its own island. Just an eight-minute boat ride away, the island is a private retreat where basking in the sun or indulging in every imaginable water sport is top priority. El Conquistador also has a resort-style golf course designed by Arthur Hills. Lodging rates start at $179 per night; family-friendly options include packages with a meal plan incorporated.

Last and certainly not least is Royal Isabela, located within the 1,800-acre Costa Isabela community on Puerto Rico's northwest coast. This world-class private golf club and resort community is the vision of two native Puerto Rican brothers, Charlie and Stanley Pasarell, both former ATP World Tour-ranked tennis players. Charlie Pasarell, a friend and teammate of the late, great Arthur Ashe and a four-time Davis Cup player, is the tournament director of the BNP Paribas Open in Indian Wells, Calif. Stanley spearheaded the growth of the successful family business, Puerto Rico Supplies, a leading distributor of brand-named goods, sold in 2006 to Royal Isabela partner Edwin Perez Hernandez.

Both brothers envisioned an exclusive private resort community to rival any in the world. Royal Isabela is best described as an epic location. The golf course, designed by David Pfaff, is an oceanfront layout with holes that recall Pebble Beach, Ballyunion or even St. Andrews. Those winding along the tops of 200-foot oceanfront cliffs offer what are arguably the most incredible golf-course views in the world. The Pasarells have ensured that every detail is first class. Some visitors have called the links-style course "the Augusta of Puerto Rico," and many deem it the best golf course in the Caribbean. The golf carts utilize solar power produced by Sun Go Power Systems.

El Conquistador Resort //

As for lodging, the fairway villas average a spacious 1,677 square feet of air-conditioned opulence with private swimming pools, exterior patios and golf-cart parking. Fiber-optic cable, hardwood and stone flooring and indoor and outdoor showers are among the luxury touches. The Lodge is an intimate grouping of 20 charming casitas that utilize solar energy for lighting, and is home to La Casa restaurant, the Library Lounge and the Croquet Bar. This master-planned community offers home sites and a country-club atmosphere. It's a truly magical place not to be missed—whether you want an exclusive vacation destination or an intimate world-class club to call home.

Puerto Rico is afforded some of the best year-round weather in the world, and even when the summers grow warm, the rainforest and ocean breezes provide natural cooling. Offering a sublime melding of Old World atmosphere, history and stunning natural beauty, Puerto Rico is a place to explore and enjoy at any time of year. Best of all, there are numerous golf courses and resorts to fit any budget. When it comes to the Caribbean, truly Puerto Rico does it better!

Coachella Valley's Fine Dining

What's new and tasty in the Valley this season

Mastro's Steakhouse

Regular readers of Desert Golf Magazine have long enjoyed our roundups of what's new and happening on the Coachella Valley restaurant scene. But recent months have brought with them an especially high level of movement and excitement in Valley dining, so we offer an extended recap in this issue for those of you who weren't in the area this summer or who otherwise missed our ongoing culinary updates.

Though the restaurant spotlight shone across the Valley throughout late spring and summer, it may have glowed brightest in Palm Desert, and fall is no different. In November comes the highly anticipated opening of Mastro's Steakhouse (73-405 El Paseo), the fifth California locale for Mastro's, which also has restaurants in Thousand Oaks, Costa Mesa, Newport Beach and Beverly Hills.

"We feel like the timing is right. We wanted to open a couple of years ago, but it wasn't the right economic time," says Jason Miranda, senior vice president of operations for Mastro's Restaurants. "Now, we feel that everything's coming back and just want to put our best foot forward in the Coachella Valley and stand out from our competition with our service, ambience and quality of food."

The new Mastro's will be open year-round in a state-of-the-art space, its fine-dining menu perfectly matched with an award-winning wine list and signature cocktails, including the Dry Ice Martini. "The ambience of our bar is a big thing that sets us apart from other steakhouses,"

Miranda notes. "We have high-energy, live entertainment and we've been to a lot of places around the area and feel there's no place that really brings the level of energy that we want to bring."

Miranda added that the Coachella Valley is a perfect fit for Mastro's for many reasons. "We have pretty good brand recognition in Southern California," he says. "Logistically, we also have locations in Scottsdale and Vegas, so [the Palm Desert] location will be right in the middle of a triangle, [making this] community a great place for us to be."

In neighboring Rancho Mirage, pizza popularity flowed with aplomb at The River, where Michael's Pizzeria (71-800 Highway 111) got cooking in July. The restaurant's authentic, Neapolitan-style pies are cooked fast and fresh in a wood oven that adds sensational flavor and crispness. Newcomers should also note the menu isn't limited to pizzas alone; the antipasto, entrees and desserts are all worthy of sampling. And for those who have yet to visit Rancho's Catalan Restaurant (70-025 Highway 111), the Mediterranean and Spanish cuisine is not to be missed. Since its late spring opening, Catalan has gained a fine reputation for offering one of the area's freshest menus, coupled with a nice variety of seasonal specialties.

Early this summer, Palm Desert pasta lovers welcomed the opening of Mimmo's Italian Restaurant & Bar (73-540 Highway 111, Suite 4) where sauces, dressings and breads made in-house daily show exactly why desert restaurant veteran Mimmo Di Salvo has legions of fans. He will also soon have more competition when it comes to Italian fare in town. News broke in June that a new Wolfgang Puck Pizza Bar will debut on El Paseo, though an opening date has yet to be specified. More defined on Palm Desert's swanky strip was the move to a larger space for Clementine Gourmet Marketplace & Café (72-990 El Paseo), which now offers an expanded selection of dine-in or takeout European selections. And lastly in Palm Desert, a popular chain restaurant joined the independent eateries in July, and from the moment it opened, Red Lobster (72-291 Highway 111) reportedly had eager patrons lining up at lunchtime to tuck into the affordably priced seafood.

In Palm Springs, the long-awaited debut of Workshop Kitchen + Bar (800 N. Palm Canyon Drive) looks to finally be here. The Valley has been abuzz about Workshop for all of 2012, and diners will now have the opportunity to experience the sleek setting, farm-to-table menu and creative cocktail offerings that should prove a major draw for locals and visitors alike. If you find yourself strolling along South Palm Canyon Drive, check out The Atomic Dog (116 La Plaza), which opened in August.

It's Electric!

Two automobile manufacturers, two exceptional cars

Tesla Signature S and Chevy Volt

Reducing your carbon footprint is all the rage these days. But being environmentally conscious doesn't have to mean leaving your automotive scruples at the door. The Tesla Model S and the Chevy Volt, while two very different automobiles, give you the opportunity to explore an electrifying driving experience.

Tesla came on the scene in 2003 with an all-electric roadster that quickly became the envy of anyone who desired speed and had a penchant for the unique. Tesla showed the auto world that electric didn't have to mean boring or slow.

The display of ingenuity created a demand for something a little more practical, and out of that demand was born the Model S. On the practical side, the Model S seats four and has a battery life that delivers quality range—300 miles on one charge says Tesla of the loaded version of the S.

But it's not just about practicality. The interior's wood-looking panels are made from banana leaves harvested from the forest floor after they've fallen from the tree, while the leather is plush to say the least. And technology is integrated exquisitely, exactly what you'd expect from a group of Silicon Valley designers. The touch-screen control panel is the nerve center of the vehicle, giving access to everything but the Starship Enterprise.

The interior isn't roomy but it isn't cramped, either. The floor is flat—some say giving the S the appearance of a minivan—and it's slightly raised in order to provide room for the massive battery carrier underneath. Taller passengers will make friends with the headliner, but it's not unusually low.

Tesla Model S interior

On the outside, you'd swear you are looking at a Jaguar XF. On the inside, you'd think Apple has gotten into the car business. A blend of sleek and funky makes the Model S not only interesting but fun, and knowing that you aren't burning an ounce of fuel when you make your morning commute is almost religious. In all of this, don't miss the fact that Tesla loves power. Its brand of electric car has guts.

The Model S has 362 horsepower and 306 lb-ft of torque. That translates to G forces in the turn and slamming you back in your seat on the takeoff. In just 5.6 seconds, the Model S is doing 60 miles per hour. The fun comes from the fact that the electric motor stays in the power band all the time. There is no letdown in torque like you experience from a gas transmission.

The Model S has a very low center of gravity as well. This gives you a decidedly sporty sense of handling. The weight of the battery sits beneath the vehicle frame instead of in the hood of the car like most gas engines. Taking turns is exhilarating and you notice that there is nearly no body roll as you might expect in a larger car.

Tesla expects to produce only 5,000 of the S. You can choose from four trim packages that provide varying battery range and interior features, and the price ranges from $49,900 to $97,900.

On the less exotic side of the electric super highway, the Chevy Volt comes with a gas and electric motor. While the interior and horsepower are pedestrian, the fun is exceptional. In spite of a motor with just 149 horsepower, the torque of the electric gives it the kick of a Rockette.

The range on the Volt's electric motor is around 40 miles, depending on how you drive it. When the battery is depleted, the gas motor comes to life and takes over, which ensures you're never stranded without a long enough extension cord to reach a plug through your office window. Honestly, most of you don't drive 40 miles in a day anyway, so you can go almost anywhere you need to on the Volt's nightly charge.

Chevy Volt

You may have a state tax credit for buying a low-emissions vehicle, making the price of the car easier to swallow. California gives up to $7500 in credits depending on the make and model.

The interior of the Volt is what you'd expect from Chevy. Everything works without being obtrusive or clunky. With just a slight learning curve, you'll be navigating all the onboard features like Captain Kirk. The ride of the Volt is surprisingly sporty. Jaunts around the city feel like you're in a much smaller car due to the tight handling and acceleration.

Any negative reviews about the Volt seem unwarranted in this writer's opinion. The Volt has all the range of a gas-powered vehicle while still giving you the benefits of a robust electric motor. With some forethought, most drivers will charge their Volt often enough to get the range they need for the daily drive—and in doing so, embrace the electric revolution!

The Olympic Spirit lives on in Fall Fashions

Winning styles for men and women

Ralph Lauren
Big Pony Polo

Ralph Lauren
RXL Drive 3L Jacket

Ralph Lauren
Team USA Piqué
Duofold Short

Bold, bright colors dominated the beginning of summer with powerful pinks worn by Bubba Watson and vibrant, tantalizing oranges worn by Ricky Fowler. But that was before the Olympics.

This fall, the Olympic spirit lives on with color palettes of red, white and blue. Ralph Lauren created quite the controversy outfitting Team USA with clothes made in China; however, that hasn't stopped his Olympic collection from flying off the shelves around the world.

For the men, Lauren's RLX Drive 3L Jacket is an ideal all weather garment. Priced at $395 and available in classic navy, this sporty, raglan-sleeved jacket wicks moisture away from the body. Additional protection comes from water-resistant zipped closures that keep moisture out. A contrasting red chest zipper adds to the patriotic look, while the front ventilating panel keeps air moving. To complete the outfit and guarantee all-day weather protection, add the matching RLX Drive Moisture-Wicking Pant, priced at $298.

Should the days warm up, consider the Team USA Piqué Duofold Short. This athletic-style short is crafted in breathable cotton mesh with a signature patch in navy or white, priced at $98. Top it off with a custom Big Pony Polo in white, red or navy adorned with sporty numerals, patches, city text and a flag at the back, priced at $145. All four pieces come in sizes S-XXL.

For the ladies, the navy London Jersey Leggings might be a tad tight for the golf course, but at the club for lunch or even out for a casual dinner, they're bound to draw welcomed attention. Style highlights include an elasticized waistband for pull-on ease and nicely tapered legs sporting an interior mesh key pocket. These go-anywhere leggings are made of an easy-care cotton fabric and priced at $125. Top off the legging look with a versatile full-zip front Terry Tunic Hoodie for $165. This smooth, French terry cloth hoodie has a cozy feel, attached drawstring hood, waffle-knit lining and a flattering, long silhouette. Sizes range from XS-XL. The entire Ralph Lauren Olympic Collection can be found at ralphlauren.com

Keeping with the damp British weather, it was Adam Scott who stole the gold in fashion at this year's British Open. Catching the eye of men and women, Scott's Aquascutum sweaters worn in rounds two and three had the gallery vying to see the label. Both sweaters sported a solid-grey quarter zip with signature plaid on the elbows, and a grey, red and white argyle pattern on the front. The elongated stand-up collar folds over slightly at the tips when unzipped. Founded in 1851, Aquascutum is based in the United Kingdom and is known for its introduction of waterproof wool, as well as for fine craftsmanship, luxurious tailoring and attention to detail. aquascutum.com

If looking like a champion doesn't make you feel good, then find the colors that do. A trend in golf apparel is based around color. "Color is something that can make some golfers happy and allows them to bring a piece of themselves out in their equipment," says Tom Preece, vice president of research and development with Cobra Golf. "This positive impact could lead to better play—and even more fun on the course."

So remember: Looking good can make a person feel better and ultimately even play better! The scientific data may still be out on this, but why not look good while attempting a career round.

The Olympic Factor in Jewelry

The most ubiquitous symbol of the Olympics appears in fashion-forward jewelry, too

Ryan English Collection

Just as the summer Olympic games dictated much of the color in this year's fall fashions, they also had an impact on jewelry. Think back; other than a few stud earrings here and there, jewelry was nonexistent among the athletes—until the first flag was raised. Then the jewelry of choice became those large, round medallions in bronze, silver and gold hanging from bright purple ribbons.

Large, bold statement pieces continue to reign this fall, but with a few caveats. "Wear only one daring or chunky piece," recommends custom jewelry designer Ryan English. "Downplay the rest of your jewelry choices, meaning if you wear an enormous necklace, pair it with small earrings and a simple bracelet. Don't overstate the statement!"

For some, these challenging economic times aren't quite over, but that shouldn't be a barrier to staying fashionable. English piece as "Circles on water. Water is the river of life," he states. "Everything contains moisture and nothing can flourish without fluids. When water is touched, it spreads in circles that become wider and wider (hence the circular design that wraps around the wrist). It is gentle and gives pleasure but can also be fierce." Pianegonda is expressing in the BAVE1116 that your influence spreads around you in all directions, like circles. This circular beauty is priced at $1,295 in the designer's online boutique at francopianegonda.net/en, and for those love instant gratification, Leeds and Son in Palm Desert has the piece ready for you to wear out the door.

One surprise trend this fall: collars. Yes, collars, such as those on shirts and blouses, now being made as jewelry. Available in a variety of designs, they are an instant outfit rejuvenator, able to make last year's clothing look hot-off-the-runway new. Look for them worn as

BAVE1116 by Franco Pianegonda

Roberto Coin
Palm Desert

notes that an easy way to achieve the chunky look without buying more is simply to wear multiple pieces. Wear four bangles instead of two and two necklaces instead of one. In other words, be creative. English recently designed "companion pieces," with one shorter, more predominant necklace paired with a matching longer version. Priced from $85 to $300, you can find the Ryan English Collection at etsy.com/shop/ryanenglishdesign

Gemstones are taking on an edge of their own this fall with more of a raw, jagged look rather than traditional perfect cuts. Pieces with fewer but larger stones are creating a chunky look that is also refined, especially when paired with yellow or white gold. Quartz, tourmaline, agate and many beautiful semi-precious stones that may not be as well known as their more expensive counterparts are also finding their way into designer pieces, creating the popular chunky look with a lower price point.

It's not just about the neckline. Bracelets, too, are making a statement this fall, and none more so than designs from Franco Pianegonda, such as the BAVE1116. Pianegonda describes the a necklace with pearls, metals, sparkles and studs. Retailers from Anthropologie and Echo to Dannijo are featuring collars in their collections, with prices ranging from $32 at Echo to $1,715 for pieces from Delfina Delettrez.

Of course we can't forget the ring, and when it comes to making a statement on your hand, these focus pieces simply cannot have too much sparkle. A large, edgy gemstone set in gold or silver is the quintessential standout. And put the butterfly ring back in your jewelry box for spring. For a variety of custom fashion forward rings in all price ranges, visit Roberto Coin Palm Desert on El Paseo.

Whichever design you choose as your head-turning statement piece, remember the rule: Wear just one big and bold element complimented by smaller, more refined accessories. Just as important, remember that jewelry, like fashion, is about you, so wear what you love and make statement all yours!
